SAN SIMEON, Cal., Jan. 19.—Green level pastures, and green rolling hills along this Pacific coast, would delight any farmer on earth just now. Within a short time about twenty-four inches of rain has fallen, and the white faced Hereford cattle, ten thousand of them, scattered over pastures on this ranch, stand in fresh grown grass well above their hoofs.

RAIN IS GOLD along this coast, and there has never been a season better than this for grass, alfalfa, wild oats and other cattle crops.

And this year, the national supply of beef cattle, diminished by eighteen million head, thanks to the government, yield a good profit to cattlemen.

On all this round globe, there exists no such paradise of earth, air, sunlight and sea as this western coast of the United States. It really would be worthwhile to have a few airplanes and submarines to protect it.

In one single harbor, at Vladivostok, with the coast of Japan only four hundred and fifty miles away, Russia has nine hundred powerful airplanes, and a big fleet of submarines. And now you hear no more talk of a Russian-Japanese war.

Are we poorer than Russia, or only less intelligent?

DETAILS OF THE president's plan to make times better and STAY better are revealed.

The payroll tax that will gradually increase to five and a half per cent, will cost the national government this year one hundred million dollars, two hundred million in succeeding years. Seventy-five millions will come from the states this year, one hundred and fifty millions in later years.

JACKSON DEFEATS BOND ISSUE PLAN

Municipal Power Plant Proposal Loses By 3,888-3,098 Vote

JACKSON, Miss., Jan. 19.—(AP)—Jackson voted down a proposal for municipal ownership of an electric power plan and a possible hookup with the Tennessee Valley authority at an election here today on a proposed $1,500,000 bond issue to finance the project.

Complete unofficial returns from the city's 21 precincts showed the bond issue had been voted down 3,888 to 3,098. Interest in the question, intense factionalism aroused and fair weather combined to bring out one of the heaviest city votes in recent years.

The result sent Mayor Walter A. Scott of Jackson, who led the fight for the issue and TVA power, down to his first political defeat in 20 years.

The Mississippi Power and Light company which took up the gauntlet thrown down by the mayor and the city commission after a breakdown of negotiations for lower rates, fought vigorously to defeat the issue.

In exchange for rejection of municipal ownership, the company offered to put into effect, retroactive as of December 25, a compromise schedule of reduced electric rates previously rejected by the commission and also immediate substitution of a new bus system and a five-cent fare for the present outworn street car system and a seven-cent fare.

The power company claimed its offer would mean an annual savings to Jackson citizens of approximately $184,000.

There is a court fight in prospect, however, over a rate-reducing ordinance ordered into effect by the commission when it called the bond election after negotiations between the power company and the city commission.

NEW CHARGES FILED IN TRAPPERS FIGHT

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Fresh charges were filed today against 20 rival trappers in the trappers war in St. Bernard and Plaquemines parishes and federal officers reported that a threatening situation appeared to have quieted somewhat on 90,000 acres of contested lands.

An army of federal deputies coursed through the bayou streams of the marsh lands to serve the warrants which they said might require several days—due to the remoteness of the section.

The trappers are charged with conspiracy to interfere with federal officers in performance of their duties in connection with the overturning of camps of trappers of the Violet Trapping company which is operating on the land under rights granted by the federal sequestrator, Dr. Roy O. Young.

CONGRESS CHIEFS APPEAR WILLING TO SPEED BONUS

Leaders Are Heading Into First Week Of Rapid Fire Action

NO LAWS YET PASSED

Patman Bill's Backers To Push Plan Over Proposal Of Legion

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Heading into their first week of real rapid fire action, congressional leaders today gave signs of a willingness to speed up the bonus and prepared for six days of hard work on social security legislation, war profits, a $4,880,000,000 public works bill and lesser odds and ends.

The 74th congress had been in session since January 3 without putting a single piece of new legislation on the statute books, and signs were that not even the coming week would see final enactment of anything of major importance.

Advocates of the Patman $2,100,000,000 bonus bill meanwhile decided at a meeting today to use every means possible to expedite that measure in preference to the American Legion bill. The former would pay the bill by printing new money, the latter by whatever means congress thought best.

Speaker Byrns met the Patman group demand with a reply that he thought it would be "a happy idea" for the ways and means committee to use spare time, if any, to report out "a" bonus bill so it could be voted up or down promptly.

Patman said that if the measure was not brought to the floor soon,

TRAFFIC BUREAU PROGRAM TALKED

Serious Transportation Situation Confronts Local Business

Members of the Monroe traffic bureau, attending a meeting held in the bureau headquarters in the Bloch building discussed "a grave situation confronting the business interests of Monroe," growing out of a possible disruption of transportation rates in this area. It was pointed out that "only widespread cooperation of all the commercial, industrial and business interests of Monroe in support of an active traffic bureau program will prevent disaster."

The "disaster" referred to is the possibility that operations of wholesale commodity houses in this city may be so restricted by discriminatory rates that most of them would have to move to other locations or confine their activities to an area of 25 miles radius around the city.

"Such an eventuality," it was stated by Leon Sugar, one of the members, "would affect the whole business life of the city. It would mean that hundreds of persons will be thrown out of employment or be lost to the city entirely by moving to other communities."

The cure for the difficulty, it was stated, would be an expansion of the work of the traffic bureau, so that the rate problems could be adequately taken care of. This could only be done by a greatly enlarged membership, embracing all lines of business and industry in the city.

"The traffic bureau," it was said by Clifford Strauss, chairman of the executive committee, "is one of the most essential factors in a healthy business situation, because it is

WINTER CONTINUES TO GRIP NORTHWEST

(By Associated Press)

Merciless winter drove a sharp salient down the frozen Yukon Saturday, bringing the menace of frost to California, new blizzards to the snow-bound Cascades snow as far south as Texas and bitter sub-zero temperatures far across the states.

The mercury dove out of sight to 57 below zero at Endako, B. C., and found new low points for the winter in the region of the Dakotas.

Almost a score persons were dead or missing in the storm that raged down the coast from Alaska to California. Countless others were killed or injured in rail and highway accidents caused by severe cold, ice and snow.

Seattle shivered in temperatures around 10 above zero, coldest in 41 years. It was 14 above at Tacoma, and street traffic was crippled. The Cascades lay 12 feet deep in snow, and more was forecast last night for Oregon, Washington and Idaho.

3 New Traffic Lights Are Installed In City

City electricians were busy Saturday installing new traffic lights at three street intersections in Monroe, on all of which traffic is heavy. Intersections at which the lights were installed were those at Sixth and Washington, Second and Washington and Grand and Grammont streets.

Ladders, Letters And Lucre Become Crux Of State Case Against Bruno Hauptmann

SUPREME JUDGES MAY MAKE GOLD DECISION MONDAY

(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Nine high justices of the supreme court, although guarding their secret closely, left surface signs after a protracted conference today that they had reached a decision in the historic "gold clause" cases.

In the purely physical actions of the court trained observers saw hints of the possibility of another of the famous 5-4 decisions. The justices themselves were silent as always. But of the six who remained closeted together after the conference broke up, five have been labeled as "progressives."

If their actions today were significant, and if the "progressives" follow lines to which they often have hewed in the past, some observers held it possible that the court might divide 5 to 4 for sustaining the validity of the act suspending gold payments.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—(AP)—With outward aimlessness, nine elderly gentlemen, learned in the law, wandered into an austerly furnished capitol room today to sit in judgment upon the most important governmental question to arise in decades.

At issue was the constitutionality of a vital phase of the Roosevelt monetary program, with, the New Dealers had told them, "chaos" or order depending upon their verdict. The nine were the members of the supreme court of the United States.

Whether they reached a final decision today was not disclosed, but if so there was a possibility that it might be announced on Monday, with the written opinion to be prepared

750 MAY ATTEND BIRTHDAY BALL

Keenan Not Fazed By Likelihood Of Huge Crowd At Dance

Intimations of a possibility that 750 tickets would be sold for the president's birthday ball on January 30 didn't faze Leo Keenan president of the Virginia, a bit.

"Fine!" he said "We can divide the crowd, and Mires Jackson can take half of them to Hotel Frances and we'll take the other half. We'll open the big ballroom and, if necessary, let them dance in the lobby. The bigger the crowd the better, so long as it's for the president and the Junior Charity league."

Mrs. Prioleau Ellis, chairman of the campaign committee of the Junior League, said Saturday that the sale of tickets so far was most encouraging and assured a substantial sum for the relief of afflicted children. The larger share of the proceeds will go to the funds of the Junior League and the balance will go to Henry L. Doherty, chairman of the national committee to be used in the nation-wide fight against infantile paralysis.

The downtown sale of tickets will be maintained at the Chamber of Commerce rooms in Hotel Virginia, where workers may obtain them, as well as individual purchasers. Another drive in the business section of the city will be held on Wednesday, Dec. 30, the day of the ball.

TENANT PROBLEM IS BEING PROBED

JONESBORO, Ark., Jan. 19.—(AP)—Arrest of a federal relief worker on charges of inflamatory activity and a government inquiry into the handling of cotton acreage contracts today turned fresh spotlights on eastern Arkansas sharecropper problems described by state officials as dating from the end of the Civil war.

Mrs. Mary Connor Myers, agricultural adjustment administration attorney, who is special assistant to the attorney general had a hand in the Al Capone income tax case, disclosed at Memphis that she had been sent into the area to make an investigation of the contracts.

She said that the Southern Tenant Farmers union—sharecropper organization, active in eastern Arkansas—had complained to Secretary Wallace that "scores of tenants" were being evicted from cotton contract land in alleged violation of the government crop control agreements.

Mrs. Myers came to eastern Arkansas following the arrest of Ward H. Rodgers, 24-year-old Vanderbilt university graduate and federal emergency relief administration school teacher, who was charged with inciting a meeting of tenants at Marked Tree, near here.

German Defendant Studies Copies Of His Brokerage Accounts

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 19.—(AP)—Ladders, letters and lucre became the crux tonight of the state's case against Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

The ladder, thus far excluded as evidence but promised as an exhibit before the trial is over, is that on which the state contends the kidnaper of the Lindbergh baby descended with the child. Hauptmann, the state will attempt to prove, made it.

The letters are the series of ransom notes. Experts have testified that Hauptmann wrote them.

The lucre represents the sudden wealth which, the state says, Hauptmann displayed shortly after a $50,000 ransom was paid to a mysterious "John" by Dr. John F. Condon, acting for Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. Condon and Col. Lindbergh say that "John" is Hauptmann.

The prisoner sat tonight in his cell, always under the eyes of guards, and studied photostatic copies of his own brokerage accounts—the accounts by which the state hopes to prove that Hauptmann came into possession of his unexplained wealth immediately after the ransom was paid.

Defense attorneys had planned to study the accounts today, but instead of going to Trenton where the accounts are being held, Chief Defense Counsel Edward J. Reilly obtained copies of the accounts and sent them to Hauptmann.

The prisoner is expected to familiarize himself with every phase of his transactions and thus be prepared to advise his counsel when the

Flying Aces To Stage Aerial Show At Selman Field Today

One of the best aerial circuses ever witnessed in Monroe is to be presented this afternoon, beginning at 2:30 o'clock, when the famous Flying Aces, consisting of 15 crack pilots and performers, will perform at Selman airport. The aerial daredevils promise to thrill the crowds with spectacular feats and hazardous stunts.

At 1 o'clock the planes of the Flying Aces will roar over Monroe in a sweeping salute to the opening of the show and as they speed over the city they will release long serpentine streamers in a mock bombing raid.

All residents of Monroe and the surrounding territory have been invited to attend the daring air circus, which will be presented here under the auspices of the American Legion. The 15 fliers were assembled by Ed Sherard and Jimmie Woods in what is said to be the biggest show of its kind in existence. This group will give a two-hour demonstration of spectacular flying and daring stunt performances.

Fifteen daring acts, many of them never before shown here, are listed on the two-hour program which is arranged in such a way that there are no "dead" spots, with all acts following each other in quick succession. No passenger hauling will be permitted during the show.

Tickets, in the form of windshield stickers, each admitting an entire automobile load of spectators, have been placed on sale at all leading drug stores, leading hotels, Central and Circle S service stations and Frenchie's cafes Nos. 1 and 2. Those buying advance carload stickers will save money and will also be allowed to take the fast traffic lane, without being stopped, Legion officials said.

The show proper will begin at 2:30 and will be preceded by one hour of formation flying and special exhibitions for the benefit of early comers. Gates will open at noon.

FOUR MEN SLAIN AND 8 ARRESTED IN GUN BATTLES

MURDER SUSPECTS DIE

Deadly Outbreaks Shatter Calm Along New York Crime Front

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Three violent encounters between police and gunmen within a 24-hour period tonight had brought death to four men and the arrest of eight others.

The casualty list included a policeman, an innocent taxicab driver and two murder suspects.

Under arrest were four youths accused of slaying the policeman, an elderly man suspected of being their "Fagin," and three young men whose alleged attempt to hold up a drug store led to the killing of the taxi driver.

Another policeman was shot and seriously wounded during an argument with a fellow officer, who then committed suicide.

The lethal outbreaks, which shattered months of comparative calm along New York's crime front, followed closely on the bloodless capture of four members of the notorious "tri-state gang."

Virginia death warrants await Robert Mais and Walter Legenza, leaders of this gang which is accused of murder, robbery and kidnap plotting.

The shootings began last night when four youths, attempting to hold up a Fifth avenue luggage shop, engaged in a pistol duel with two policemen.

Patrolman James M. J. Killian, father of two small children, was fatally wounded before the quartette was captured.

In the lineup today they identified themselves as Ray Orley, 20, Thomas Rooney, 22, and Amerigo Angelini, 22, of New York, and Newman Raymond, 22, of Alexandria, Va.

Orley was identified by four recent holdup victims, and police said all but Raymond had participated in more than a dozen other robberies. They said it was Raymond's first "job."

Appearing in the lineup with them was Nelson B. Clark, 62, who said he kept house for them and who was charged with possession of a stolen gold watch.

"His is the responsibility for the plight of these boys who are on their way to the electric chair," said Acting Capt. Daniel Curtayne, pointing to Clark.

Shortly after the Fifth avenue shooting, William Gibbons, 21, John Dolan, 18, and Albert Ryan were captured after a running gun fight with police, who charged them with attempting

THREE MAD DOGS SLAIN BY POLICE

Three mad dogs known to have bitten three persons and between 20 and 30 other dogs were killed by West Monroe police within the past three days, the last of the dogs being shot at 2 a.m. Saturday. Twenty-five stray dogs having no vaccination tags were killed Friday and Saturday.

A local veterinarian inspected one of the slain dogs and said it suffered from rabies, and the head of another was sent to New Orleans for examination.

The killing of the three mad dogs brought to light a unique type of counterfeiting when it was discovered that one of the dogs was wearing attached to his collar beneath his neck a metal disc which from a distance of a few feet would be mistaken for a vaccination tag.

Since last June, the department has killed approximately 350 dogs. A .22 caliber rifle is used, principally, in the extermination.

Slightly more than 200 vaccination certificates for dogs have been registered with the city clerk since June.

Nazi Foes Advised To Leave Saar Until Feeling Abates

SAARBRUECKEN, Saar Basin Territory, Jan. 19.—(AP)—A virtual Nazi "revolution" in the Saar, effecting changes similar in many respects to the January, 1933, upheaval in Germany proper, tonight saw the Basin's League of Nations government almost completely effaced.

So completely were Adolf Hitler's adherents in the saddle this sixth day after the smashing Nazi victory in the Saar plebiscite, that Socialists were frankly advising anti-Nazis to get out of the territory "until things blow over."

Although actual violence was conspicuous by its absence and reports that anti-Nazis were physically ill-treated, when tracked down, turned out to be founded on fear rather than fact, the Hitlerite forces nevertheless had seized entire control of the Basin's governing machinery.

Public officials who backed the losing "status quo" cause were ousted and anti-Nazi laborers claimed they also had been "victimized," losing their jobs to those who voted for Germany.

Amid reports that Hitler's opponents had been threatened by neighbors of business rivals, the Socialists told the men in their ranks they would be wise to leave for the present.

Women and children were told they might safely remain, however, since feeling in the Basin appeared to be directly at the men.

"Every report of attacks I have investigated," an American plebiscite official said today, "has proved false."

The official, stationed in the heart of the mining district which furnishes the bulk of the daily crops of terrorist stories, said he had received frequent appeals from frightened anti-Nazis but found nothing.

Behind the Nazis as they set about clearing out their opponents was the tremendous power of the more than 90 per cent pro-German vote registered in Sunday's plebiscite.

It enabled them to hoist the swastika banner everywhere, without fear of reproach, and to apply the spoils system unmercifully with the applause of the overwhelming majority.

340 East Baton Rouge Men Are Organized Into Shock Troops To Fight Huey Long

SQUARE DEALERS EXPECT TO REACH THEIR GOAL SOON

Are Convinced Purpose Can Be Accomplished In Short Time

BATON ROUGE, Jan. 19.—(Staff Special.)—Officers of the Square Deal association, which in a few days has grown with incredible swiftness, believe that it will be short-lived. They are convinced that the purpose of the association, which is to end dictatorship in Louisiana, will be accomplished before many months have elapsed. While they do not talk in terms of state campaigns, holding the organization distinctly aloof from politics, they feel that ere another gubernatorial election rolls around, constitutional government will have been restored to the people of the state.

To some this may seem to be an irridescent dream. To the officials of the Square Deal association it is as certain as the movement of the stars. With admirable steadfastness of purpose, they are preparing to execute the plans of the organization, relieve Louisiana of a system that has stunted its industrial growth, and then disband.

There is one fact which cannot be denied. The Square Deal association seems to have galvanized the public conscience in Louisiana as nothing else was able to accomplish. Its membership is increasing by leaps and bounds. Letters of endorsement and tenders of support pile up so fast at the association headquarters here, a force of busy stenographers is unable to keep up with them. On two days over three thousand letters were received from New Orleans alone.

"We counted up to 3,000 and quit," said one member of the executive committee. "How much the aggregate went beyond that I do not know."

Usually, in cases of this kind, moral support is given only by those who endorse the movement. But, not so with the Square Deal association.

FARMER KILLED AS CARS CRASH

John Lee Youngblood Of Near Farmerville Is Victim Of Mishap

FARMERVILLE, La., Jan. 19.—(Special)—John Lee Youngblood, 28, farmer living eight miles west of Farmerville, was instantly killed shortly after 7 o'clock Saturday night when his automobile collided with another car driven by Tom Hamilton about a mile and a half out of Farmerville on the Farmerville-Bernice highway. It was said that the impact threw Mr. Youngblood from his car and that his neck was broken when he struck the pavement.

Immediately following the accident Mr. Youngblood's car was destroyed by fire, believed to have been started when gasoline which spilled when the crash occurred ignited. The Hamilton car was badly damaged.

Six persons were riding in the Hamilton automobile, but only two of them were injured, Alton Hamilton, 17, and Miss Gordie Hamilton, about 24, receiving cuts on their faces and shoulders.

An inquest was conducted by Dr. G. A. Ramsey, parish coroner, who returned a verdict of accidental death. Those in the Hamilton automobile said that Mr. Youngblood was driving without lights and that they did not see his car until the accident occurred.

Mr. Youngblood is survived by his widow, one child, his father and several brothers and sisters. Funeral arrangements had not yet been completed.

OFFICE RETAINED BY GOV. MOODIE

BISMARCK, N. D., Jan. 19.—(AP)—Disdaining any but peaceful means, Governor Thomas H. Moodie today retained possession of his office in a tense political situation precipitated by his impeachment yesterday in the North Dakota house of representatives.

Ordering withdrawn two national guardsmen who had been on watch against possible attempts to remove him, Moodie declined to give up his office to Lieut. Gov. Walter H. Welford until the situation was clarified. He said he contemplated legal action.

Opinions differed whether his suspension—provided in the case of impeached officers until their cases are decided by the senate—would take effect immediately. Attorney General P. O. Sathre, affiliated with the nonpartisan league group which sponsored the impeachment, advised the governor yesterday's action was incomplete.

This opinion led to rumors, quickly denied by leaders, that impeachment of Sathre was planned.

ROGERS HAS HIS SAY

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 19. (Special)—It had been bad flying weather and I had to be in Indianapolis for a hospital benefit Friday night. It seemed like good old times to be back on a train. Fine train, fine service, railroads are recovering. Then an accident at one of those grade crossings which really seemed to be the fault of no one. In giving people work, that eliminating of grade crossings looks like it would be a great thing for the worker and for the lives saved. Old Indiana, the home of politics, is coming through great. They are getting by without any new taxation.

Any news from the supreme court?

Will Rogers.

DORMITORY RAZED BY FIERCE BLAZE

Gorgas Hall At University Of Alabama Is Quickly Consumed

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Jan. 19.—(AP)—Seventy-five men students at the University of Alabama dashed from their rooms in Gorgas hall this afternoon and watched most of their belongings go up in smoke as flames rapidly destroyed the building.

Fanned by a high wind, the fire completed its work with amazing rapidity, and Tuscaloosa firemen, seeing the building was doomed, devoted most of their efforts to preventing a spread of the flames to a fraternity house nearby.

Dick Lavier, Ogdensburg, N. Y., a junior in the college of engineering, was overcome by smoke and burned slightly when he rushed back into the blazing structure in an effort to save his books and clothing.

Virtually nothing was saved from the building. Less than an hour after the first alarm nothing remained but the brick walls.

Spectators were kept away from the ruins of the building as firemen debated whether to pull the walls down to prevent possible injury from their collapse.

As news of the fire spread, midterm examinations were hastily adjourned and students dashed out to see the red brick structure, completed in 1921, a pillar of fire and smoke.

Flames burst from the windows on the third floor before firemen arrived, and sparks, borne by the wind, fell on roofs of nearby buildings.

BANKHEAD TO BACK CONTROL MEASURE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Intent on removing the over-supply of cotton, Senator Bankhead, Democrat, Alabama, announced today that, with administration backing, he will offer a bill to continue compulsory cotton production control in 1936.

President Roosevelt's policy, Bankhead said, was "to go along with this program until we get the surplus below 5,000,000 bales." The carryover as of next August has been estimated at 8,500,000 bales.

The Alabaman expects his new bill to conform closely to the Bankhead measure in effect last year and approved by farmers for continuance during 1935.

"We cannot afford to take a backward step in the program for reducing the carryover," said Bankhead, "and we cannot permit, if it is possible to avoid it, the reduction in the purchasing power of the great mass of cotton farmers."

Three Machine Gunmen Hunted In Arkansas

OZARK, Ark., Jan. 19.—(AP)—In headlong flight after a brief foray into this Arkansas hill section, three machine gunmen, two of them believed members of a band of four "pretty sick men" who on January 14 escaped the Oklahoma penitentiary, were the quarry tonight in a hunt extending to Coffeyville, Kas.

Sheriff Champ Crawford of Franklin county late today said A. S. Kline, special railroad agent, had advised him from Coffeyville that the trio was seen there today, after releasing Mr. and Mrs. Tom Lewis of Alix, near Van Buren, Ark., this morning.

"Two of them were identified as escaped convicts from Oklahoma," Sheriff Crawford said. "We have no clues, however, as to which of the four escaped convicts they are, and we don't know who the other one, the youngest, is."

Citizens Are Formed Into Military Units; No Drill Is Held

BOURGEOIS IN CHARGE

Meeting Is Devoted Only To Lining Up Officers, Personnel

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 19.—(AP)—Marshalled in military formation under a billowing American flag, 340 East Baton Rouge parish citizens were organized late today into the headquarters "shock troop battalion" of the Square Deal association of Louisiana which is challenging Senator Huey P. Long's dictatorship.

Assembling in a row of "companies" at the notes of a bugle call, citizens of varying classes—mechanics, laborers and well-dressed business men—fell into battalion line at the parish airport to form the Square Deal association's central "manpower" unit.

There was no actual drill or military maneuvering. There were no guns carried. But the elements of military organization and appearance were closely followed.

Officers of the unit, designated the "East Baton Rouge Headquarters Battalion" of the citizens organization which has declared for a course of "direct action" as result of Gov. O. K. Allen's having flaunted its demand for immediate repeal of dictator laws, were chosen as well as leaders for each company.

Ernest J. Bourgeois, 28-year-old Square Deal president, and other officers of the association's headquarters executive committee were in command.

Bourgeois shouted instructions through a megaphone along the line of battalion formation stretching several hundred yards.

In a brief address to the assembled volunteers, he said that the formation was for a mustering of manpower and roster organization rather than the execution of physical drill.

Lists of names of the men who turned out were compiled.

A large United States flag attached to a pole was planted in the center of the battalion line, and was whipped by a brisk breeze.

"You are not here to get into an army," Bourgeois told the men. "That is not the idea. Many of you thought you were coming for maneuvers. That is not the idea either. This is just for organization.

"We are not going to be out here every Saturday. This may be our last meeting. We are here for organization only."

Bourgeois said he thought it was a "fine turning out."

After the drawing up of the "company" rosters, and the pinning of Square Deal buttons on the volunteers by members of the women's division of the association, the men were dismissed.

Square Deal leaders witheld any statement as to their next step, but it was understood that "local companies" are to be formed elsewhere over the state.

The Square Deal association, at a mass meeting Jan. 6 gave Governor Allen ten days in which to call a special legislative session to repeal "obnoxious laws" and "dictatorship measures imposed by his political superior, Senator Long.

Asked today at Shreveport what he thought about the association, the governor said:

"You notice I am still going about among the people."

Brig.-Gen. Louis F. Guerre, superintendent of state police, watched the formation as a spectator. He remained a short while and then left accompanied by an aide.

A Square Deal headquarters statement issued before the assembly, said the association intended to function

TO CONTINUE CATTLE PURCHASE PROGRAM

The cattle purchasing program which opened in Ouachita parish Saturday at Cheniere station will be continued Monday and Tuesday, it was decided at a conference of the purchasing committee Saturday night.

One hundred and ninety-six head of cattle were purchased from 69 farmers Saturday. All of the animals were condemned because of their emaciated condition.

The prices paid were $4 for calves, $10 for yearlings and $12 per head for cattle over two years of age.

All farmers who contemplate selling cattle in good condition should communicate with the parish agricultural agent, E. R. Strahan, before making delivery, in order to ascertain whether shipping restrictions have been removed, it was stated.

Due to a crowded condition at the packing plant at Alexandria, no cattle suitable for shipping could be purchased Saturday at Cheniere station.

JACKSON DEFEATS BOND ISSUE PLAN

Municipal Power Plant Proposal Loses By 3,-888-3,098 Vote

JACKSON, Miss., Jan. 19.—(AP)—Jackson voted down a proposal for municipal ownership of an electric power plan and a possible hookup with the Tennessee Valley authority at an election here today on a proposed $1,500,000 bond issue to finance the project.

Complete unofficial returns from the city's 21 precincts showed the bond issue had been voted down 3,888 to 3,098. Interest in the question, intense factionalism aroused and fair weather combined to bring out one of the heaviest city votes in recent years.

The result sent Mayor Walter A. Scott of Jackson, who led the fight for the issue and TVA power, down to his first political defeat in 20 years.

The Mississippi Power and Light company which took up the gauntlet thrown down by the mayor and the city commission after a breakdown of negotiations for lower rates, fought vigorously to defeat the issue.

In exchange for rejection of municipal ownership, the company offered to put into effect, retroactive as of December 25, a compromise schedule of reduced electric rates previously rejected by the commission and also immediate substitution of a new bus system and a five-cent fare for the present outworn street car system and a seven-cent fare.

The power company claimed its offer would mean an annual savings to Jackson citizens of approximately $184,000.

There is a court fight in prospect, however, over a rate-reducing ordinance ordered into effect by the commission when it called the bond election after negotiations between the power company and the city commission.

NEW CHARGES FILED IN TRAPPERS FIGHT

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Fresh charges were filed today against 20 rival trappers in the trappers war in St. Bernard and Plaquemines parishes and federal officers reported that a threatening situation appeared to have quieted somewhat on 90,000 acres of contested lands.

An army of federal deputies coursed through the bayou streams of the marsh lands to serve the warrants which they said might require several days—dut to the remoteness of the section.

The trappers are charged with conspiracy to interfere with federal officers in performance of their duties in connection with the overturning of camps of trappers of the Violet Trapping company which is operating on the land under rights granted by the federal sequestrator, Dr. Roy O. Young.

CONGRESS CHIEFS APPEAR WILLING TO SPEED BONUS

Leaders Are Heading Into First Week Of Rapid Fire Action

NO LAWS YET PASSED

Patman Bill's Backers To Push Plan Over Proposal Of Legion

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Heading into their first week of real rapid fire action, congressional leaders today gave signs of a willingness to speed up the bonus and prepared for six days of hard work on social security legislation, war profits, a $4,-880,000,000 public works bill and lesser odds and ends.

The 74th congress had been in session since January 3 without putting a single piece of new legislation on the statute books, and signs were that not even the coming week would see final enactment of anything of major importance.

Advocates of the Patman $2,100,-000,000 bonus bill meanwhile decided at a meeting today to use every means possible to expedite that measure in preference to the American Legion bill. The former would pay the bill by printing new money, the latter by whatever means congress thought best.

Speaker Byrns met the Patman group demand with a reply that he thought it would be "a happy idea" for the ways and means committee to use spare time, if any, to report out "a" bonus bill so it could be voted up or down promptly.

Patman said that if the measure was not brought to the floor soon,

Serious Transportation Situation Confronts Local Business

Members of the Monroe traffic bureau, attending a meeting held in the bureau headquarters in the Bloch building discussed "a grave situation confronting the business interests of Monroe," growing out of a possible disruption of transportation rates in this area. It was pointed out that "only widespread cooperation of all the commercial, industrial and business interests of Monroe in support of an active traffic bureau program will prevent disaster."

The "disaster" referred to is the possibility that operations of wholesale commodity houses in this city may be so restricted by discriminatory rates that most of them would have to move to other locations or confine their activities to an area of 25 miles radius around the city.

"Such an eventuality," it was stated by Leon Sugar, one of the members, "would affect the whole business life of the city. It would mean that hundreds of persons will be thrown out of employment or be lost to the city entirely by moving to other communities."

The cure for the difficulty, it was stated, would be an expansion of the work of the traffic bureau, so that the rate problems could be adequately taken care of. This could only be done by a greatly enlarged membership, embracing all lines of business and industry in the city.

"The traffic bureau," it was said by Clifford Strauss, chairman of the executive committee, "is one of the most essential factors in a healthy business situation, because it is

WINTER CONTINUES TO GRIP NORTHWEST

(By Associated Press)

Merciless winter drove a sharp salient down the frozen Yukon Saturday, bringing the menace of frost to California, new blizzards to the snowbound Cascades, snow as far south as Texas and bitter sub-zero temperatures far across the states.

The mercury dove out of sight to 57 below zero at Endako, B. C., and found new low points for the winter in the region of the Dakotas.

Almost a score persons were dead or missing in the storm that raged down the coast from Alaska to California. Countless others were killed or injured in rail and highway accidents caused by severe cold, ice and snow.

Seattle shivered in temperatures around 10 above zero, coldest in 41 years. It was 14 above at Tacoma, and street traffic was crippled. The Cascades lay 12 feet deep in snow, and more was forecast last night for Oregon, Washington and Idaho.

3 New Traffic Lights Are Installed In City

City electricians were busy Saturday installing new traffic lights at three street intersections in Monroe, on all of which traffic is heavy. Intersections at which the lights were installed were those at Sixth and Washington, Second and Washington and Grand and Grammont streets.

SUPREME JUDGES MAY MAKE GOLD DECISION MONDAY

(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Nine high justices of the supreme court, although guarding their secret closely, left surface signs after a protracted conference today that they had reached a decision in the historic "gold clause" cases.

In the purely physical actions of the court trained observers saw hints of the possibility of another of the famous 5-4 decisions. The justices themselves were silent as always. But of the six who remained closeted together after the conference broke up, five have been labeled as "progressives."

If their actions today were significant, and if the "progressives" follow lines to which they often have hewed in the past, some observers held it possible that the court might divide 5 to 4 for sustaining the validity of the act suspending gold payments.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—(AP)—With outward aimlessness, nine elderly gentlemen, learned in the law, wandered into an austerly furnished capitol room today to sit in judgment upon the most important governmental question to arise in decades.

At issue was the constitutionality of a vital phase of the Roosevelt monetary program, with, the New Dealers had told them, "chaos" or order depending upon their verdict. The nine were the members of the supreme court of the United States.

Whether they reached a final decision today was not disclosed, but if so there was a possibility that it might be announced on Monday, with the written opinion to be prepared

750 MAY ATTEND BIRTHDAY BALL

Keenan Not Fazed By Likelihood Of Huge Crowd At Dance

Intimations of a possibility that 750 tickets would be sold for the president's birthday ball on January 30 didn't faze Leo Keenan president of the Virginia, a bit.

"Fine!" he said "We can divide the crowd, and Mires Jackson can take half of them to Hotel Frances and we'll take the other half. We'll open the big ballroom and, if necessary, let them dance in the lobby. The bigger the crowd the better, so long as it's for the president and the Junior Charity league."

Mrs. Prioleau Ellis, chairman of the campaign committee of the Junior League, said Saturday that the sale of tickets so far was most encouraging and assured a substantial sum for the relief of afflicted children. The larger share of the proceeds will go to the funds of the Junior League and the balance will go to Henry L. Doherty, chairman of the national committee, to be used in the nation-wide fight against infantile paralysis.

The downtown sale of tickets will be maintained at the Chamber of Commerce rooms in Hotel Virginia, where workers may obtain them, as well as individual purchasers. Another drive in the business section of the city will be held on Wednesday, Dec. 30, the day of the ball.

TENANT PROBLEM IS BEING PROBED

JONESBORO, Ark., Jan. 19.—(AP)—Arrest of a federal relief worker on charges of inflamatory activity and a government inquiry into the handling of cotton acreage contracts today turned fresh spotlights on eastern Arkansas sharecropper problems described by state officials as dating from the end of the Civil war.

Mrs. Mary Connor Myers, agricultural adjustment administration attorney, who is special assistant to the attorney general had a hand in the Al Capone income tax case, disclosed at Memphis that she had been sent into the area to make an investigation of the contracts.

She said that the Southern Tenant Farmers union—sharecropper organization, active in eastern Arkansas—had complained to Secretary Wallace that "scores of tenants" were being evicted from cotton contract land in alleged violation of the government crop control agreements.

Mrs. Myers came to eastern Arkansas following the arrest of Ward H. Rodgers, 24-year-old Vanderbilt university graduate and federal emergency relief administration school teacher, who was charged with inciting a meeting of tenants at Marked Tree, near here.

German Defendant Studies Copies Of His Brokerage Accounts

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 19.—(AP)—Ladders, letters and lucre became the crux tonight of the state's case against Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

The ladder, thus far excluded as evidence but promised as an exhibit before the trial is over, is that on which the state contends the kidnaper of the Lindbergh baby descended with the child. Hauptmann, the state will attempt to prove, made it

The letters are the series of ransom notes. Experts have testified that Hauptmann wrote them.

The lucre represents the sudden wealth which, the state says, Hauptmann displayed shortly after a $50,-000 ransom was paid to a mysterious "John" by Dr. John F. Condon, acting for Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. Condon and Col. Lindbergh say that "John" is Hauptmann.

The prisoner sat tonight in his cell, always under the eyes of guards, and studied photostatic copies of his own brokerage accounts—the accounts by which the state hopes to prove that Hauptmann came into possession of his unexplained wealth immediately after the ransom was paid.

Defense attorneys had planned to study the accounts today, but instead of going to Trenton where the accounts are being held, Chief Defense Counsel Edward J. Reilly obtained copies of the accounts and sent them to Hauptmann.

The prisoner is expected to familiarize himself with every phase of his transactions and thus be prepared to advise his counsel when the

Flying Aces To Stage Aerial Show At Selman Field Today

One of the best aerial circuses ever witnessed in Monroe is to be presented this afternoon, beginning at 2:30 o'clock, when the famous Flying Aces, consisting of 15 crack pilots and performers, will perform at Selman airport. The aerial daredevils promise to thrill the crowds with spectacular feats and hazardous stunts.

At 1 o'clock the planes of the Flying Aces will roar over Monroe in a sweeping salute to the opening of the show and as they speed over the city they will release long serpentine streamers in a mock bombing raid.

All residents of Monroe and the surrounding territory have been invited to attend the daring air circus, which will be presented here under the auspices of the American Legion. The 15 fliers were assembled by Ed Sherard and Jimmie Woods in what is said to be the biggest show of its kind in existence. This group will give a two-hour demonstration of spectacular flying and daring stunt performances.

Fifteen daring acts, many of them never before shown here, are listed on the two-hour program, which is arranged in such a way that there are no "dead" spots, with all acts following each other in quick succession. No passenger hauling will be permitted during the show.

Tickets, in the form of windshield stickers, each admitting an entire automobile load of spectators, have been placed on sale at all leading drug stores, leading hotels, Central and Circle S service stations and Frenchie's cafes Nos. 1 and 2. Those buying advance carload stickers will save money and will also be allowed to take the fast traffic lane, without being stopped, Legion officials said.

The show proper will begin at 2:30 and will be preceded by one hour of formation flying and special exhibitions for the benefit of early comers. Gates will open at noon.

FOUR MEN SLAIN AND 8 ARRESTED IN GUN BATTLES

MURDER SUSPECTS DIE

Deadly Outbreaks Shatter Calm Along New York Crime Front

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Three violent encounters between police and gunmen within a 24-hour period tonight had brought death to four men and the arrest of eight others.

The casualty list included a policeman, an innocent taxicab driver and two murder suspects.

Under arrest were four youths accused of slaying the policeman, an elderly man suspected of being their "Fagin," and three young men whose alleged attempt to hold up a drug store led to the killing of the taxi driver.

Another policeman was shot and seriously wounded during an argument with a fellow officer, who then committed suicide.

The lethal outbreaks, which shattered months of comparative calm along New York's crime front, followed closely on the bloodless capture of four members of the notorious "tri-state gang."

Virginia death warrants await Robert Mais and Walter Legenza, leaders of this gang which is accused of murder, robbery and kidnap plotting.

The shootings began last night when four youths, attempting to hold up a Fifth avenue luggage shop, engaged in a pistol duel with two policemen.

Patrolman James M. J. Killian, father of two small children, was fatally wounded before the quartette was captured.

In the lineup today they identified themselves as Ray Orley, 20, Thomas Rooney, 22, and Amerigo Angelini, 22, of New York, and Newman Raymond, 22, of Alexandria, Va.

Orley was identified by four recent holdup victims, and police said all but Raymond had participated in more than a dozen other robberies. They said it was Raymond's first "job."

Appearing in the lineup with them was Nelson B. Clark, 62, who said he kept house for them and who was charged with possession of a stolen gold watch.

"His is the responsibility for the plight of these boys who are on their way to the electric chair," said Acting Capt. Daniel Curtayne, pointing to Clark.

Shortly after the Fifth avenue shooting, William Gibbons, 21, John Dolan, 18, and Albert Ryan were captured after a running gun fight with police, who charged them with attempting

THREE MAD DOGS SLAIN BY POLICE

Three mad dogs known to have bitten three persons and between 20 and 30 other dogs were killed by West Monroe police within the past three days, the last of the dogs being shot at 2 a.m. Saturday. Twenty-five stray dogs having no vaccination tags were killed Friday and Saturday.

A local veterinarian inspected one of the slain dogs and said it suffered from rabies, and the head of another was sent to New Orleans for examination.

The killing of the three mad dogs brought to light a unique type of counterfeiting when it was discovered that one of the dogs was wearing attached to his collar beneath his neck a metal disc which from a distance of a few feet would be mistaken for a vaccination tag.

Since last June, the department has killed approximately 350 dogs. A .22 caliber rifle is used, principally, in the extermination.

Slightly more than 200 vaccination certificates for dogs have been registered with the city clerk since June.

Nazi Foes Advised To Leave Saar Until Feeling Abates

SAARBRUECKEN, Saar Basin Territory, Jan. 19.—(AP)—A virtual Nazi "revolution" in the Saar, effecting changes similar in many respects to the January, 1933, upheaval in Germany proper, tonight saw the Basin's League of Nations government almost completely effaced.

So completely were Adolf Hitler's adherents in the saddle this sixth day after the smashing Nazi victory in the Saar plebiscite, that Socialists were frankly advising anti-Nazis to get out of the territory "until things blow over."

Although actual violence was conspicuous by its absence and reports that anti-Nazis were physically ill-treated, when tracked down, turned out to be founded on fear rather than fact, the Hitlerite forces nevertheless had seized entire control of the Basin's governing machinery.

Public officials who backed the losing "status quo" cause were ousted and anti-Nazi laborers claimed they also had been "victimized," losing their jobs to those who voted for Germany.

Amid reports that Hitler's opponents had been threatened by neighbors of business rivals, the Socialists told the men in their ranks they would be wise to leave for the present.

Women and children were told they might safely remain, however, since feeling in the Basin appeared to be directly at the men.

"Every report of attacks I have investigated," an American plebiscite official said today, "has proved false."

The official, stationed in the heart of the mining district which furnishes the bulk of the daily crops of terrorist stories, said he had received frequent appeals from frightened anti-Nazis but found nothing.

Behind the Nazis as they set about clearing out their opponents was the tremendous power of the more than 90 per cent pro-German vote registered in Sunday's plebiscite.

It enabled them to hoist the swastika banner everywhere, without fear of reproach, and to apply the spoils system unmercifully with the applause of the overwhelming majority.

340 East Baton Rouge Men Are Organized Into Shock Troops To Fight Huey Long

SQUARE DEALERS EXPECT TO REACH THEIR GOAL SOON

Are Convinced Purpose Can Be Accomplished In Short Time

BATON ROUGE, Jan. 19.—(Staff Special.)—Officers of the Square Deal association, which in a few days has grown with incredible swiftness, believe that it will be short-lived. They are convinced that the purpose of the association, which is to end dictatorship in Louisiana, will be accomplished before many months have elapsed. While they do not talk in terms of state campaigns, holding the organization distinctly aloof from politics, they feel that ere another gubernatorial election rolls around, constitutional government will have been restored to the people of the state.

To some this may seem to be an irridescent dream. To the officials of the Square Deal association it is as certain as the movement of the stars. With admirable steadfastness of purpose, they are preparing to execute the plans of the organization, relieve Louisiana of a system that has stunted its industrial growth, and then disband.

There is one fact which cannot be denied. The Square Deal association seems to have galvanized the public conscience in Louisiana as nothing else was able to accomplish. Its membership is increasing by leaps and bounds. Letters of endorsement and tenders of support pile up so fast at the association headquarters here, a force of busy stenographers is unable to keep up with them. On two days over three thousand letters were received from New Orleans alone.

"We counted up to 3,000 and quit," said one member of the executive committee. "How much the aggregate went beyond that I do not know."

Usually, in cases of this kind, moral support is given only by those who endorse the movement. But, not so with the Square Deal association.

FARMER KILLED AS CARS CRASH

John Lee Youngblood Of Near Farmerville Is Victim Of Mishap

FARMERVILLE, La., Jan. 19.—(Special)—John Lee Youngblood, 28, farmer living eight miles west of Farmerville, was instantly killed shortly after 7 o'clock Saturday night when his automobile collided with another car driven by Tom Hamilton about a mile and a half out of Farmerville on the Farmerville-Bernice highway. It was said that the impact threw Mr. Youngblood from his car and that his neck was broken when he struck the pavement.

Immediately following the accident, Mr. Youngblood's car was destroyed by fire, believed to have been started when gasoline which spilled when the crash occurred ignited. The Hamilton car was badly damaged.

Six persons were riding in the Hamilton automobile, but only two of them were injured, Alton Hamilton, 17, and Miss Gordie Hamilton, about 24, receiving cuts on their faces and shoulders.

An inquest was conducted by Dr. G. A. Ramsey, parish coroner, who returned a verdict of accidental death. Those in the Hamilton automobile said that Mr. Youngblood was driving without lights and that they did not see his car until the accident occurred.

Mr. Youngblood is survived by his widow, one child, his father and several brothers and sisters. Funeral arrangements had not yet been completed.

OFFICE RETAINED BY GOV. MOODIE

BISMARCK, N. D., Jan. 19.—(AP)—Disdaining any but peaceful means, Governor Thomas H. Moodie today retained possession of his office in a tense political situation precipitated by his impeachment yesterday in the North Dakota house of representatives.

Ordering withdrawn two national guardsmen who had been on watch against possible attempts to remove him, Moodie declined to give up his office to Lieut. Gov. Walter H. Welford until the situation was clarified. He said he contemplated legal action.

Opinions differed whether his suspension—provided in the case of impeached officers until their cases are decided by the senate—would take effect immediately. Attorney General P. O. Sathre, affiliated with the nonpartisan league group which sponsored the impeachment, advised the governor yesterday's action was incomplete.

This opinion led to rumors, quickly denied by leaders, that impeachment of Sathre was planned.

ROGERS HAS HIS SAY

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 19. (Special)—It had been bad flying weather and I had to be in Indianapolis for a hospital benefit Friday night. It seemed like good old times to be back on a train. Fine train, fine service, railroads are recovering. Then an accident at one of those grade crossings which really seemed to be the fault of no one. In giving people work, that eliminating of grade crossings looks like it would be a great thing for the worker and for the lives saved. Old Indiana, the home of politics, is coming through great. They are getting by without any new taxation.

Any news from the supreme court?

Will Rogers.

DORMITORY RAZED BY FIERCE BLAZE

Gorgas Hall At University Of Alabama Is Quickly Consumed

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Jan. 19.—(AP)—Seventy-five men students at the University of Alabama dashed from their rooms in Gorgas hall this afternoon and watched most of their belongings go up in smoke as flames rapidly destroyed the building.

Fanned by a high wind, the fire completed its work with amazing rapidity, and Tuscaloosa firemen, seeing the building was doomed, devoted most of their efforts to preventing a spread of the flames to a fraternity house nearby.

Dick Lavier, Ogdensburg, N. Y., a junior in the college of engineering, was overcome by smoke and burned slightly when he rushed back into the blazing structure in an effort to save his books and clothing.

Virtually nothing was saved from the building. Less than an hour after the first alarm nothing remained but the brick walls.

Spectators were kept away from the ruins of the building as firemen debated whether to pull the walls down to prevent possible injury from their collapse.

As news of the fire spread, midterm examinations were hastily adjourned and students dashed out to see the red brick structure, completed in 1921, a pillar of fire and smoke.

Flames burst from the windows on the third floor before firemen arrived, and sparks, borne by the wind, fell on roofs of nearby buildings.

BANKHEAD TO BACK CONTROL MEASURE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Intent on removing the over-supply of cotton, Senator Bankhead, Democrat, Alabama, announced today that, with administration backing, he will offer a bill to continue compulsory cotton production control in 1936.

President Roosevelt's policy, Bankhead said, was "to go along with this program until we get the surplus below 5,000,000 bales." The carryover as of next August has been estimated at 8,500,000 bales.

The Alabaman expects his new bill to conform closely to the Bankhead measure in effect last year and approved by farmers for continuance during 1935.

"We cannot afford to take a backward step in the program for reducing the carryover," said Bankhead, "and we cannot permit, if it is possible to avoid it, the reduction in the purchasing power of the great mass of cotton farmers."

Three Machine Gunmen Hunted In Arkansas

OZARK, Ark., Jan. 19.—(AP)—In headlong flight after a brief foray into this Arkansas hill section, three machine gunmen, two of them believed members of a band of four "pretty sick men" who on January 14 escaped the Oklahoma penitentiary, were the quarry tonight in a hunt extending to Coffeyville, Kas.

Sheriff Champ Crawford of Franklin county late today said A. S. Kline, special railroad agent, had advised him from Coffeyville that the trio was seen there today, after releasing Mr. and Mrs. Tom Lewis of Alix, near Van Buren, Ark., this morning.

"Two of them were identified as escaped convicts from Oklahoma," Sheriff Crawford said. "We have no clues, however, as to which of the four escaped convicts they are, and we don't know who the other one, the youngest, is."

Citizens Are Formed Into Military Units; No Drill Is Held

BOURGEOIS IN CHARGE

Meeting Is Devoted Only To Lining Up Officers, Personnel

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 19.—(AP)—Marshalled in military formation under a billowing American flag, 340 East Baton Rouge parish citizens were organized late today into the headquarters "shock troop battalion" of the Square Deal association of Louisiana which is challenging Senator Huey P. Long's dictatorship.

Assembling in a row of "companies" at the notes of a bugle call, citizens of varying classes—mechanics, laborers and well-dressed business men—fell into battalion line at the parish airport to form the Square Deal association's central "manpower" unit.

There was no actual drill or military maneuvering. There were no guns carried. But the elements of military organization and appearance were closely followed.

Officers of the unit, designated the "East Baton Rouge Headquarters Battalion" of the citizens organization which has declared for a course of "direct action" as result of Gov. O. K. Allen's having flaunted its demand for immediate repeal of dictator laws, were chosen as well as leaders for each company.

Ernest J. Bourgeois, 28-year-old Square Deal president, and other officers of the association's headquarters executive committee were in command.

Bourgeois shouted instructions through a megaphone along the line of battalion formation stretching several hundred yards.

In a brief address to the assembled volunteers, he said that the formation was for a mustering of manpower and roster organization rather than the execution of physical drill.

Lists of names of the men who turned out were compiled.

Just before the assembly Bourgeois said the "battalion" would constitute the Square Deal association's "shock troops."

A large United States flag attached to a pole was planted in the center of the battalion line, and was whipped by a brisk breeze.

"You are not here to get into an army," Bourgeois told the men. "That is not the idea. Many of you thought you were coming for maneuvers. That is not the idea either. This is just for organization.

"We are not going to be out here every Saturday. This may be our last meeting. We are here for organization only."

Bourgeois said he thought it was a "fine turning out."

After the drawing up of the "company" rosters, and the pinning of Square Deal buttons on the volunteers by members of the women's division of the association, the men were dismissed.

Square Deal leaders witheld any statement as to their next step, but it was understood that "local companies" are to be formed elsewhere over the state.

The Square Deal association, at a mass meeting Jan. 6 gave Governor Allen ten days in which to call a special legislative session to repeal "obnoxious laws" and "dictatorship measures imposed by his political superior, Senator Long.

Asked today at Shreveport what he thought about the association, the governor said:

"You notice I am still going about among the people."

Brig.-Gen. Louis F. Guerre, superintendent of state police, watched the formation as a spectator. He remained a short while and then left accompanied by an aide.

A Square Deal headquarters statement issued before the assembly, said the association intended to function

TO CONTINUE CATTLE PURCHASE PROGRAM

The cattle purchasing program which opened in Ouachita parish Saturday at Cheniere station will be continued Monday and Tuesday, it was decided at a conference of the purchasing committee Saturday night.

One hundred and ninety-six head of cattle were purchased from 80 farmers Saturday. All of the animals were condemned because of their emaciated condition.

The prices paid were $4 for calves, $10 for yearlings and $12 per head for cattle over two years of age.

All farmers who contemplate selling cattle in good condition should communicate with the parish agricultural agent, E. R. Strahan, before making delivery, in order to ascertain whether shipping restrictions have been removed, it was stated.

Due to a crowded condition at the packing plant at Alexandria, no cattle suitable for shipping could be purchased Saturday at Cheniere station.

LEGION MEMBERS TO ATTEND MEET

Dozen From Ouachita Parish To Be Present At Conference

At least a dozen legionnaires of Ouachita parish are expected to attend the annual conference of commanders, adjutants and post officers to be held January 26 and 27 at Lafayette, Isadore Liebreich, commander of L. B. Faulk post of Monroe, said Saturday. Most of these men will be from the Monroe post, but it is likely that the posts of West Monroe and Sterlington will also be represented.

Those who have already indicated they plan to attend from this parish are Isadore Liebreich, commander; Harry Stein, post adjutant; Charles Mitchell, C. E. McKenzie, Sam Rubin, Dr. S. A. Collins, John Bailey, Walter Veach, Merle Padgett and William Haddad of the Monroe post and Dr. C. L. Mengis of the Sterlington post.

The Legion meeting will open with registration at noon, January 26, in the lobby of Gordon hotel, and at that time reservations will be made for the dinner dance to be held, beginning at 8 o'clock that night at the American Legion club.

At 4 p. m. on the opening day a general meeting will be held at the courthouse, with Matt J. Fruge, vice-commander, presiding.

The program for discussion will include employment, poppy sales, graves registration, Americanism, junior baseball, school award, safety, flag education and Boy Scouts.

Homer L. Chaillaux, national Americanism director, will attend the general meeting on the opening day and will speak at that time.

The second day's program will open at 9 a. m. with music furnished by the Crowley drum and bugle corps. This will be followed by a parade at 9:30 o'clock and a conference at 10 o'clock. The conference will include invocation, addresses of welcome, responses and addresses by a large number of Legion leaders, including Quimby Melton, national vice-commander.

693 Ouachita Voters Are Registered Now

Six hundred and ninety-three residents of Ouachita parish had registered in the new poll books at the office of the sheriff of Ouachita parish and received poll receipts when the office closed Saturday afternoon.

It is desired that residents of the parish register early, in order to prevent a rush to the sheriff's office near the deadline for registering, May 31.

Beautiful English Star To Thrill American Fans

'Divine' Is Faintest Of Praise Heaped On British Actress

By Milton Bronner

(NEA Service Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, Jan. 19. — American moviegoers soon will be thrilled by the charm and talent of a glamorous new English star—Jessie Matthews—and by the shimmering vehicle, "Evergreen," in which she will make her bow across the sea.

Hollywood will be watching the curtsey, for Miss Matthews sings, dances, and is withal an actress, and her face and figure have exhausted the superlatives of London's stage and cinema critics.

Soon American film fans will be comparing her prancing and pulchritude with the better known spiritual and physical values of the reigning Hollywood favorites.

This is not to say that Miss Matthews is a newcomer to the eye-and-ear entertainment business, because it was some 11 years ago that, as a shapely and very serious youngster of 15, she began sitting on benches outside the casting offices of London producers.

It's Three-Way Hit

"Evergreen," too, has entertained a good many Britishers in its time. First, it was a play, by Benn Levy, and told the story of a young actress whose ambition led her to impersonate her own mother—a once-idolized figure in the theater of the previous generation.

Next, C. B. Cochran, London's big revue-and-spectacle man, transformed the drama into one of his most successful musicals. And, finally, Gaumont British, the film concern, acquired picture rights to the Cochran production, enlarged and embroidered it, stirred in some new songs, and brought out a movie that is somewhere near tops in photography, story value and choregraphy.

Miss Matthews had played here for a year in the musical-comedy "Evergreen," before she was engaged by Gaumont British.

Her own story—from chorus girl to stardom—has plenty of Broadway counterparts, but few parallels in this city. Jessie herself admits it's unusual; says that, except by the grace of her self-confidence or conceit or whatever you'd like to call it, she still would be hoofing in an ensemble.

Faced Heavy Odds

Everything was against her—age, the poor circumstances of her family, her meager training, her lack of friends in the theater.

There was a brother, Billy, who had been lightweight champion of Europe. And there was an elder sister who long before had recognized Jessie's singing and dancing talent, and so did what she could to bolster the youngster's ambition.

There were a few dancing lessons, and Jessie began to get chances in West End stage shows. Worked herself to a frazzle, for it was all intensely serious business for her.

Naively she confided that she didn't intend to remain long in a chorus, and for this she was disliked by the other girls and dubbed "Lady Matthews."

Her first big time opportunity came in one of Andre Charlot's Revues. That sent her to Broadway for awhile, but there is no record that anyone particularly noticed the slim brunet who danced so ably, and sang as well as she danced.

Charles Cochran probably never even had heard of her when she began haunting his office. Eventually he noticed her because of the monster umbrella she carried. Amused, he consented to give her an audition.

"Tulip slender, divinely tall . . ."

She sang for him, and he immediately promised her a job. "Thanks," said Jessie, "but you'll have to talk to my mother and father about that."

He did talk to them, and as a result she was launched by the English Ziegfeld. In only a little time critics here were sitting around thinking up descriptives for her.

"The lady with the loveliest legs in London," said one. "Tulip slender and divinely tall," wrote another. And a third rhapsodized: "Her legs are like twin exclamation marks after the word 'beautiful.'"

Under Cochran's guidance, Miss Matthews became a full-fledged musical comedy star before she was 20. Her screen career progressed almost as rapidly.

First there were undistinguished roles in "There Goes the Bride" and "The Good Companions," then stellar parts in "The Midshipmaid" and "Friday the 13th." Gaumont British next planned "Evergreen" as a tribute to its newest star.

Plays Two Roles

This is as ambitious and opulent a movie musical as the British have attempted, yet only once or twice do you get the impression that a scenic-ensemble number has been dragged in by the heels.

The whole plot is laid in and about the theater, and most of the stage shots are actually essential to the narrative.

Miss Matthews plays two roles, first that of a stage favorite of the Edwardian era who is about to end her career at its peak in favor of marriage to a personable marquis.

But at the farewell supper she learns that a parasitic husband, long thought dead, is very much alive. So the great star disappears without explanation; goes to South Africa, or some place very remote.

Her little daughter is left in England to be reared by a faithful maid. The guardian makes her a veritable reincarnation of the mother—even to the mother's slightest mannerisms and familiarity with events of the previous generation.

Ideal For Jessie

Circumstances, abetted by a scheming press agent and producer, permit the girl to impersonate her apparently ageless mother in a triumphant "return" to the stage. There's a nice balance of drama and comedy and sentimentality before the impersonation is exposed, and ultimately vindicated.

Certainly it's an ideal vehicle for the singing, dancing, and straight dramatics of Miss Matthews. She gets to dance everything from the can-can to the rhumba. Of her songs, you'll be hearing a lot of "Springtime in Your Heart" and "Over My Shoulder Goes Care."

Jessie and Sonnie Hale, her husband, didn't go to New York for "Evergreen's" premiere. Seems that Jessie has some sewing to do. Tiny garments.

A STAMPING CORNER

By W. J. KIRBY

The year just closed was a big year for stamp collectors, bringing forth many new issues and commemoratives from various countries, practically each issue being more attractive than its predecessors.

While not issuing as many stamps as in 1933, the United States did its part, philatelically. The 3-cent Maryland Tercentenary stamp stands in a class by itself, being the first of that denomination to be printed in red, the color usually reserved for the two-cent denomination. When this stamp was printed in this color, it was thought that this was due to the fact that the stamp for domestic letter postage was usually issued in red, but subsequent issues have been of the usual purple color.

The Maryland stamp was followed by the Wisconsin Tercentenary issue, a 3-cent horizontal oblong of the familiar purple color. One self-appointed critic has pointed out a number of anachronisms in this stamp, including the fact that the flag carried by the explorer, Nicolet, is the Republican tricolor, when it should have been a white flag spotted with fleur-de-lis. Nevertheless, it is an attractive stamp, and used copies are already bringing a good price—proof that the issue is popular.

The National Parks series of ten denominations is generally conceded to be the most attractive series of stamps ever issued. It depicts the scenic wonders of our nation, proving that it is not necessary to visit the Alps, the Andes or the Himilayas to view the grandeur of nature. Though from fifteen to eighty-five million of each denomination were issued, used copies are bringing high prices, at home and abroad. The one-cent and three-cent denominations have been issued in miniature imperforate sheets, and have caused much criticism of the postoffice department. Though collectors rave about these "unnecessaries," they continue to buy them. Just so long as this is done, the department will continue to issue them.

The "Parks" issue, too, comes in for its share of criticism of the designs. Take the 2-cent Yellowstone, turn it with the right end upward, and along the canyon rim will be seen what some term the face of President Roosevelt. Hold the 3-cent Mount Ranier with the left end up and a man with whiskers peeps at you from the top of the snow-clad mountains. The 4-cent Mesa Verde, when held at a slight angle with the right end up, shows an Egyptian maiden's head formed of the roof and walls of one of the adobe shanties. With assistance from the imagination, a face will be found in the spray thrown up by Old Faithful Geyser on the five cent. Other values, too, have hidden faces, causing one wag to dub it the "picture puzzle series."

New issues of other countries will be discussed in next week's "Corner."

Beautiful English Star To Thrill American Fans

'Divine' Is Faintest Of Praise Heaped On British Actress

By Milton Bronner

(NEA Service Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, Jan. 19. — American moviegoers soon will be thrilled by the charm and talent of a glamorous new English star—Jessie Matthews—and by the shimmering vehicle, "Evergreen," in which she will make her bow across the sea.

Hollywood will be watching the curtsey, for Miss Matthews sings, dances, and is withal an actress, and her face and figure have exhausted the superlatives of London's stage and cinema critics.

Soon American film fans will be comparing her prancing and pulchritude with the better known spiritual and physical values of the reigning Hollywood favorites.

This is not to say that Miss Matthews is a newcomer to the eye-and-ear entertainment business, because it was some 11 years ago that, as a shapely and very serious youngster of 15, she began sitting on benches outside the casting offices of London producers.

It's Three-Way Hit

"Evergreen," too, has entertained a good many Britishers in its time. First, it was a play, by Benn Levy, and told the story of a young actress whose ambition led her to impersonate her own mother—a once-idolized figure in the theater of the previous generation.

Next, C. B. Cochran, London's big revue-and-spectacle man, transformed the drama into one of his most successful musicals. And, finally, Gaumont British, the film concern, acquired picture rights to the Cochran production, enlarged and embroidered it, stirred in some new songs, and brought out a movie that is somewhere near tops in photography, story value and choregraphy.

Miss Matthews had played here for a year in the musical-comedy "Evergreen," before she was engaged by Gaumont British.

Her own story—from chorus girl to stardom—has plenty of Broadway counterparts, but few parallels in this city. Jessie herself admits it's unusual; says that, except by the grace of her self-confidence or conceit or whatever you'd like to call it, she still would be hoofing in an ensemble.

Faced Heavy Odds

Everything was against her—age, the poor circumstances of her family, her meager training, her lack of friends in the theater.

There was a brother, Billy, who had been lightweight champion of Europe. And there was an elder sister who long before had recognized Jessie's singing and dancing talent, and so did what she could to bolster the youngster's ambition.

There were a few dancing lessons, and Jessie began to get chances in West End stage shows. Worked herself to a frazzle, for it was all intensely serious business for her.

He did talk to them, and as a result she was launched by the English Ziegfeld. In only a little time critics here were sitting around thinking up descriptives for her.

BISHOP DESMOND REACHES GOTHAM

Churchman Expected To Arrive Home Soon After Visit To Rome

Most Rev. Daniel F. Desmond, bishop of the Alexandria diocese, arrived in New York on January 15, following a trip to Rome, and is expected to return to the seat of the diocese in Alexandria within the next few days, according to information received here by Father N. F. Vandegaer, pastor of St. Matthew's Catholic church, from his brother, Father John C. Vandegaer, former assistant pastor here, and now secretary to the bishop.

Bishop Desmond began his trip to Rome on December 10, and landed there December 22. He was believed to have spent about two weeks in Rome, as he probably sailed from there for New York about January 4.

This was the first official visit of the bishop to Rome, although he visited that city as a tourist, following the World war, in which he served as a chaplain. Regulations of the church provide that a bishop shall visit the pope within two years after being appointed to that position.

In his visit to the seat of the Catholic church the bishop makes a report to the pope and also visits a committee of cardinals for a discussion of the work. If he has any matter of more than usual importance, such as a major construction project, he also takes this up with the higher church officials. After a period of five years the bishop makes another visit to the pope.

Bishop Desmond first received notice of his appointment as bishop of the Alexandria diocese on December 5, 1932, and on January 5, 1933, he was consecrated in that position.

THEFTS REPORTED

A report that her home in Lemleville had been entered by a burglar who stole a pistol and 50 cents was made to police Saturday afternoon by Eloise Peoples, negro woman. Mrs. Edna McConnell, 3006 Jackson street, reported that her son's bicycle had been stolen from her residence.

Three Future Kings--And Perhaps A Queen--Studying For Royal Jobs

Regal Children Are In Public Eye Only When Succession Looms

By Milton Bronner
(NEA Service Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, Jan. 19.—European statesmen, with a keen eye on cannon fodder, may be worried because the people are not filling the cradles the way they used to, but—there is no great falling off in royal birth-rates.

Europe is filled with royal babies and children. Four of these are of the highest importance in the future history of the world; 11-year-old Peter II, king of Yugoslavia; Crown Prince Michael, for a brief time boy king of Rumania, and destined some day to be king again; Princess Elizabeth, eldest daughter of the Duke and Duchess of York, who some day may be the second Queen Elizabeth of Great Britain; and Prince Baudouin, heir to the throne of Belgium.

The rest of the royal children of Europe aren't as important in the scheme of things because they happen to be girls, and in most European kingdoms only males may become heirs to the throne.

Children Unpublished

Despite their exalted rank, most of these royal children are hardly publicized at all. Consider Peter II of Yugoslavia, for instance. When his father, King Alexander, fell a victim to the bullets of an assassin at Marseille last October, the world in general learned with astonishment that his son and heir was a pupil in a select private English school near London.

There were many reasons which induced his kingly father to make that choice. In the first place, the boy was rather serious-minded and at the same time, gentle. Alexander wanted him to take his part in the rough and tumble of English school athletics to bring him out and make him a good mixer. Then kings need the gift of tongues and the father wanted the boy to be proficient in English, which threatens to supplant French as the world tongue. Finally, Alexander knew his royal house had desperate enemies, and England seemed a safe place in which Peter could grow up.

Father Deposed Michael

Fat, broad-faced Prince Michael, 13, heir to the throne of Rumania, has had the most remarkable career of any royal youngster in recent world history. His father, then Crown Prince Carol, left Rumania suddenly in December, 1925. He renounced his rights to the throne, definitely left his wife, Princess Helene, and gave up the power to bring up his only son. King Ferdinand called a crown council, which proclaimed Michael heir to the throne. It also was arranged that when Michael became king, there should be a regency, composed of the head of the Rumanian state church, the chief justice of the supreme court and Prince Nicholas, the boy's uncle. Ferdinand died July 20, 1927, and, at the age of 6, Michael was proclaimed king.

But things took a dramatic turn in June, 1928, when Carol suddenly reappeared in Bucharest and was proclaimed king. Michael was reduced in rank. He was now crown prince with title of Grand Voyvoda of Alba Julia. Ever since then, King Carol has exerted himself to wean the boy away from the mother's influence. He is being educated in a select circle in Bucharest.

Popular little Princess Elizabeth of England is being groomed as one who some day may be queen of England. Only three lives stand between her and the throne—King George, the Prince of Wales and her father, the Duke of York, in the order named. Of course, if her parents had a baby son, her nose would be out of joint, so far as the throne is concerned, because the succession goes primarily to the males. But she would still precede her younger uncles and her cousins in claims to the throne.

At one time there was talk of sending the eight-year-old princess to some private school attended by some of her little friends. But her parents have changed their minds. She is taught by private tutors in the fall and winter at her parents' home in Piccadilly, in summer at their lodge in the grounds of Windsor Castle.

King Leopold of Belgium and his Queen Astrid have two children—Princess Josephine, who is 7, and the heir to the throne, Prince Baudouin. tle Baudouin. The hateful job of lessons soon will be imposed upon him. And big sister, Josephine, goes to school in the Brussels palace every day, having governesses and tutors for that purpose.

Taking the roll call of the rest of the monarchial states:

King Boris of Bulgaria has no heir to the throne. His only child is Princess Marie Louise, who is just about two years old and more absorbed in toys than lessons.

King Victor Emmanuel of Italy has a successor in Crown Prince Humberto, whose only child is a baby girl born this year.

King Haakon VII of Norway has a successor in Crown Prince Olaf, 31, who is the father of two little princesses, Ragnhild, 4, and Astrid, 2.

King Gustav V of Sweden, now 76, is heavily provided with heirs to the throne. His son, Crown Prince Gustav, is 52, and he in turn has four sons, Gustav, Sigvard, Bertil and Charles. The eldest, Prince Gustav, who will inherit the throne some day, recently became father of a baby girl.

Oklahoma Evangelist To Conduct Revival At Church In Monroe

A revival will be held at the Monroe First Baptist church, beginning Sunday, February 3, it was announced by the pastor, Rev. L. T. Hastings.

Dr. C. C. Morris, pastor of the First Baptist church of Ada, Okla., has accepted the invitation of the pastor and congregation to conduct the revival.

The music services of the revival will be in charge of L. A. Stulce, director of religious education and music of the local church. A large chorus choir is being trained to lead the congregational singing, which will be one of the features of the revival.

The visiting revivalist conducted a meeting here some years ago. Reverend Hastings said he "is one of the outstanding preachers of the south, having the distinction of having baptized more people into his church last year than any other pastor among Baptists. He is in great demand, and we are very fortunate to secure his services for our meeting. We want everyone to enjoy the blessings of his messages."

BISHOP DESMOND REACHES GOTHAM

Churchman Expected To Arrive Home Soon After Visit To Rome

Most Rev. Daniel F. Desmond, bishop of the Alexandria diocese, arrived in New York on January 15, following a trip to Rome, and is expected to return to the seat of the diocese in Alexandria within the next few days, according to information received here by Father N. F. Vandegaer, pastor of St. Matthew's Catholic church, from his brother, Father John C. Vandegaer, former assistant pastor here, and now secretary to the bishop.

Bishop Desmond began his trip to Rome on December 10, and landed there December 22. He was believed to have spent about two weeks in Rome, as he probably sailed from there for New York about January 4.

This was the first official visit of the bishop to Rome, although he visited that city as a tourist, following the World war, in which he served as a chaplain. Regulations of the church provide that a bishop shall visit the pope within two years after being appointed to that position.

In his visit to the seat of the Catholic church the bishop makes a report to the pope and also visits a committee of cardinals for a discussion of the work. If he has any matter of more than usual importance, such as a major construction project, he also takes this up with the higher church officials. After a period of five years the bishop makes another visit to the pope.

Bishop Desmond first received notice of his appointment as bishop of the Alexandria diocese on December 5, 1932, and on January 5, 1933, he was consecrated in that position.

THEFTS REPORTED

A report that her home in Lemleville had been entered by a burglar who stole a pistol and 50 cents was made to police Saturday afternoon by Eloise Peoples, negro woman. Mrs. Edna McConnell, 3006 Jackson street, reported that her son's bicycle had been stolen from her residence.

Three Future Kings--And Perhaps A Queen--Studying For Royal Jobs

Regal Children Are In Public Eye Only When Succession Looms

By Milton Bronner
(NEA Service Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, Jan. 19.—European statesmen, with a keen eye on cannon fodder, may be worried because the people are not filling the cradles the way they used to, but—there is no great falling off in royal birth-rates.

Europe is filled with royal babies and children. Four of these are of the highest importance in the future history of the world; 11-year-old Peter II, king of Yugoslavia; Crown Prince Michael, for a brief time boy king of Rumania, and destined some day to be king again; Princess Elizabeth, eldest daughter of the Duke and Duchess of York, who some day may be the second Queen Elizabeth of Great Britain; and Prince Baudouin, heir to the throne of Belgium.

The rest of the royal children of Europe aren't as important in the scheme of things because they happen to be girls, and in most European kingdoms only males may become heirs to the throne.

Children Unpublished

Despite their exalted rank, most of these royal children are hardly publicized at all. Consider Peter II of Yugoslavia, for instance. When his father, King Alexander, fell a victim to the bullets of an assassin at Marseille last October, the world in general learned with astonishment that his son and heir was a pupil in a select private English school near London.

There were many reasons which induced his kingly father to make that choice. In the first place, the boy was rather serious-minded and at the same time, gentle. Alexander wanted him to take his part in the rough and tumble of English school athletics to bring him out and make him a good mixer. Then kings need the gift of tongues and the father wanted the boy to be proficient in English, which threatens to supplant French as the world tongue. Finally, Alexander knew his royal house had desperate enemies, and England seemed a safe place in which Peter could grow up.

Father Deposed Michael

Fat, broad-faced Prince Michael, 13, heir to the throne of Rumania, has had the most remarkable career of any royal youngster in recent world history. His father, then Crown Prince Carol, left Rumania suddenly in December, 1925. He renounced his rights to the throne, definitely left his wife, Princess Helene, and gave up the power to bring up his only son. King Ferdinand called a crown council, which proclaimed Michael heir to the throne. It also was arranged that when Michael became king, there should be a regency, composed of the head of the Rumanian state church, the chief justice of the supreme court and Prince Nicholas, the boy's uncle. Ferdinand died July 20, 1927, and, at the age of 6, Michael was proclaimed king.

But things took a dramatic turn in June, 1928, when Carol suddenly reappeared in Bucharest and was proclaimed king. Michael was reduced in rank. He was now crown prince with title of Grand Voyvoda of Alba Julia. Ever since then, King Carol has exerted himself to wean the boy away from the mother's influence. He is being educated in a select circle in Bucharest.

Popular little Princess Elizabeth of England is being groomed as one who some day may be queen of England. Only three lives stand between her and the throne—King George, the Prince of Wales and her father, the Duke of York, in the order named. Of course, if her parents had a baby son, her nose would be out of joint, so far as the throne is concerned, because the succession goes primarily to the males. But she would still precede her younger uncles and her cousins in claims to the throne.

At one time there was talk of sending the eight-year-old princess to some private school attended by some of her little friends. But her parents have changed their minds. She is taught by private tutors in the fall and winter at her parents' home in Piccadilly, in summer at their lodge in the grounds of Windsor Castle.

King Leopold of Belgium and his Queen Astrid have two children—Princess Josephine, who is 7, and the heir to the throne, Prince Baudouin, tle Baudouin. The hateful job of lessons soon will be imposed upon him. And big sister, Josephine, goes to school in the Brussels palace every day, having governesses and tutors for that purpose.

Taking the roll call of the rest of the monarchial states:

King Boris of Bulgaria has no heir to the throne. His only child is Princess Marie Louise, who is just about two years old and more absorbed in toys than lessons.

King Victor Emmanuel of Italy has a successor in Crown Prince Humberto, whose only child is a baby girl born this year.

King Haakon VII of Norway has a successor in Crown Prince Olaf, 31, who is the father of two little princesses, Ragnhild, 4, and Astrid, 2.

King Gustav V of Sweden, now 76, is heavily provided with heirs to the throne. His son, Crown Prince Gustav, is 52, and he in turn has four sons, Gustav, Sigvard, Bertil and Charles. The eldest, Prince Gustav, who will inherit the throne some day, recently became father of a baby girl.

Fitted For Usefulness

A rotten apple is not fit for use. About the only thing we can do with a rotten apple is to throw it away. You certainly would not put it in with sound apples, for it would contaminate every one it touched.

A rotten man is not fit for use either. But there is one outstanding difference between a rotten man and a rotten apple. Nothing can be done for the rotten apple, but a rotten man can be made sound and whole. The thing has been done again and again. But that is beside the present point.

What we want to emphasize is that a man should make himself fit for use and keep himself fit for use. Somebody is always looking for the person who is fit for use. Some power is always seeking the man who can be utilized. The person who gets on and up is usually the one who made himself ready to hold a higher and better place.

Usually we are not rewarded in advance for what we do. We do the thing first and get rewarded afterward. An employer is not likely to advance an employe and increase his salary to make him do better work. The promotion, when and if it comes, is usually the result of merit that has already been demonstrated.

Are we equipping ourselves to hold more important places than we now hold? Anybody can do that, no matter who he may be, no matter how humble his place in life. If he is a sifter of ashes, he can be such a corking good ash-sifter that his boss man will use him for more responsible work. Dependability is a fine virtue and much sought after.

The Supreme Being is, according to His own declaration, short of the right kind of help. He is always eagerly on the lookout for assistants who are capable and loyal. He needs them in enormous numbers to help Him in running the universe through eternity.

We should all keep our eyes on the future, both here and hereafter. Are we getting ready for it? Are we preparing ourselves to hold down a better job physically, mentally, spiritually? A man is not worth much from the eyebrows down. It is from the eyebrows up that counts. For in that comparatively small space, he decides vital things for himself.

We make our own future. We usually go into positions for which we have not fitted ourselves. Luck may seem to play a large part, but it does not. You will find that usually luck is on the side of those who do their best. The good intentions are all right. They are the first step toward achievement, but good intentions of themselves will get us nowhere. There is much truth in the old saying that the road to oblivion is paved with good intentions.

Get ready for use; improve your knowledge; increase your ability. No effort for improvement is ever lost. It will eventually fit in some place.

Another point: Never shrink from a responsibility. Never shirk a job. Never side-step an opportunity. Don't be afraid that you are not big enough for the place or strong enough for the undertaking. As a rule we are not called on to do things we are unable to perform. Strength is usually given us to do whatever we are drafted to do. As our day is, so shall our strength be. And, of course, the better we have fitted ourselves, the sooner will come our day.

DO SACRIFICES HINDER?

President Conant of Harvard is strongly opposed to boys working their way through school. He says the necessity of earning money distracts their minds from the important purpose of education. He would have them free from financial cares so as to permit of a more intense concentration upon the acquisition of knowledge.

There seems to be sound reasoning behind the conclusion of President Conant. However, there are factors that make difficult the fulfilment of his ideals. Until higher education is more readily available to young men of limited means, work is the only solution of their problems.

And in support of the theory of the efficacy of labor as an aid in obtaining an education and also in developing character, there is the example of many men, born in deepest poverty, who have paid their way through college by means of hard and continuous work and who do not seem to have suffered in consequence.

If the colleges of the country produce men of strong moral force, who are appreciative of what they have because of their struggles and sacrifices in gaining their intellectual possessions, they will serve their primary purpose, even though the number of great scholars produced may be limited.

The reformer usually wants to prevent some one else from doing what he doesn't want to do himself.

"Most of those who whistle at their work are big men." Yeah; it takes a big man to get away with it.

More Truth Than Poetry

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

UNDER THE DOME

Seventeen hundred proposed new laws greeted congress when it assembled.

Who can say that our solons are idlers
Or time-wasting warmers of chairs?
Who can say they recoil
From the arduous toil
Of conducting the nation's affairs?
Instead of mere peevish complaining,
They ought to be hailed with applause;
As a matter of fact
They're about to enact
Some seventeen hundred new laws.

Their pockets with statutes are bulging;
Every man lives in hope to succeed
In doing his part
With a confident heart
In serving the national need.
Already, in house and in senate,
Each bearing some lawmaker's name,
Heaps of measures you'll find
All of which are designed
To shower its author with fame.

Never fear that you will not get action
When these gentlemen take up their task;
More new legislation
Will flood this great nation
Than anyone ever could ask.
But though there be more and a-plenty,
The lads 'neath the capitol dome
Will find still more ways
To elicit the praise
Of the folks with the ballots, back home.

THERE ARE MILLIONS OF 'EM

Most of the people who want to run the country would run it ragged if they got the chance.

NO ESCAPE

Just as we began to feel a little more cheerful, congress was in session again.

HAVE A CARE

It has been discovered that ski-jumping is safer than football. But neither of them is exactly fool-proof.

Are We Better Or Worse?

By BRUCE CATTON

Over in Paris, a convict named Benjamin Ullmo, having served 26 years on France's Devil's Island, returns, looks over the world of 1935, and finds it terrible. He says he's going back to the penal colony, though he was offered a job in Paris.

The world today disgusts him, says this man who has seen nothing of it for 26 years.

"What has struck me most," he is quoted as saying, "is the extraordinary spiritual collapse in the world, and the decline in conscience and intelligence. I have been less impressed by the material progress . . . It is not so much the lowering of moral standards, as the immeasurable stupidity of present-day humanity, which regards itself as so superior."

Now this is worth listening to, for a man who has seen nothing of the world since 1909 ought to get a singular view of it. But it needn't be swallowed without thought.

In the first place, no thoughtful person regards humanity today as "so superior." No one can even glance around him without realizing that humanity today has all too slim a claim to superiority.

But was it so superior in 1909? The United States was being regaled with the Ballinger land scandals, and congress was busily engaged with the Payne-Aldrich tariff. Few look back at either incident today with any great pride.

And Europe was industriously straining, through its mesh of alliances and colonial and trade rivalries, the hell-broth that was to scald the entire earth with World war within five years. There was really nothing so superior about that, either.

The old argument as to whether people are better or worse than they used to be, whether the world is gradually falling from a past state of grace, is a pretty futile one.

The really important thing is that there is plenty of room for improvement in any case. Whether spirituality has 'collapsed," and whether conscience and intelligence have "declined," are not so important as the fact that they aren't what they ought to be today, and that they aren't what they must be if we are to create the better world that everybody is hoping for.

For it is the improvement in conscience, intelligence, and morality among individual men that will create the real permanent progress of the future.

People are too apt these days to put faith in a "system;" to believe that if this law were passed, that system adopted, the other panacea administered, everything would be all right.

SO THEY SAY

What has struck me most since my return to France is the extraordinary spiritual collapse of the world and the decline in conscience and intelligence. —Benjamin Ullmo, convict freed from Devil's Island, returning there in disgust.

New Deal In Washington

WASHINGTON.—The timing and placing of Miss Gertrude Stein's visit to Washington probably was the most appropriate occurrence in the history of the New Deal.

The few days before congress opened, if historians were onto their jobs, would be known as the "Bughouse Period." Miss Stein arrived plop in the middle of it and gave utterances in speeches and interviews which were promptly seized upon by hopeful persons who insisted here was a person who spoke the language of the New Deal. Nobody was in position to deny it.

It turned out at the last moment that Roosevelt hadn't been any too sure just what he was going to propose to the new congress.

He knew in a general way, of course, but everybody was hazy, as to details and most of the New Dealers suddenly found themselves frantic with cabinet, committee, subcommittee, and other meetings and conferences which left everybody tired and short-tempered, because everybody was burdened with altogether too much work.

Mr. Roosevelt's faculty for letting different people go away from him with different ideas as to what's really in his head didn't help calm the situation at all. Lots of things had to be smoothed out and understood all over again.

A couple of holidays and two half holidays came along, meaning days off for all government employes, and the big shots, so heavily dependent on the small fry, found that an added handicap in getting things done.

Naturally, nobody could keep track of what was going on around him, which made it all the easier to believe Miss Stein when she spoke in her well-known tongue.

Flu Grips Capital

Meanwhile, influenza became more common around town than at any time since wartime, and no end of appointments were canceled. Don Richberg was down with it, though that didn't keep him from rushing from bed to Cleveland for a speech.

Few New Dealers were in shape for much celebrating when New Year's eve arrived, though the boys and the girls in the lower strata of government service managed to provide the capital a full quota of noise.

Don "Owes" The General

You couldn't find anyone here who wouldn't wisecrack that General Johnson should have paid Richberg for the publicity resulting from exposure of the "Assistant President's" threat to sue for libel if Johnson wrote any falsehoods about him. The exchange of compliments between the two men was a highlight of the "bug-house period."

Johnson's line about "the ants of conscience in his pants" was the most-quoted one of fthe month and even Richberg laughed hard at it and told his friends he thought it was pretty darned funny.

Another amusing sidelight in the feud is to be seen on the wall of Richberg's study at home, where a photograph of Johnson, presented not so long ago, bears the inscription from the general:

"To Don—without whom NRA never would have meant a thing."

Height Of Stealing

Quite in keeping with everything else was the discovery that things aren't safe even on top of the Washington monument. Someone has stolen 107 platinum-tipped, gold-plated lightning rod points.

Congressmen Hide

Members of congress have kept themselves in semi-concealment here or stayed away until the last moment because they couldn't stand the pressure for jobs. . . . Joe Sinnott, head doorkeeper of the house, reported he had made 4,300 enemies because there were but 700 gallery seats and he had 5,000 opening day ticket requests. . . . Miss Marguerite Lehand, Roosevelt's confidential stenographer, was moaning because the president insists on keeping that dirty little once-white Republican elephant on his desk and won't let her replace it with a nice, clean new one. . . . And Gertrude Stein insisted that "the people the Russians are killing are just as nice as the people the Nazis are killing."

18 CANDIDATES ARE ENTERED IN BEAUTY CONTEST AT COLLEGE

RUSTON, La., Jan. 19.—(Special)—Eighteen candidates for beauty honors at Louisiana Tech have been elected by students of the institution, and Shirley Temple, five-year-old Fox film star, will select the six of the nominees that she believes to be the most beautiful. The young actress will judge pictures of the 18 to be sent to her.

The winners will be featured in the 1935 edition of the Lagniappe, Tech annual.

Each of three sororities at Tech elected two members as representatives in the beauty contest, and each of the four classes chose three girls. The sorority candidates elected are as follow:

Kappa Delta: Irene Goyne and Millie Lomax, both of Ruston.

Theta Upsilon: Hortense Callahan, Ruston, and Lillian Wise, El Dorado, Ark.

Beta Phi Alpha: Mary Lou Porter, Gilbert, and Margaret Lawton, Vivian.

Freshmen: Florine Kendrick, Homer; Marjorie Frazier, Minden, and Hazel McCarty, Shreveport.

Sophomores: Peggy Moseley, Keatchie; Sadie Hower, Winnsboro, and Elizabeth Rainwater, Ruston.

Juniors: Carolyn Cupp, Irene Taylor and Jo Ellen Posey, all of Ruston.

Seniors: Myrtle Braswell, Minden; Floyce Hatfield, Bunkie, and Martha Thompson, Hosston.

Although totally blind, E. A. Burdett of Wayne, N. J., built a seven-room, two-story house, doing all the work with exception of the masonry and plumbing. Burdett was not a carpenter before he became blind, but a jeweler.

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

VAIN GLORY.—Bahadur Shah, Grand Mogul and King of Deli from 1837 to 1857, was a descendant of the magnificent Akbar, and bore more than 100 pompous titles of which those enumerated in my cartoon are but a few. He was the emperor of the Arabian Nights, teacher of the world, lord of all the stars of the firmament, and of the world. But reality was in strange contrast with his fanciful dignity. The kings of Delhi was only nominal sovereigns and employes of the East India company since 1765. Bahadur was allotted only four feet of territory, on which he sat on a crystal throne, collecting the price of admission from curious tourists. Delhi was the center of the Sepoy rebellion in 1857 when Bahadur was proclaimed national emperor by the mutinous Sepoys. When the rebellion was suppressed, Bahadur was deposed by the British authorities, who courtmartialed him and expelled him to Rangoon in 1858.

Accompanying their distinguished offspring on rounds of the bright spots; are known and welcomed by all regulars of the Vain Stem; occasionally take fluttery little bows under the searching spotlights and affectionate adject ves of the masters of ceremony. The mothers of Milton Berle, Al Bernie, Grace Barrie, Eleanor Powell, Mitzi Mayfair and Joan Abbott are some I often see.

In the afternoons, scores of other mothers with pretty—and sometimes not so pretty—daughters in tow, haunt the offices of the cabarets and chorus agencies. The other day I overheard one praising a covering little buck-toothed brunette: "Not so pretty, maybe, in her street clothes. But oh, Mr. Blank—what a figure! I've taught her all I know about the theater, too, Mr. Blank. It has been my dream that Lola should be the sensation that her mother was on Broadway twenty years ago . . ."

Tallulah Bankhead is wearing one of the biggest emeralds I've seen . . . After months of astonished observation of the angular stance of young society when it dances, my favorite act is the satirical "Modernistic Fantasy" of Fowler and Tamara at the St. Moritz . . . A cigaret girl named Jean Kulp, at the Club Dawn Patrol, is a licensed embalmer. And in a rowdy, smoky spot on the west side a registered nurse plays an accordeon.

Chorine Shortage

Billy Rose had to go to Hollywood to find chorus girls for his circus-musical, scheduled for next spring. And Alan DeSylva, a dance director, tells me he doubts that a single beautiful and competant chorine is jobless in Manhattan . . . Saw Madge Evans, child star of the screen some fifteen years ago and still a busy actress of 22 . . . Hazel Dawn, too, shopping . . . Beatrice Lillie is an actress who doesn't much care whether she has a stage engagement or not. Guest-star appearances and indorsements pay just as well, she says.

Russia has decided that it's all right for its people to laugh at straight comedy acts, so the Government Organization of Music, Entertainment and Circus has a booking agent on Broadway. Acrobatics, dancing and Wild West acts (whatever they are) are acceptable. No magic, though—the Russians mustn't be fooled . . . A forthcoming play will be titled "How Beautiful With Shoes" . . . All in good fun, Jack Dempsey offered to lick anybody in the house at the Mayfair the other evening. But fled under the onslaught of panting little Victor Moore.

Lights of New York

By Paul Harrison

NEW YORK.—Meanderings: Broadway, the hardened artery, is a place where, to be successful, you have to be two chumps ahead of everyone else . . . where playboys discover that the first hundred dears are the hardest . . . and where most chorus girls marry for love—love of diamonds and sables and penthouse apartments.

George Jean Nathan has lived in the same apartment in the same hotel for 30 years . . . Willoughby Sharp, the mystery story writer, used to be a broker. Three years ago he decided nobody could solve the mystery of how to make a living in Wall street, so he turned to something easy, like "Who Killed Cock Robin?" . . . Georgie Price, however, quit show business for ticker tape a few months ago, and still insists he enjoys it . . . And a broker who ought to try the theater or the screen is Ira Haupt. Looks like Clark Gable.

A newspaper woman who appeared at a luncheon at the Friars' club was told no ladies were to be admitted. She said. "I'm no lady; I'm a reporter"—and she stayed.

Fitted For Usefulness

A rotten apple is not fit for use. About the only thing we can do with a rotten apple is to throw it away. You certainly would not put it in with sound apples, for it would contaminate every one it touched.

A rotten man is not fit for use either. But there is one outstanding difference between a rotten man and a rotten apple. Nothing can be done for the rotten apple, but a rotten man can be made sound and whole. The thing has been done again and again. But that is beside the present point.

What we want to emphasize is that a man should make himself fit for use and keep himself fit for use. Somebody is always looking for the person who is fit for use. Some power is always seeking the man who can be utilized. The person who gets on and up is usually the one who made himself ready to hold a higher and better place.

Usually we are not rewarded in advance for what we do. We do the thing first and get rewarded afterward. An employer is not likely to advance an employe and increase his salary to make him do better work. The promotion, when and if it comes, is usually the result of merit that has already been demonstrated.

Are we equipping ourselves to hold more important places than we now hold? Anybody can do that, no matter who he may be, no matter how humble his place in life. If he is a sifter of ashes, he can be such a corking good ash-sifter that his boss man will use him for more responsible work. Dependability is a fine virtue and much sought after.

The Supreme Being is, according to His own declaration, short of the right kind of help. He is always eagerly on the lookout for assistants who are capable and loyal. He needs them in enormous numbers to help Him in running the universe through eternity.

We should all keep our eyes on the future, both here and hereafter. Are we getting ready for it? Are we preparing ourselves to hold down a better job physically, mentally, spiritually? A man is not worth much from the eyebrows down. It is from the eyebrows up that counts. For in that comparatively small space, he decides vital things for himself.

We make our own future. We usually go into positions for which we have not fitted ourselves. Luck may seem to play a large part, but it does not. You will find that usually luck is on the side of those who do their best. The good intentions are all right. They are the first step toward achievement, but good intentions of themselves will get us nowhere. There is much truth in the old saying that the road to oblivion is paved with good intentions.

Get ready for use; improve your knowledge; increase your ability. No effort for improvement is ever lost. It will eventually fit in some place.

Another point: Never shrink from a responsibility. Never shirk a job. Never side-step an opportunity. Don't be afraid that you are not big enough for the place or strong enough for the undertaking. As a rule we are not called on to do things we are unable to perform. Strength is usually given us to do whatever we are drafted to do. As our day is, so shall our strength be. And, of course, the better we have fitted ourselves, the sooner will come our day.

DO SACRIFICES HINDER?

President Conant of Harvard is strongly opposed to boys working their way through school. He says the necessity of earning money distracts their minds from the important purpose of education. He would have them free from financial cares so as to permit of a more intense concentration upon the acquisition of knowledge.

There seems to be sound reasoning behind the conclusion of President Conant. However, there are factors that make difficult the fulfilment of his ideals. Until higher education is more readily available to young men of limited means, work is the only solution of their problems.

And in support of the theory of the efficacy of labor as an aid in obtaining an education and also in developing character, there is the example of many men, born in deepest poverty, who have paid their way through college by means of hard and continuous work and who do not seem to have suffered in consequence.

If the colleges of the country produce men of strong moral force, who are appreciative of what they have because of their struggles and sacrifices in gaining their intellectual possessions, they will serve their primary purpose, even though the number of great scholars produced may be limited.

The reformer usually wants to prevent some one else from doing what he doesn't want to do himself.

"Most of those who whistle at their work are big men." Yeah; it takes a big man to get away with it.

More Truth Than Poetry

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

UNDER THE DOME

Seventeen hundred proposed new laws greeted congress when it assembled.

Who can say that our solons are idlers
Or time-wasting warmers of chairs?
Who can say they recoil
From the arduous toil
Of conducting the nation's affairs?
Instead of mere peevish complaining,
They ought to be hailed with applause;
As a matter of fact
They're about to enact
Some seventeen hundred new laws.

Their pockets with statutes are bulging;
Every man lives in hope to succeed
In doing his part
With a confident heart
In serving the national need.
Already, in house and in senate,
Each bearing some lawmaker's name,
Heaps of measures you'll find
All of which are designed
To shower its author with fame.

Never fear that you will not get action
When these gentlemen take up their task;
More new legislation
Will flood this great nation
Than anyone ever could ask.
But though there be more and a-plenty,
The lads 'neath the capitol dome
Will find still more ways
To elicit the praise
Of the folks with the ballots, back home.

THERE ARE MILLIONS OF 'EM

Most of the people who want to run the country would run it ragged if they got the chance.

NO ESCAPE

Just as we began to feel a little more cheerful, congress was in session again.

HAVE A CARE

It has been discovered that ski-jumping is safer than football. But neither of them is exactly fool-proof.

Are We Better Or Worse?

By BRUCE CATTON

Over in Paris, a convict named Benjamin Ullmo, having served 26 years on France's Devil's Island, returns, looks over the world of 1935, and finds it terrible. He says he's going back to the penal colony, though he was offered a job in Paris.

The world today disgusts him, says this man who has seen nothing of it for 26 years.

"What has struck me most," he is quoted as saying, "is the extraordinary spiritual collapse in the world, and the decline in conscience and intelligence. I have been less impressed by the material progress . . . It is not so much the lowering of moral standards, as the immeasurable stupidity of present-day humanity, which regards itself as so superior."

Now this is worth listening to, for a man who has seen nothing of the world since 1909 ought to get a singular view of it. But it needn't be swallowed without thought.

In the first place, no thoughtful person regards humanity today as "so superior." No one can even glance around him without realizing that humanity today has all too slim a claim to superiority.

But was it so superior in 1909? The United States was being regaled with the Ballinger land scandals, and congress was busily engaged with the Payne-Aldrich tariff. Few look back at either incident today with any great pride.

And Europe was industriously straining, through its mesh of alliances and colonial and trade rivalries, the hell-broth that was to scald the entire earth with World war within five years. There was really nothing so superior about that, either.

The old argument as to whether people are better or worse than they used to be, whether the world is gradually falling from a past state of grace, is a pretty futile one.

The really important thing is that there is plenty of room for improvement in any case. Whether spirituality has "collapsed," and whether conscience and intelligence have "declined," are not so important as the fact that they aren't what they ought to be today, and that they aren't what they must be if we are to create the better world that everybody is hoping for.

For it is the improvement in conscience, intelligence, and morality among individual men that will create the real permanent progress of the future.

People are too apt these days to put faith in a "system;" to believe that if this law were passed, that system adopted, the other panacea administered, everything would be all right.

SO THEY SAY

What has struck me most since my return to France is the extraordinary spiritual collapse of the world and the decline in conscience and intelligence. —Benjamin Ullmo, convict freed from Devil's Island, returning there in disgust.

New Deal In Washington

WASHINGTON.—The timing and placing of Miss Gertrude Stein's visit to Washington probably was the most appropriate occurrence in the history of the New Deal.

The few days before congress opened, if historians were onto their jobs, would be known as the "Bughouse Period." Miss Stein arrived plop in the middle of it and gave utterances in speeches and interviews which were promptly seized upon by hopeful persons who insisted here was a person who spoke the language of the New Deal. Nobody was in position to deny it.

It turned out at the last moment that Roosevelt hadn't been any too sure just what he was going to propose to the new congress.

He knew in a general way, of course, but everybody was hazy, as to details and most of the New Dealers suddenly found themselves frantic with cabinet, committee, subcommittee, and other meetings and conferences which left everybody tired and short-tempered, because everybody was burdened with altogether too much work.

Mr. Roosevelt's faculty for letting different people go away from him with different ideas as to what's really in his head didn't help calm the situation at all. Lots of things had to be smoothed out and understood all over again.

A couple of holidays and two half holidays came along, meaning days off for all government employes, and the big shots, so heavily dependent on the small fry, found that an added handicap in getting things done.

Naturally, nobody could keep track of what was going on around him, which made it all the easier to believe Miss Stein when she spoke in her well-known tongue.

Flu Grips Capital

Meanwhile, influenza became more common around town than at any time since wartime, and no end of appointments were canceled. Don Richberg was down with it, though that didn't keep him from rushing from bed to Cleveland for a speech.

Few New Dealers were in shape for much celebrating when New Year's eve arrived, though the boys and the girls in the lower strata of government service managed to provide the capital a full quota of noise.

Don "Owes" The General

You couldn't find anyone here who wouldn't wisecrack that General Johnson should have paid Richberg for the publicity resulting from exposure of the "Assistant President's" threat to sue for libel if Johnson wrote any falsehoods about him. The exchange of compliments between the two men was a highlight of the "bug-house period."

Johnson's line about "the ants of conscience in his pants" was the most-quoted one of fthe month and even Richberg laughed hard at it and told his friends he thought it was pretty darned funny.

Another amusing sidelight in the feud is to be seen on the wall of Richberg's study at home, where a photograph of Johnson, presented not so long ago, bears the inscription from the general:

"To Don—without whom NRA never would have meant a thing."

Height Of Stealing

Quite in keeping with everything else was the discovery that things aren't safe even on top of the Washington monument. Someone has stolen 107 platinum-tipped, gold-plated lightning rod points.

Congressmen Hide

Members of congress have kept themselves in semi-concealment here or stayed away until the last moment because they couldn't stand the pressure for jobs. . . . Joe Sinnott, head doorkeeper of the house, reported he had made 4,300 enemies because there were but 700 gallery seats and he had 5,000 opening day ticket requests. . . . Miss Marguerite Lehand, Rooseveit's confidential stenographer, was moaning because the president insists on keeping that dirty little once-white Republican elephant on his desk and won't let her replace it with a nice, clean new one. . . . And Gertrude Stein insisted that "the people the Russians are killing are just as nice as the people the Nazis are killing."

18 CANDIDATES ARE ENTERED IN BEAUTY CONTEST AT COLLEGE

RUSTON, La., Jan. 19.—(Special)—Eighteen candidates for beauty honors at Louisiana Tech have been elected by students of the institution, and Shirley Temple, five-year-old Fox film star, will select the six of the nominees that she believes to be the most beautiful. The young actress will judge pictures of the 18 to be sent to her.

The winners will be featured in the 1935 edition of the Lagniappe, Tech annual.

Each of three sororities at Tech elected two members as representatives in the beauty contest, and each of the four classes chose three girls.

The sorority candidates elected are as follow:

Theta Upsilon: Hortense Callahan, Ruston, and Lillian Wise, El Dorado, Ark.

Beta Phi Alpha: Mary Lou Porter, Gilbert, and Margaret Lawton, Vivian.

Freshmen: Florine Kendrick, Homer; Marjorie Frazier, Minden, and Hazel McCarty, Shreveport.

Sophomores: Peggy Moseley, Keatchie; Sadie Hower, Winnsboro, and Elizabeth Rainwater, Ruston.

Juniors: Carolyn Cupp, Irene Taylor and Jo Ellen Posey, all of Ruston.

Seniors: Myrtle Braswell, Minden; Floyce Hatfield, Bunkie, and Martha Thompson, Hosston.

Although totally blind, E. A. Burdett of Wayne, N. J., built a seven-room, two-story house, doing all the work with exception of the masonry and plumbing. Burdett was not a carpenter before he became blind, but a jeweler.

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

VAIN GLORY.—Bahadur Shah, Grand Mogul and King of Deli from 1837 to 1857, was a descendant of the magnificent Akbar, and bore more than 100 pompous titles of which those enumerated in my cartoon are but a few. He was the emperor of the Arabian Nights, teacher of the world, lord of all the stars of the firmament, and of the world. But reality was in strange contrast with his fanciful dignity. The kings of Delhi was only nominal sovereigns and employes of the East India company since 1765. Bahadur was allotted only four feet of territory, on which he sat on a crystal throne, collecting the price of admission from curious tourists. Delhi was the center of the Sepoy rebellion in 1857 when Bahadur was proclaimed national emperor by the mutinous Sepoys. When the rebellion was suppressed, Bahadur was deposed by the British authorities, who courtmartialed him and expelled him to Rangoon in 1858.

HAMBONE'S MEDITATIONS

By Paul Harrison

NEW YORK.—Meanderings: Broadway, the hardened artery, is a place where, to be successful, you have to be two chumps ahead of everyone else . . . where playboys discover that the first hundred dears are the hardest . . . and where most chorus girls marry for love—love of diamonds and sables and penthouse apartments.

George Jean Nathan has lived in the same apartment in the same hotel for 30 years . . . Willoughby Sharp, the mystery story writer, used to be a broker. Three years ago he decided nobody could solve the mystery of how to make a living in Wall street, so he turned to something easy, like "Who Killed Cock Robin?" . . . Georgie Price, however, quit show business for ticker tape a few months ago, and still insists he enjoys it . . . And a broker who ought to try the theater or the screen is Ira Haupt. Looks like Clark Gable.

A newspaper woman who appeared at a luncheon at the Friars' club was told no ladies were to be admitted. She said: "I'm no lady; I'm a reporter"—and she stayed.

There are a number of mothers who have a place in Broadway night life. Accompanying their distinguished offspring on rounds of the bright spots; are known and welcomed by all regulars of the Vain Stem; occasionally take fluttery little bows under the searching spotlights and affectionate adjectives of the masters of ceremony. The mothers of Milton Berle, Al Bernie, Grace Barrie, Eleanor Powell, Mitzi Mayfair and Joan Abbott are some I often see.

In the afternoons, scores of other mothers with pretty—and sometimes not so pretty—daughters in tow, haunt the offices of the cabarets and chorus agencies. The other day I overheard one praising a cowering little buck-toothed brunette: "Not so pretty, maybe, in her street clothes. But oh, Mr. Blank—what a figure! I've taught her all I know about the theater, too, Mr. Blank. It has been my dream that Lola should be the sensation that her mother was on Broadway twenty years ago . . ."

Tallulah Bankhead is wearing one of the biggest emeralds I've seen . . . After months of astonished observation of the angular stance of young society when it dances, my favorite act is the satirical "Modernistic Fantasy" of Fowler and Tamara at the St. Moritz . . . A cigaret girl named Jean Kulp, at the Club Dawn Patrol, is a licensed embalmer. And in a rowdy, smoky spot on the west side a registered nurse plays an accordeon.

Chorine Shortage

Billy Rose had to go to Hollywood to find chorus girls for his circus-musical, scheduled for next spring. And Alan DeSylva, a dance director, tells me he doubts that a single beautiful and competant chorine is jobless in Manhattan . . . Saw Madge Evans, child star of the screen some fifteen years ago and still a busy actress of 22 . . . Hazel Dawn, too, shopping . . . Beatrice Lillie is an actress who doesn't much care whether she has a stage engagement or not. Guest-star appearances and indorsements pay just as well, she says.

Russia has decided that it's all right for its people to laugh at straight comedy acts, so the Government Organization of Music, Entertainment and Circus has a booking agent on Broadway. Acrobatics, dancing and Wild West acts (whatever they are) are acceptable. No magic, though—the Russians mustn't be fooled . . . A forthcoming play will be titled "How Beautiful With Shoes" . . . All in good fun, Jack Dempsey offered to lick anybody in the house at the Mayfair the other evening. But fled under the onslaught of panting little Victor Moore.

LEWIS PROPOSES PLAN TO RAISE PENSION MONEY

Would Finance Old-Age Funds Through Income, Inheritance Taxes

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—(AP)—A proposal that the states raise their share of the money to finance old age pensions through income and inheritance taxes was made today by Representative Lewis, Democrat, Maryland, co-author of the bill to carry out the administration plan.

Lewis made his proposal in a radio speech at about the same time some other members of congress were expressing concern for the plight of the man between 40 and 65 and arrangements were being made for congressional scrutiny of the plan in hearings next week.

These members, while declining for the present to be quoted, said they were endeavoring to work out modifications to the program of President Roosevelt which would aid the unemployed person who was more than 40 and less than 65.

These members pointed out that most business organizations had a maximum age at which they employed persons, some establishments hiring no one over 35. For the person between 40 and 65, they said, it was extremely difficult to obtain employment.

The old age pension plan of President Roosevelt contemplates giving pensions to persons who have reached 65.

Some of those who aided in working out the pension system said that while the person between 40 and 65 would not be eligible for old age pensions, he would not be barred from employment in the public works program which is to be hurried through congress.

Student Nurses To Get Recreation Equipment

Plans for securing recreational equipment for student nurses of St. Francis sanitarium were discussed at a meeting of the extra-curricula activities committee Friday night. Included in the equipment to be secured will be a ping pong table to be secured by Dr. John G. Snelling.

It was also decided to request each book club of the city to designate each month a member to present a book review before a meeting of the nurses.

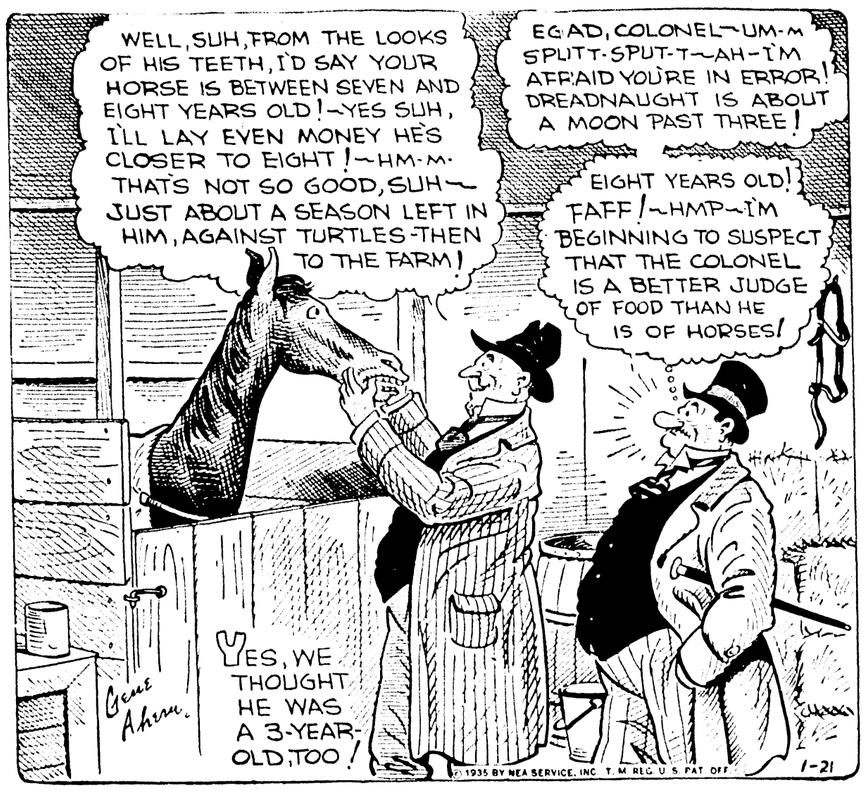
Dr. B. M. McKoin is chairman of the extra-curricula activities committee and Miss Sybil Renaud is secretary. Miss Lucyle Godwin, director of the Monroe recreation department, is in charge of the recreational phases of the committee's work.

Jonesboro Girl Wins Scholarship At Tech

RUSTON, La., Jan. 19.—(Special)—Miriam Foster of Jonesboro, a student at Louisiana Tech, has been awarded a scholarship to the University of Wisconsin as a reward for outstanding scholastic attainment and extra-curricular work at the college here. The scholarship is given by the national organization of Kappa Delta, social sorority, of which Miss Foster is a member.

A similar scholarship was awarded by Kappa Delta last fall to Virginia Holland of Ruston, who is attending the University of Washington.

OUR BOARDING HOUSE —By Ahern



Young Voters Pick Young Officials In Young Town

(By NEA Service)

BOYS TOWN, Neb., Jan. 19.—You've never seen a story with this dateline before. But it's correct.

Boys Town is the newest town in Nebraska. And it's aptly named, for its population is made up almost entirely of boys ranging in age from 8 to 16, about 200 of them. The postoffice department has recognized it as a town, and is commissioning a postmaster here.

Better known is Boys Town, perhaps, as Father Flannagan's Boys' home—an institution started 17 years ago, 10 miles west of Omaha, by a young Irish Catholic priest, the Rev. Edward J. Flannagan.

The mail addressed to the home has been growing in volume so rapidly that it was decided to set up a postoffice here. And, since the boys felt that any community having a postoffice ought also to have a mayor and other elected officers, they are now busily engaged in setting up a "city government" and electing a complete set of officials.

Wage Spirited Campaign

In the auditorium and dormitory buildings of Boys Town there are great goings-on these days. Mass meetings, and stump speeches, and electioneering. Study of the new one-house legislature just adopted by their home state of Nebraska. The manager plan.

Election cards, printed in the institution's own printing plant by the boys themselves, are being freely passed out by the score of boys who have already announced their hope of becoming mayor. It's the best possible training for future citizenship and practical politicians from nearby Omaha have frequently visited Boys Town to give the youthful electioneers pointers on how to run a campaign.

In fact, so fast did the boys "catch on" to political methods that some of the candidates managed to get a "corner" on most of the Christmas candy, and when the campaign started the day after Christmas they distributed it just as older politicians pass out cigars.

And six prospective voters went to the infirmary with the stomach-ache, not being used to sweets in such quantities.

Devotes Life to Boys

Father Flannagan's Boys' Home, or Boys Town, as the postal guide will soon list it, is a non-sectarian institution that has grown through many years out of Father Flannagan's fondness and sympathy for lonely, homeless boys.

Shortly after his ordination, 20 years ago, Father Flannagan became absorbed by the procession of down-and-outers who filed daily in a sordid parade through the police courts.

He started a workingman's hotel in an effort to provide a haven for these discarded men. He made more than 2,000 case records of such men who stayed at his hotel. And he found that the answer in most instances was a homeless and neglected childhood.

So he decided that the way to stop this fearful waste was to attack it at the source—to find these neglected boys and give them a better chance.

Home Grows Rapidly

Maintaining in juvenile courts his belief that "there isn't such a thing as a bad boy," Father Flannagan took home with him to his parish house three lads turned over to him by the juvenile court, and with a couple of other stray newsies who had been staying at his hotel, he moved into a large old vacant house, paying a month's rent in advance with money he borrowed.

Their first Christmas dinner came out of a barrel of sauer-kraut which a friend sent to the "home."

More boys gravitated to the refuge and within four years his work had attracted such attention that he was able to buy a farm for the home, and nine years later, to erect modern brick buildings.

Nearly twoscore boys, as a matter of fact, came to the haven by railroad or bus with tags pinned to their ragged clothing: "To Father Flannagan's Home," with no further explanation as to where they came from or why.

3,500 Given Start

Now, after 17 years, some 3,500 boys have been taken in, given schooling, care and a start in life. Hundreds of them have made good in after life as professional men, lawyers, doctors, dentists, and pharmacists all over the United States and Canada.

Catholic and Protestant, black and white, Mexican, Chinese, Brazilian, American Indian boys from 48 states, it's all the same in Boys Town, whose 200 citizens now include all these categories.

Thirty-one nationalities have passed through the portals of Boys Town.

They're taught all kinds of trades, besides formal education. Much of the food for the community is raised by the boys themselves on the farm land surrounding the buildings.

Some of the boys have won 4-H club prizes with cattle they raised and cared for themselves. Trades and crafts like printing, carpentering, and blacksmithing, are stressed.

And now politics. In the youngest town in the country, the youngest voters are campaigning to elect what will undoubtedly be the youngest mayor.

MRS. COX HEADS SOCIAL COUNCIL

Miss Katie McGee And Miss Bernice Wright Are Other Officers

Mrs. Fagan Cox, secretary of the Y. W. C. A., was elected president of the Council of Social Agencies at a meeting of the organization Saturday afternoon at the Methodist church annex. Miss Katie McGee of the Presbyterian church, was elected vice-president and Miss Bernice Wright of the Ouachita Tuberculosis and Health association, was named secretary-treasurer.

Saturday's meeting was called to order by Miss Elizabeth Langford, retiring vice-president, with 16 members present and with the Presbyterian and Methodist churches in charge of the program. Miss Langford turned the program over to Miss McGee and she, in turn, turned the meeting over to Rev. W. C. Scott, pastor of the First Methodist church. Rev. Thomas F. Jett, pastor of the Christian church, responded to talks.

Miss Lucyle Godwin, chairman of the wholesale toy shop conducted at Christmas, under the sponsorship of the Council of Social Agencies, made a report on the work of the toy shop and, on motion of Miss Langford, the report was incorporated in the minutes.

S. H. McClary, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of Monroe and West Monroe, made a motion that the time of the meeting be changed to 12:30 o'clock on each third Saturday and the motion was adopted.

Catholic women will serve next month at the Lieber building. Mr. McClary will have charge of the February meeting.

Miss Godwin's report showed that as a result of the work of the toy shop, toys were issued to 1,582 children and that no money was spent by the council. Everything distributed in the toy campaign was donated, children giving used toys, adults renovating the toys and different organizations helping in the distribution.

LEWIS PROPOSES PLAN TO RAISE PENSION MONEY

Would Finance Old-Age Funds Through Income, Inheritance Taxes

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—(AP)—A proposal that the states raise their share of the money to finance old age pensions through income and inheritance taxes was made today by Representative Lewis, Democrat, Maryland, co-author of the bill to carry out the administration plan.

Lewis made his proposal in a radio speech at about the same time some other members of congress were expressing concern for the plight of the man between 40 and 65 and arrangements were being made for congressional scrutiny of the plan in hearings next week.

These members, while declining for the present to be quoted, said they were endeavoring to work out modifications to the program of President Roosevelt which would aid the unemployed person who was more than 40 and less than 65.

These members pointed out that most business organizations had a maximum age at which they employed persons, some establishments hiring no one over 35. For the person between 40 and 65, they said, it was extremely difficult to obtain employment.

The old age pension plan of President Roosevelt contemplates giving pensions to persons who have reached 65.

Some of those who aided in working out the pension system said that while the person between 40 and 65 would not be eligible for old age pensions, he would not be barred from employment in the public works program which is to be hurried through congress.

Student Nurses To Get Recreation Equipment

Plans for securing recreational equipment for student nurses of St. Francis sanitarium were discussed at a meeting of the extra-curricula activities committee Friday night. Included in the equipment to be secured will be a ping pong table to be secured by Dr. John G. Snelling.

It was also decided to request each book club of the city to designate each month a member to present a book review before a meeting of the nurses.

Dr. B. M. McKoin is chairman of the extra-curricula activities committee and Miss Sybil Renaud is secretary. Miss Lucyle Godwin, director of the Monroe recreation department, is in charge of the committee's work.

Young Voters Pick Young Officials In Young Town

(By NEA Service)

BOYS TOWN, Neb., Jan. 19.—You've never seen a story with this dateline before. But it's correct.

Boys Town is the newest town in Nebraska. And it's aptly named, for its population is made up almost entirely of boys ranging in age from 8 to 16, about 200 of them. The postoffice department has recognized it as a town, and is commissioning a postmaster here.

Better known is Boys Town, perhaps, as Father Flannagan's Boys' home—an institution started 17 years ago, 10 miles west of Omaha, by a young Irish Catholic priest, the Rev. Edward J. Flannagan.

The mail addressed to the home has been growing in volume so rapidly that it was decided to set up a postoffice here. And, since the boys felt that any community having a postoffice ought also to have a mayor and other elected officers, they are now busily engaged in setting up a "city government" and electing a complete set of officials.

Wage Spirited Campaign

In the auditorium and dormitory buildings of Boys Town there are great goings-on these days. Mass meetings, and stump speeches, and electioneering. Study of the new one-house legislature just adopted by their home state of Nebersaka. The manager plan.

Election cards, printed in the institution's own printing plant by the boys themselves, are being freely passed out by the score of boys who have already announced their hope of becoming mayor. It's the best possible training for future citizenship, and practical politicians from nearby Omaha have frequently visited Boys Town to give the youthful electioneers pointers on how to run a campaign.

In fact, so fast did the boys "catch on" to political methods that some of the candidates managed to get a "corner" on most of the Christmas candy, and when the campaign started the day after Christmas they distributed it just as older politicians pass out cigars.

And six prospective voters went to the infirmary with the stomach-ache, not being used to sweets in such quantities.

Devotes Life to Boys

Father Flannagan's Boys' Home, or Boys Town, as the postal guide will soon list it, is a non-sectarian institution that has grown through many years out of Father Flannagan's fondness and sympathy for lonely, homeless boys.

Shortly after his ordination, 20 years ago, Father Flannagan became absorbed by the procession of down-and-outers who filed daily in a sordid parade through the police courts.

He started a workingman's hotel in an effort to provide a haven for these discarded men. He made more than 2,000 case records of such men who stayed at his hotel. And he found that the answer in most instances was a homeless and neglected childhood.

So he decided that the way to stop this fearful waste was to attack it at the source—to find these neglected boys and give them a better chance.

to hold up a South Brooklyn drug store.

Albert Musgrif, into whose taxicab the trio had jumped, was slain, either by the pursuing police or by his unwelcome fares. It was Musgrif's first day on a new job after months of illness.

This morning the Farugia brothers, Samuel and Joseph, died in another gun duel with police when they resisted arrest on vagrancy charges.

The brothers, on parole from Connecticut state prison, had been widely sought in connection with the slaying of a policeman and a civilian in the upper east side last May. Joseph was slain by police bullets and Samuel died by his own hand, rather than surrender.

The two were accused of killing the policeman while on their way to burn down a church in the hope of ridding themselves of "evil spirits." After killing Patrolman Lawrence Ward, police charge, they shot Ernest Krahenbuel, a bystander, in the mistaken belief he was a detective.

The argument between two policemen, which provided a tragic aftermath to the series of killings, occurred in a restaurant. Patrolman John J. Masterson, 38, wounded Patrolman John J. Hopkins, 40, and then fired a bullet through his own head.

Brazilian Newsprint Plant Rivals Norwegian Paper

CURITYBA, Brazil, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Newsprint at reasonably low prices was promised by a paper company just formed here after it had purchased a tract as large as Manhattan Island and containing 8,500,000 pines.

There is a question of quality, but it is expected that expert treatment of the pulp will result in fine newsprint. If that result is attained, all newspapers of the state of Sao Paulo and all those in Rio de Janeiro will be supplied. At present, most of Brazil's newsprint comes from Norway.

The company paid $547,500 for the tract, located in the Tibagy river valley, west of this capital of Matto Grosso state.

rangements for the ball, emphasized on Saturday the importance of the event, as one of the practical means by which the people may show their appreciation of the president and his work for the American people. He said:

"A little item I saw in the paper a few days ago made me think of this. It was a story about how the president, learning that a little boy in Chicago had become paralyzed and was being kept alive only through the services of the "iron lung," had written the little boy a personal letter filled with kindness and humanity and an admonition "be sure to do exactly as the doctor tells you."

"And the little boy read and reread the letter, followed the advice given by the president and was able to eat his Thanksgiving dinner alone. It is expected he will recover.

"If I were today to be asked what has thus far been the greatest accomplishment of Franklin D. Roosevelt as president and if at the close of his term I should be aksed that question, regardless of what things he may do as a public office, I should unhesitatingly say:

"He has done two great, outstanding things: First, he wrote a letter to a little boy who was paralyzed. Second, he has made Warm Springs accessible to a large number of children whose legs have been crippled."

There seems to be wide realization of the importance of the movement, not only to Louisiana but to the entire country. It is no stretch of language to say that checks have been literally pouring in. Many of the letters sent to Square Deal headquarters contained checks. One Philadelphia contributor sent $250; from Los Angeles came $25; from San Francisco $50; from Minneapolis $250. At this time the association is in little danger of having its activities cramped because funds are lacking.

Square Dealers, as they have come to be known, attribute the remarkable growth of their organization to its thoroughly non-political character. At association heaquarters, politicians are the least popular of all visitors. Outside of headquarters, they are held at arms length. The association germinated from the seed of the wage-earner. It is a popular movement basing its sole demand for aid and support on loyal and patriotic citizenship.

Branches, or "chapters," as they are called, are being organized in every section of the state. The demand for speakers at the organization meetings can hardly be met. But, of course, it is being met. If the present swing does not change, there will be very few communities in Louisiana without a chapter of the Square Deal association.

So far as the official heads here are concerned, they regard success for the movement as so certain that they are speculating on the form it will take. A special session of the legislature in the near future to repeal all of the measures with the aid of which Senator Huey P. Long sought to centralize power in the state and to punish his political enemeis, is viewed by the Square Dealers as assured. And, as the heads of the movement regard it, so great will be the public pressure for repeal when this session is held, that the Long system of control will be completely discarded by the state.

When the bill imposing a tax of five cents per barrel on petroleum was finally passed in December, the public was given very little information on the subject. The tax was imposed in the form of senate amendments and just what these provided the legislature was not permitted to ascertain.

But, promulgation of the act revealed a great deal. It disclosed, for instance, that there is plenty of time to repeal the petroleum tax before one dollar of it is paid into the state treasury. Under the terms of the act, the five cents tax became effective on January 2. But the first payments are to be made to the supervisor of public accounts on April 30 of this year.

Companies refining petroleum are required to file sworn reports not later than thirty days after each yearly quater (quarters fall on March 31, June 30, September 30 and December 31) of the "amount of products of crude oil, petroleum or products thereof so manufactured, refined or distilled; the amount, quantity and number of barrels of products, petroleum or products thereof obtained thereby or produced therefom." At the same time the companies are required to send checks for the amount of taxes due.

This money is paid directly to the supervisor of public accounts, but it must be turned over to the state treasurer. One paragraph of the act reads: "All licenses collected under the provisions of this act shall be transmitted to the state treasurer at the same time, in the same manner and on the same terms as settlements are made for other state collections."

This means that the five cents per barrel tax collections must be in the state treasury not later than the 10th of the month succeeding the month of collection. Once in the treasury, it cannot be constitutionally withdrawn except by direct appropriation. So, while Senator Long may promise to rebate a portion of the tax he cannot keep this pledge without legislative authority. Of course, rebating may be done without this authority, but not without the danger of those who receive the money being forced to return it.

Baton Rouge looks upon repeal of the refinery tax as a foregone conclusion. It thinks that Senator Long has already privately promised to repeal it and that not one dollar of the tax money will ever be paid. There is plenty of time for a session of this kind. If the senator can save his face by getting Louisiana oil refineries to increase their use of Louisiana oil, it is expected he will be satisfied.

But, if the Square Deal association has its way, the repealing process will not stop there. It will take in laws giving the state authority over police and firemen; subordinating school teachers to political control; providing for fixed elections; giving the state administration supervisory control of sheriffs' deputies and clerks; politicalizing bar examinations and selections; affording control of municipal governments; giving the governor authority to fill all vacancies and numerous statutes punishing politically apostate communities and organizations.

All this, it must be understood, is to be accomplished peacefully. There will be constant and unremitting attention paid to preparedness. Military rules and practices will govern the control and development of the Square Deal association. George Washington's admonition about constant vigilance being the price of safety will be cherished and obeyed. From one end of the state to the other, the Square Deal association expects to be thoroughly prepared for action.

But, it does not expect to be forced to use the instruments within its reach. Square Deal association leaders predict that before very long, Senator Huey P. Long will be contemplating the shattered and malodorous wreck of his political machine in Louisiana. It was built quickly; but the prediction is made here that it will be as quickly destroyed.

Many have disagreed with the Square Dealers' view of it. Their comment on the attitude of those who take issue with them is, "Wait and see."

idly moved furniture and trunks to places of safety, but firemen prevented the flames spreading.

Built in 1921, Gorgas hall was designed for 60 students, but crowded conditions at the university saw more than that number housed in the building.

Damage was estimated at more than $50,000, partially covered by insurance. The cause of the fire remained a mystery, but there was no indication that it was of incendiary origin.

The building was named for the late General William Crawford Gorgas, one of Alabama's best loved heroes, whose sanitation work during the building of the Panama canal brought him international notice.

He was a son of General Josiah Gorgas, surgeon general of the Confederate states army, and a former president of the university. The Gorgas home, on the university campus, is one of Tuscaloosa's landmarks.

Dr. George H. Denny, president of the university, said plans for replacing the burned structure, would probably begin at an early date.

His plan of pensions for the old does not approach the generosity of Dr. Townsend who would give $200 a month for life to everybody past sixty years of age, and not a criminal, thus spending for that pension alone, more than twenty times as much as the entire national government spent before the war. Some things even the United States can't afford, although some seem to doubt it.

THE PRESIDENT'S plan would give $30 a month, not forty as originally stated to "dependent persons now over sixty-five," and less to the unemployed over sixty, under sixty-five.

Old people without money or friends will tell you that thirty dollars a month, that they would actually get, interests them more than two hundred dollars a month that the country could not pay, although millions urge the impossible payment, and many officials, fearful for their jobs, advocate the impossibility.

The Roosevelt plan includes government aid for "dependent children" by helping the states to support mothers' pension systems.

GOVERNMENT aid to state and local public health agencies, and strengthening federal public health service, is recommended, wisely.

A nation rich enough to afford first-class veterinary service for cows and other animals in labor, might well spend some money to end conditions under which the number of women that die in childbirth in the United States is greater than in any other civilized country on earth.

DR. SUKENIK, professor of archeology in the Hebrew university of Jerusalem, has discovered graves six thousand years old, that go far back of Moses and Job, and others well known.

These graves were dug, and filled, long before the Jewish nation had made Jerusalem their principal city, when other, earlier races inhabited the site of "old Jerusalem."

WHAT DID THOSE ancients, whose bones are now found, think about, before they went into the tomb? They believed, whoever they may have been, that they were the most important people on earth, more interesting to the ruler of the universe than any race.

They believed that all, not of their race or religion, were inferior creatures to be slaughtered plentifully, that heaven was created especially for them and hell for those that differed with them in religion, and ancestry.

And men have not changed very much since those funerals of six thousand years ago.

St. Augustine, Fla., oldest city in the United States, was founded by the Spaniards in 1565, and at various times has been the possession of Spain, France, England, the Confederate States of America and the United States.

Farmers Buy Oil, Gas On Co-Operative Plan

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Farmers have organized 93 co-operative oil and gas buying associations which do more than $50,000 worth of business each year, reports to the farm credit administration show.

Another hundred co-operatives are doing more than $28,000 a year.

The Co-Operative Union Oil company of North Kansas and Missouri has the largest business of those reporting. Its sales were just under $1,500,000 for the year.

Net earnings of 180 co-operatives totaled $1,452,996. Two-thirds of the sum was returned to the customers as patronage dividends. The remainder took care of reserves and dividends on capital.

Thirty-two workers were killed in coal mine accidents in Alabama during 1934 as compared with 22 in 1933.

FOUR MEN SLAIN AND 8 ARRESTED IN GUN BATTLES

to hold up a South Brooklyn drug store.

Albert Musgrif, into whose taxicab the trio had jumped, was slain, either by the pursuing police or by his unwelcome fares. It was Musgrif's first day on a new job after months of idleness.

This morning the Farugia brothers, Samuel and Joseph, died in another gun duel with police when they resisted arrest on vagrancy charges.

The brothers, on parole from Connecticut state prison, had been widely sought in connection with the slaying of a policeman and a civilian in the upper east side last May. Joseph was slain by police bullets and Samuel died by his own hand, rather than surrender.

The two were accused of killing the policeman while on their way to burn down a church in the hope of hidding themselves of "evil spirits." After killing Patrolman Lawrence Ward, police charge, they shot Ernest Krahenbuel, a bystander, in the mistaken belief he was a detective.

The argument between two policemen, which provided a tragic aftermath to the series of killings, occurred in a restaurant. Patrolman John J. Masterson, 38, wounded Patrolman John J. Hopkins, 40, and then fired a bullet through his own head.

Brazilian Newsprint Plant Rivals Norwegian Paper

CURITYBA, Brazil, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Newsprint at reasonably low prices was promised by a paper company just formed here after it had purchased a tract as large as Manhattan Island and containing 8,500,000 pines.

There is a question of quality, but it is expected that expert treatment of the pulp will result in fine newsprint. If that result is attained, all newspapers of the state of Sao Paulo and all those in Rio de Janeiro will be supplied. At present, most of Brazil's newsprint comes from Norway.

The company paid $547,500 for the tract, located in the Tibagy river valley, west of this capital of Matto Grosso state.

rangements for the ball, emphasized on Saturday the importance of the event, as one of the practical means by which the people may show their appreciation of the president and his work for the American people. He said:

"A little item I saw in the paper a few days ago made me think of this. It was a story about how the president, learning that a little boy in Chicago had become paralyzed and was being kept alive only through the services of the "iron lung," had written the little boy a personal letter filled with kindness and humanity and an admonition "be sure to do exactly as the doctor telis you."

"And the little boy read and reread the letter, followed the advice given by the president and was able to eat his Thanksgiving dinner alone. It is expected he will recover.

"If I were today to be asked what has thus far been the greatest accomplishment of Franklin D. Roosevelt as president and if at the close of his term I should be aksed that question, regardless of what things he may do as a public office, I should unhesitatingly say:

"He has done two great, outstanding things: First, he wrote a letter to a little boy who was paralyzed. Second, he has made Warm Springs accessible to a large number of children whose legs have been crippled."

There seems to be wide realization of the importance of the movement, not only to Louisiana but to the entire country. It is no stretch of language to say that checks have been literally pouring in. Many of the letters sent to Square Deal headquarters contained checks. One Philadelphia contributor sent $250; from Los Angeles came $25; from San Francisco $50; from Minneapolis $250. At this time the association is in little danger of having its activities cramped because funds are lacking.

Square Dealers, as they have come to be known, attribute the remarkable growth of their organization to its thoroughly non-political character. At association heaquarters, politicians are the least popular of all visitors. Outside of headquarters, they are held at arms length. The association germinated from the seed of the wage-earner. It is a popular movement basing its sole demand for aid and support on loyal and patriotic citizenship.

Branches, or "chapters," as they are called, are being organized in every section of the state. The demand for speakers at the organization meetings can hardly be met. But, of course, it is being met. If the present swing does not change, there will be very few communities in Louisiana without a chapter of the Square Deal association.

So far as the official heads here are concerned, they regard success for the movement as so certain that they are speculating on the form it will take. A special session of the legislature in the near future to repeal all of the measures with the aid of which Senator Huey P. Long sought to centralize power in the state and to punish his political enemeis, is viewed by the Square Dealers as assured. And, as the heads of the movement regard it, so great will be the public pressure for repeal when this session is held, that the Long system of control will be completely discarded by the state.

When the bill imposing a tax of five cents per barrel on petroleum was finally passed in December, the public was given very little information on the subject. The tax was imposed in the form of senate amendments and just what these provided the legislature was not permitted to ascertain.

But, promulgation of the act revealed a great deal. It disclosed, for instance, that there is plenty of time to repeal the petroleum tax before one dollar of it is paid into the state treasury. Under the terms of the act, the five cents tax became effective on January 2. But the first payments are to be made to the supervisor of public accounts on April 30 of this year.

Companies refining petroleum are required to file sworn reports not later than thirty days after each yearly quater (quarters fall on March 31, June 30, September 30 and December 31) of the "amount of products of crude oil, petroleum or products thereof so manufactured, refined or distilled; the amount, quantity and number of barrels of products, petroleum or products thereof obtained thereby or produced therefom." At the same time the companies are required to send checks for the amount of taxes due.

This money is paid directly to the supervisor of public accounts, but it must be turned over to the state treasurer. One paragraph of the act reads: "All licenses collected under the provisions of this act shall be transmitted to the state treasurer at the same time, in the same manner and on the same terms as settlements are made for other state collections."

This means that the five cents per barrel tax collections must be in the state treasury not later than the 10th of the month succeeding the month of collection. Once in the treasury, it cannot be constitutionally withdrawn except by direct appropriation. So, while Senator Long may promise to rebate a portion of the tax he cannot keep this pledge without legislative authority. Of course, rebating may be done without this authority, but not without the danger of those who receive the money being forced to return it.

Baton Rouge looks upon repeal of the refinery tax as a foregone conclusion. It thinks that Senator Long has already privately promised to repeal it and that not one dollar of the tax money will ever be paid. There is plenty of time for a session of this kind. If the senator can save his face by getting Louisiana oil refineries to increase their use of Louisiana oil, it is expected he will be satisfied.

But, if the Square Deal association has its way, the repealing process will not stop there. It will take in laws giving the state authority over police and firemen; subordinating school teachers to political control; providing for fixed elections; giving the state administration supervisory control of sheriffs' deputies and clerks; politicalizing bar examinations and selections; affording control of municipal governments; giving the governor authority to fill all vacancies and numerous statutes punishing politically apostate communities and organizations.

All this, it must be understood, is to be accomplished peacefully. There will be constant and unremitting attention paid to preparedness. Military rules and practices will govern the control and development of the Square Deal association. George Washington's admonition about constant vigilance being the price of safety will be cherished and obeyed. From one end of the state to the other, the Square Deal association expects to be thoroughly prepared for action.

But, it does not expect to be forced to use the instruments within its reach. Square Deal association leaders predict that before very long, Senator Huey P. Long will be contemplating the shattered and malodorous wreck of his political machine in Louisiana. It was built quickly; but the prediction is made here that it will be as quickly destroyed.

Many have disagreed with the Square Dealers' view of it. Their comment on the attitude of those who take issue with them is, "Wait and see."

to force a vote. Under that procedure, the bill would be voted upon on March 11.

The general congressional week will start with a bang Monday when the house ways and means committee holds first hearings on the excompanying social security measure, and the house appropriations committee calls in Secretary Ickes and Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, for a discussion of the $4,880,000,000 "dole" and work-relief appropriation.

House Republicans, who have been talking loudly against the idea of giving the president this huge fund in a lump sum without ear-marking it, were called today by Representative Snell of New York, their leader, into a conference Monday night on the subject.

Before that meeting is held Edwin E. Witte, adviser to the cabinet board on economic security, will appear before the ways and means committee as the first witness to outline the administration's plan for old-age pensions, job insurance and the other things in the Wagner-Lewis-Doughton bill.

On the same day, the senate munitions committee will begin its scheduled 10 weeks of hearing attempting to determine first whether shipbuilders have acted in collusion to bring up the price on navy vessels. Senator Huey P. Long on that day will demand reconsideration of the confirmation of James A. Moffett as federal housing administrator on the ground that he is a "Standard Oil" man.

MUSICAL TREAT AT CAPITOL TODAY

AT LOCAL THEATERS

AT THE PARAMOUNT—Ever since Maude Adams humanized the lovable character of Babbie in Sir James Barrie's never-to-be-forgotten story and play, "The Little Minister," this quaint document has endeared itself to theater-goers everywhere.

And now Katharine Hepburn has made a splendid interpretation of the story as her new starring vehicle for RKO-Radio playing today at the Paramount.

Hollywood's lavish resources have been drawn upon to the limit in regard to production, cast, detail, intimate touches, backgrounds, color, romance and interpretations.

There is the appealing romance of the little pastor, Gavin Dishart, for Babbie—a romance that tugs at the heart and engenders a fine sentiment enchanting to the beholder.

Babbie returns this love with all the nature of her sex—and to this love Hepburn is said to give a depth of tenderness and spirit which even she has never before revealed.

Sir James M. Barrie is a keen, penetrating, though whimsical, writer. He knows the feminine soul and his Babbie is the eternal Eve that he painted her—and Miss Hepburn is the ideal actress to portray his heroine most vividly.

The spectator instantly responds to her naive net of intrigue which she weaves around the serious-minded Gavin and mischievously delights in watching him endeavor to break this romantic yoke.

Everyone's sympathy also glows at the attempts of the simple village weavers to break their industrial bondage. And when Babbie takes Gavin to the hilltop and persuades him to blow the horn, warning the countryside of the approach of the soldiers, one finds the incident not only highly dramatic, but appealing.

AT THE CAPITOL—Few pictures shown here this season have been so filled with downright entertainment as "Wake Up and Dream," the Universal comedy with music which opens an engagement at the Capitol theater today.

Russ Columbo and Roger Pryor play the principal male roles in this engaging screenplay, and both contribute greatly to the success of the picture. In addition to his excellence as an actor, Columbo sings several song numbers in the manner which made him one of "the big three" of radio crooners, and Pryor contributes a characterization of a fast-talking small-time vaudeville actor which is literally a comedy gem. The sprightly June Knight is delightful as their foil and with the two men, forms the struggling vaudeville "act" which is usually just one jump ahead of the sheriff . . . Until they go to Hollywood and become acquainted with the amorous Miss Doucet. Henry Armetta furnishes hilarious laughter with his characterization of the Italian opera singer.

There is a constant change of scene in "Wake Up and Dream," and Director Kurt Neumann has maintained a swiftly moving tempo which is never interrupted by the introduction of the songs. Indeed, these form one of the most enjoyable features of the picture. "Too Beautiful for Words," we predict will be one of the big hits of the year.

Altogether, you will find "Wake Up and Dream," enjoyable in every way.

STRAND—West Monroe—The cattle business lost Will Rogers as a seriously interested participant after he had spent a year with a circus in Australia. Will's latest Fox picture, "Judge Priest," at the Strand theater in West Monroe today.

"Yes, sir, when I come back from Australia I was an actor sure enough," the Oklahoman admits. "Nothing could keep me from acting after that. I guess I'd have acted for nothing if I couldn't have got paid for it."

Youthful wanderlust took Rogers to Australia and he joined the Wirth Brothers circus as a means of paying expenses while "seeing the country." He did a roping and vaulting act.

George Wirth, co-owner of the circus, saw his first motion picture scene in the making when he visited Rogers on the "Judge Priest" set at the Fox Film studio. It was the first time Rogers and his ex-employer had met in 30 years.

NEGRO ADMITS CAR THIEVERY

Prisoner Confesses He Stole Several Articles From Autos

An investigation by police of numerous thefts from automobiles here recently had resulted Saturday in the arrest of one negro who admitted having committed a series of such thefts and the arrest of another negro for investigation, it was revealed by L. V. Tarver, superintendent of police.

The negroes arrested were William Mizell, 19, confessed thief, it was stated, and Dave Collins, 29, alias "Blue." Mizell lived at 906 Oak street and Collins lived at 310 Eleventh street.

Robberies which Mizell was said to have confessed committing were as follows:

Theft of four shirts from a Monroe Steam laundry truck on the night of December 30. The truck was parked at the rear of the Capitol theater.

Theft of a suit of clothes from an Ideal Cleaners truck on the night of December 30. This truck was also parked at the rear of the theater.

Theft of an overcoat, a woman's purse, a vanity case and spectacles from the automobile of H. B. Rabb, of Vicksburg, Miss., here January 4. The car was parked at 518 Layton avenue.

Theft of two pairs of overalls from the J. C. Penney company's warehouse about January 15. The warehouse is located at the rear of the company's store.

Theft of an overcoat from George Gunby's car last Friday night. The car was parked at 1006 Riverfront.

Theft of a suede jacket from an automobile near the Milner-Fuller Motor company several days ago. The name of the owner of the jacket is unknown to police.

The jacket is held at police headquarters, and a blue coat the negro was wearing when he was arrested and is also held at headquarters.

The negro was said to have made the thefts for the purpose of selling the stolen articles.

Officers who worked in the investigation of the case and apprehension of the negro were Superintendent Tarver, Captain Frank Pettit, and Officers D. J. Bedsole, H. H. Douglas, I. L. Causey and C. W. Dent.

Superintendent Tarver said the Collins negro is suspected of having stolen a small trunk from the rear of the automobile of J. R. Crisler, of Homer, here on the night of last October 30. The trunk contained children's clothing. It was stolen while Crisler was absent from the car for a short time while eating supper in a Grand street cafe.

Cotton Parity Checks Received By Strahan

Two consignments of cotton parity checks for Ouachita parish farmers have been received by E. R. Strahan, parish agricultural agent, one of the consignments having been received Friday and the other Saturday. One hundred checks were delivered to individual farmers Saturday.

Mr. Strahan stated that he expects to receive additional checks early this week, and that as soon as they arrive he will notify farmers to call at his office and secure them.

All of the checks are made payable to the producers who signed the acreage reduction contracts. Producers who have tenants on their farms are expected to cash the checks and pay their tenants the latters' proportionate shares of the parity payments.

Every tenant's share has already been calculated at the agricultural agent's office on the basis of acreage planted by the tenant. It was stated that it will be a simple procedure for the landlord to pay each tenant the amount written by the tenant's name on a receipt form, and to secure the signature of each tenant to the receipt. All of the receipts are to be returned to the agent's office and forwarded to Washington.

Robert Edward Lee Is Honored On Birthday

His career as the chieftain of the south's men of battle was told again but it was Lee, the educator and public servant, who was praised most roundly by speakers who extolled his decision to lend his resources to the upbuilding of the nation.

His contribution to education as president of Washington college, an institution which after his death became Washington and Lee university, was told from lecture platforms throughout the south. At the university where the annual founders day assembly was held Dr. Edwin Mims, head of the English department at Vanderbilt university, said "it is well to remember that Lee projected this institution at a time of far greater depression and that he projected it upon lines which have become increasingly important with the passing of the years."

STARTS AT PARAMOUNT MONDAY

St. Joseph

An out-of-town wedding which will claim much interest here where both families are so prominent and well known was that of Miss Gertrude Macbeth Stiles, lovely young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry F. Stiles of New Orleans and Mr. William King Anderson of Clarksdale, Miss. The marriage was celebrated at Trinity church on January the tenth at eight o'clock, in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. The stately and beautiful church presented a perfect setting for the exquisite gowns worn by the bride and her attendants. Bride's roses, white narcissi and evergreens were the decorations. The church was lighted by nine hundred and fifty candles. In the aisles were placed ornamental stands holding vases of narcissi and lighted tapers. Graceful flowers baskets of bride's rosess were placed on each side of the channel. The altar was adorned with lighted tapers and a vase of bride's roses, one on each end. The bride had as her attendants, Miss Helen Vincent, maid of honor; bridesmaids, her cousin, Miss Dolores Vickers, Miss Lucille Loeliger, Miss Marguerite Hassinger and Miss Billie Reed of San Diego, Texas. The gowns worn by the maid of honor and the bridesmaids were all unusually rich and lovely. They were of turquoise blue velvet, made cape effect and with sweeping trains. They wore matching velvet bands in their hair and carried arm bouquets of pink roses and fern, tied with silver ribbon. Miss Vincent, the maid of honor, was gowned in pink velvet, with pink band in her hair. She carried an arm bouquet of pink roses. The bride entered the church on the arm of her father. She was very beautiful in an exquisite wedding gown of white satin, made on princess lines. Her tulle veil, worn cap effect was caught with orange blossoms. She carried calla lillies. The groom had as his best man his brother, Mr. Edgar Lee Anderson, also of Clarksdale, Miss. In the soft glow of candles, with the delicate scent of flowers, Reverend Dr. Robert Compland, performed the ceremony of the Episcopal church. The scene was beautiful and impressive. Immediately after the ceremony there was a reception at the home of Mrs. May Carson Vickers, an aunt of the bride. The pretty rooms of Mrs. Vickers' home on Marengo street were decorated in white and green. The bridal pair stood under an arch of green, on each side of which was placed a flower basket of brides' roses. The bride's table in the dining room was very pretty with the wedding cake as a centerpiece and rich settings. Mrs. Vickers was assisted in receiving by her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harry F. Stiles, her daughter, Miss Sadie Vickers, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Anderson and Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Lee Anderson of Clarksdale, Miss. Mrs. Vickers, Miss Vickers and Mrs. Stiles were very handsome in elegant gowns of lace and crepe. Mrs. Edgar Anderson and hed daughter-in-law, Mrs. Edgar Lee Anderson, wore handsome gowns of velvet and satin. Mr. Anderson and his bride are spending their honeymoon in California. They will make their home on Mr. Anderson's plantation near Clarksdale on their return. Many handsome and appropriate gifts were received by Mr. and Mrs. Anderson.

The Tensas Garden club met at the home of Mrs. Philip Watson. Mrs. Philip Watson, Mrs. William Watson and Miss Ethel Reiber, were the hostesses. Mrs. Joseph Whitaker was the leader. The attractive living room of Mrs. Watson's home was brightened with a quantity of narcissi, tastefully arranged in vases. Roll call was answered by each member naming a state flower. The first number on the program was a very interesting paper by Mrs. Maury Stanton, the subject of which was, "Beautifying the Home Grounds With Shrubbery." Miss Ethel Reiber contributed an instructive article on "Gladioli." A humorous recitation, "My Kitten's Relatives," charmingly recited by Mrs. Samuel T. Yourtee, concluded the afternoon's program. Owing to illness members of the club who were to serve on the program were not present.

A delicious plate luncheon was served when the program and all club business was concluded. Besides the hostesses the leader and those already mentioned as being on the program the members attending the meeting included Mrs. Joseph Lee Curry, Mrs. Edward Lynch, Mrs. John Reddett, Mrs. Fred Smith, Mrs. Bert Berry, Mrs. Katie Watson, Mrs. P. W. Roberts, Mrs. John Hughes, Mrs. Rene Lewis, and Mrs. Katie Osborne.

Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Collins, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Watson and Philip, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Blanton Evans, Mrs. Richard Whitney, Miss Willie Mae Jackson, Miss Marian Post, Mrs. William Watson, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Curry, Dr. and Mrs. J. Claude Earnest, Mr. Benjamin Young and Mr. Pollard Coleman made up a party spending the week-end at the club house on Tensas river during the past week. Hunting and fishing were excellent and the party was delightful and very much enjoyed. The party returned to town on Sunday afternoon.

through this agency that the community is protected from unfavorable freight rates and favorable commodity rates are obtained. Every business man as well as every consumer in the community is vitally interested in seeing the traffic bureau functioning 100 per cent in its intended activities."

H. J. Fernandez, traffic manager of the bureau, in making his annual report at the meeting, which was held Friday afternoon, said:

"Through constant vigilance and competent handling during the past fifteen years we have built up for Monroe and West Monroe one of the most favorable transportation situations in the entire United States. We have railways, waterways, highways, airways, including pipe lines, each of which renders its proper function and taken as a whole makes a perfect system. The services being rendered by each are at the lowest legal rates and free from discrimination. We have got to maintain this ideal situation if we expect to continue to grow.

"However, this ideal situation may be violently disrupted during the year 1935 if the changes contemplated take place.

"The railroads are in a critical condition and unless something drastic is done the government may be compelled to take over the operation of same, and if it does it may not stop until it has taken over the motor trucks and waterways."

Plans were discussed for presenting the situation to the business concerns of Monroe and West Monroe and enlisting their support in a program for insuring conservative freight rates and the prevention of discriminatory rates. Another meeting of the traffic bureau membership is planned for an early date.

he would use the petition method to force a vote. Under that procedure, the bill would be voted upon on March 11.

The general congressional week will start with a bang Monday when the house ways and means committee holds first hearings on the excompassing social security measure, and the house appropriations committee calls in Secretary Ickes and Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, for a discussion of the $4,880,000,000 "dole" and work-relief appropriation.

House Republicans, who have been talking loudly against the idea of giving the president this huge fund in a lump sum without ear-marking it, were called today by Representative Snell of New York, their leader, into a conference Monday night on the subject.

Before that meeting is held Edwin E. Witte, adviser to the cabinet board on economic security, will appear before the ways and means committee as the first witness to outline the administration's plan for old-age pensions, job insurance and the other things in the Wagner-Lewis-Doughton bill.

On the same day, the senate munitions committee will begin its scheduled 10 weeks of hearing attempting to determine first whether shipbuilders have acted in collusion to bring up the price on navy vessels. Senator Huey P. Long on that day will demand reconsideration of the confirmation of James A. Moffett as federal housing administrator on the ground that he is a "Standard Oil" man.

MUSICAL TREAT AT CAPITOL TODAY

AT LOCAL THEATERS

AT THE PARAMOUNT—Ever since Maude Adams humanized the lovable character of Babbie in Sir James Barrie's never-to-be-forgotten story and play, "The Little Minister," this quaint document has endeared itself to theater-goers everywhere.

And now Katharine Hepburn has made a splendid interpretation of the story as her new starring vehicle for RKO-Radio playing today at the Paramount.

Hollywood's lavish resources have been drawn upon to the limit in regard to production, cast, detail, intimate touches, backgrounds, color, romance and interpretations.

There is the appealing romance of the little pastor, Gavin Dishart, for Babbie—a romance that tugs at the heart and engenders a fine sentiment enchanting to the beholder.

Babbie returns this love with all the nature of her sex—and to this love Hepburn is said to give a depth of tenderness and spirit which even she has never before revealed.

Sir James M. Barrie is a keen, penetrating, though whimsical, writer. He knows the feminine soul and his Babbie is the eternal Eve that he painted her—and Miss Hepburn is the ideal actress to portray his heroine most vividly.

The spectator instantly responds to her naive net of intrigue which she weaves around the serious-minded Gavin and mischievously delights in watching him endeavor to break this romantic yoke.

Everyone's sympathy also glows at the attempts of the simple village weavers to break their industrial bondage. And when Babbie takes Gavin to the hilltop and persuades him to blow the horn, warning the countryside of the approach of the soldiers, one finds the incident not only highly dramatic, but appealing.

AT THE CAPITOL—Few pictures shown here this season have been so filled with downright entertainment as "Wake Up and Dream," the Universal comedy with music which opens an engagement at the Capitol theater today.

Russ Columbo and Roger Pryor play the principal male roles in this engaging screenplay, and both contribute greatly to the success of the picture. In addition to his excellence as an actor, Columbo sings several song numbers in the manner which made him one of "the big three" of radio crooners, and Pryor contributes a characterization of a fast-talking small-time vaudeville actor which is literally a comedy gem. The sprightly June Knight is delightful as their foil and with the two men, forms the struggling vaudeville "act" which is usually just one jump ahead of the sheriff . . . Until they go to Hollywood and become acquainted with the amorous Miss Doucet. Henry Armetta furnishes hilarious laughter with his characterization of the Italian opera singer.

There is a constant change of scene in "Wake Up and Dream," and Director Kurt Neumann has maintained a swiftly moving tempo which is never interrupted by the introduction of the songs. Indeed, these form one of the most enjoyable features of the picture. "Too Beautiful for Words," we predict will be one of the big hits of the year.

Altogether, you will find "Wake Up and Dream," enjoyable in every way.

STRAND—West Monroe—The cattle business lost Will Rogers as a seriously interested participant after he had spent a year with a circus in Australia. Will's latest Fox picture, "Judge Priest," at the Strand theater in West Monroe today.

"Yes, sir, when I come back from Australia I was an actor sure enough," the Oklahoman admits. "Nothing could keep me from acting after that. I guess I'd have acted for nothing if I couldn't have got paid for it."

Youthful wanderlust took Rogers to Australia and he joined the Wirth Brothers circus as a means of paying expenses while "seeing the country." He did a roping and vaulting act.

George Wirth, co-owner of the circus, saw his first motion picture scene in the making when he visited Rogers on the "Judge Priest" set at the Fox Film studio. It was the first time Rogers and his ex-employer had met in 30 years.

NEGRO ADMITS CAR THIEVERY

Prisoner Confesses He Stole Several Articles From Autos

An investigation by police of numerous thefts from automobiles here recently had resulted Saturday in the arrest of one negro who admitted having committed a series of such thefts and the arrest of another negro for investigation, it was revealed by L. V. Tarver, superintendent of police.

The negroes arrested were William Mizell, 19, confessed thief, it was stated, and Dave Collins, 29, alias "Blue." Mizell lived at 906 Oak street and Collins lived at 310 Eleventh street.

Robberies which Mizell was said to have confessed committing were as follows:

Theft of four shirts from a Monroe Steam laundry truck on the night of December 30. The truck was parked at the rear of the Capitol theater.

Theft of a suit of clothes from an Ideal Cleaners truck on the night of December 30. This truck was also parked at the rear of the theater.

Theft of an overcoat, a woman's purse, a vanity case and spectacles from the automobile of H. B. Rabb, of Vicksburg, Miss., here January 4. The car was parked at 518 Layton avenue.

Theft of two pairs of overalls from the J. C. Penney company's warehouse about January 15. The warehouse is located at the rear of the company's store.

Theft of an overcoat from George Gunby's car last Friday night. The car was parked at 1006 Riverfront.

Theft of a suede jacket from an automobile near the Milner-Fuller Motor company several days ago. The name of the owner of the jacket is unknown to police.

The jacket is held at police headquarters, and a blue coat the negro was wearing when he was arrested and is also held at headquarters.

The negro was said to have made the thefts for the purpose of selling the stolen articles.

Officers who worked in the investigation of the case and apprehension of the negro were Superintendent Tarver, Captain Frank Pettit, and Officers D. J. Bedsole, H. H. Douglas, I. L. Causey and C. W. Dent.

Superintendent Tarver said the Collins negro is suspected of having stolen a small trunk from the rear of the automobile of J. R. Crisler, of Homer, here on the night of last October 30. The trunk contained children's clothing. It was stolen while Crisler was absent from the car for a short time while eating supper in a Grand street cafe.

Cotton Parity Checks Received By Strahan

Two consignments of cotton parity checks for Ouachita parish farmers have been received by E. R. Strahan, parish agricultural agent, one of the consignments having been received Friday and the other Saturday. One hundred checks were delivered to individual farmers Saturday.

Mr. Strahan stated that he expects to receive additional checks early this week, and that as soon as they arrive he will notify farmers to call at his office and secure them.

All of the checks are made payable to the producers who signed the acreage reduction contracts. Producers who have tenants on their farms are expected to cash the checks and pay their tenants the latters' proportionate shares of the parity payments.

Every tenant's share has already been calculated at the agricultural agent's office on the basis of acreage planted by the tenant. It was stated that it will be a simple procedure for the landlord to pay each tenant the amount written by the tenant's name on a receipt form, and to secure the signature of each tenant to the receipt. All of the receipts are to be returned to the agent's office and forwarded to Washington.

Robert Edward Lee Is Honored On Birthday

His career as the chieftain of the south's men of battle was told again but it was Lee, the educator and public servant, who was praised most roundly by speakers who extolled his decision to lend his resources to the upbuilding of the nation.

His contribution to education as president of Washington college, an institution which after his death became Washington and Lee university, was told from lecture platforms throughout the south. At the university where the annual founders day assembly was held Dr. Edwin Mims, head of the English department at Vanderbilt university, said "it is well to remember that Lee projected this institution at a time of far greater depression and that he projected it upon lines which have become increasingly important with the passing of the years."

STARTS AT PARAMOUNT MONDAY

St. Joseph

An out-of-town wedding which will claim much interest here where both families are so prominent and well known was that of Miss Gertrude Macbeth Stiles, lovely young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry F. Stiles of New Orleans and Mr. William King Anderson of Clarksdale, Miss. The marriage was celebrated at Trinity church on January the tenth at eight o'clock, in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. The stately and beautiful church presented a perfect setting for the exquisite gowns worn by the bride and her attendants. Bride's roses, white narcissi and evergreens were the decorations. The church was lighted by nine hundred and fifty candles. In the aisles were placed ornamental stands holding vases of narcissi and lighted tapers. Graceful flowers baskets of bride's rosess were placed on each side of the channel. The altar was adorned with lighted tapers and a vase of bride's roses, one on each end. The bride had as her attendants, Miss Helen Vincent, maid of honor; bridesmaids, her cousin, Miss Dolores Vickers, Miss Lucille Loeliger, Miss Marguerite Hassinger and Miss Billie Reed of San Diego, Texas. The gowns worn by the maid of honor and the bridesmaids were all unusually rich and lovely. They were of turquoise blue velvet, made cape effect and with sweeping trains. They wore matching velvet bands in their hair and carried arm bouquets of pink roses and fern, tied with silver ribbon. Miss Vincent, the maid of honor, was gowned in pink velvet, with pink band in her hair. She carried an arm bouquet of pink roses. The bride entered the church on the arm of her father. She was very beautiful in an exquisite wedding gown of white satin, made on princess lines. Her tulle veil, worn cap effect was caught with orange blossoms. She carried calla lillies. The groom had as his best man his brother, Mr. Edgar Lee Anderson, also of Clarksdale, Miss. In the soft glow of candles, with the delicate scent of flowers, Reverend Dr. Robert Compland, performed the ceremony of the Episcopal church. The scene was beautiful and impressive. Immediately after the ceremony there was a reception at the home of Mrs. May Carson Vickers, an aunt of the bride. The pretty rooms of Mrs. Vickers' home on Marengo street were decorated in white and green. The bridal pair stood under an arch of green, on each side of which was placed a flower basket of brides' roses. The bride's table in the dining room was very pretty with the wedding cake as a centerpiece and rich settings. Mrs. Vickers was assisted in receiving by her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harry F. Stiles, her daughter, Miss Sadie Vickers, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Anderson and Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Lee Anderson of Clarksdale, Miss. Mrs. Vickers, Miss Vickers and Mrs. Stiles were very handsome in elegant gowns of lace and crepe. Mrs. Edgar Anderson and hed daughter-in-law, Mrs. Edgar Lee Anderson, wore handsome gowns of velvet and satin. Mr. Anderson and his bride are spending their honeymoon in California. They will make their home on Mr. Anderson's plantation near Clarksdale on their return. Many handsome and appropriate gifts were received by Mr. and Mrs. Anderson.

The Tensas Garden club met at the home of Mrs. Philip Watson. Mrs. Philip Watson, Mrs. William Watson and Miss Ethel Reiber, were the hostesses. Mrs. Joseph Whitaker was the leader. The attractive living room of Mrs. Watson's home was brightened with a quantity of narcissi, tastefully arranged in vases. Roll call was answered by each member naming a state flower. The first number on the program was a very interesting paper by Mrs. Maury Stanton, the subject of which was, "Beautifying the Home Grounds With Shrubbery." Miss Ethel Reiber contributed an instructive article on "Gladioli." A humorous recitation, "My Kitten's Relatives," charmingly recited by Mrs. Samuel T. Yourtee, concluded the afternoon's program. Owing to illness members of the club who were to serve on the program were not present.

A delicious plate luncheon was served when the program and all club business was concluded. Besides the hostesses the leader and those already mentioned as being on the program the members attending the meeting included Mrs. Joseph Lee Curry, Mrs. Edward Lynch, Mrs. John Redditt, Mrs. Fred Smith, Mrs. Bert Berry, Mrs. Katie Watson, Mrs. P. W. Roberts, Mrs. John Hughes, Mrs. Rene Lewis, and Mrs. Katie Osborne.

Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Collins, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Watson and Philip, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Blanton Evans, Mrs. Richard Whitney, Miss Willie Mae Jackson, Miss Marian Post, Mrs. William Watson, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Curry, Dr. and Mrs. J. Claude Earnest, Mr. Benjamin Young and Mr. Pollard Coleman made up a party spending the week-end at the club house on Tensas river during the past week. Hunting and fishing were excellent and the party was delightful and very much enjoyed. The party returned to town on Sunday afternoon.

through this agency that the community is protected from unfavorable freight rates and favorable commodity rates are obtained. Every business man as well as every consumer in the community is vitally interested in seeing the traffic bureau functioning 100 per cent in its intended activities."

H. J. Fernandez, traffic manager of the bureau, in making his annual report at the meeting, which was held Friday afternoon, said:

"Through constant vigilance and competent handling during the past fifteen years we have built up for Monroe and West Monroe one of the most favorable transportation situations in the entire United States. We have railways, waterways, highways, airways, including pipe lines, each of which renders its proper function and taken as a whole makes a perfect system. The services being rendered by each are at the lowest legal rates and free from discrimination. We have got to maintain this ideal situation if we expect to continue to grow.

"However, this ideal situation may be violently disrupted during the year 1935 if the changes contemplated take place.

"The railroads are in a critical condition and unless something drastic is done the government may be compelled to take over the operation of same, and if it does it may not stop until it has taken over the motor trucks and waterways."

Plans were discussed for presenting the situation to the business concerns of Monroe and West Monroe and enlisting their support in a program for insuring conservative freight rates and the prevention of discriminatory rates. Another meeting of the traffic bureau membership is planned for an early date.

SOCIETY

BY EVE BRADFORD

GOOD MORNING! Can spring be far behind when a host of golden daffodils toss their heads in sprightly dance? . . .when green fields sleep in the sun . . . when small boys play marbles close to the earth's sweet smelling breast . . . when like an army defeated, every sign of winter departs . . . when everything is upward striving . . . when women don new hats and wear violets jauntily under their chins . . . It would be rather futile to dispute the calendar, but just the same these are June days, not only from a weather point of view but from a romantic one as well . . . the golden daffodils have evidently been mistaken by romantic young things for orange blossoms . . . each blissful January day brings news of engagements, secret marriages and rumors that ripen into realities . . . Like the song writer, we have decided that it's not the spring, it's love in bloom.

Vacation days are in the far distant future for most of us, yet we experienced a yearning for far-off places when we heard Marie Bendel tell of her visit in Los Angeles . . . she quite lost sight of the football game in the Rose Bowl when the evening sun casts its glorious rays along the snow capped mountains in the distance . . . she also told of the tournament of roses and the air permeated with the fragrance of millions of rose petals . . . the supper party at Palo Alto dancing to the strains of Mexican music. . . . Home via the Grand Canyon where the grandeur of the scenery will dwell in her memory as long as she lives . . . from the sunny orange groves to the snow capped mountains is sufficient variety to please even a Louisianian. . . . Elizabeth Carr will drop down at Selman Field tomorrow fresh from New York and ready to add her beautiful self to Suzonne Sperry's wedding pageant. . . . The beauty of the pageant will also be enhanced by Jean Dryburgh's lovely personality . . . Jean will come from the University of Alabama for this interesting event. . . . It will be June in January for Clyde and Anna Brown when they drift placidly into the golden waters of the Caribbean sea. . . . We can visualize Anna, looking the essence of 1935 chic, in one of those sport costumes tucked away in her wardrobe trunk. . . . Really the world looks better just the minute you think about the glamorous ports to be visited by Clyde and Anna . . . Life there is in direct contrast to the American mode of living we are told. . . . Romance stalked the I. Heimberg home during the Yuletide and as a result their son Harold hurried off to Memphis where his marriage took place yesterday. . . . His bride is gracious and lovely and will be a distinct acquisition to social Monroe. . . . Harold's mother, Mrs. I. Heimberg and sister, Sadie Abramson will introduce his bride to friends during the coffee hour next Saturday. . . . We are anticipating this event with pleasure as this home is one of the most hospitable in the city. . . . You only live once so why not don a nifty spring dance frock and join the Junior Leaguers at the Virginia on the thirtieth . . . they are sponsoring the president's ball, you know . . . Our orchids today go to Mrs. Sallie Ruffin, one of Monroe's kindliest matrons and most energetic grandmothers . . . we saw her yesterday in black crepe frock with white silver flecked collar and a corsage of English violets and narcissus, hurrying to attend a luncheon given in honor of her granddaughter. . . . Immediately the favors were sighted she thought of some friend who would enjoy having the cunning little doll bride. . . . Other members of the luncheon party motored home but Mrs. Ruffin walked. . . . She mounted the stairs of an office building and left the charming little gift on the desk of her friend. Dame Rumor has started a whispering campaign about a certain Monroe couple but they tell us "it is not true" . . . Time will tell and we will not be at all suprised when they announce the fact. . . . Joy Griffing's luscious brown eyes just matched the brown velvet gown she wore Friday afternoon at Bea Rhyme's tea in her honor. . . . And speaking of chic, Bea just oozed it in a black and gold model. . . . Country homes like the Harrison Rhymes' were built for entertaining on a large scale . . . no one ever turned away from their door disappointed as to lack of hospitality . . . It was a company of well dressed women who attended this tea on Friday . . . peace like a river may flow o'er our souls if Emerson was right when he said "The sense of being perfectly well dressed gives us a feeling of inward tranquility which religion is powerless to bestow." . . . Monroe women are more or less noted for their perfect grooming and to their faultless taste in the matter of clothes. . . . We have made it a practice to compare our women with those seen in other sections of the country and our own women are always the richer by comparison. . . . After hearing Bobby Anders sing and watching him dance we have come to the conclusion that he is an infant prodigy . . . you will be privileged to judge for yourself when he appears in Mrs. Harry Rice's dance revue in a few weeks. . . . A gift of great distinction was recently bestowed upon a bride and bridegroom to be . . . it was a pair of Bohemian glass wine bottle, bearing the stamp of a well known Royal street dealer in antiques (of course when we say Royal street we take it for granted that you will know it came from New Orleans). . . .

A distinguished visitor in Monroe is Jacques Steinau, famous mural artist and cartoonist of New York, who is spending a few days with his aunt, Mrs. Arnold Bernstein and his cousin, Mrs. Edgar Florsheim. Mr. Steinau has achieved nation-wide celebrity for his mural paintings that appear in many public buildings in the east, and for his clever cartoons that have been published in various leading magazines.

In the picture today we have two lovely members of Monroe's social world. Miss Frances Muller, whose beautiful soprano voice will be heard in John Alden Carpenter's cycle "Water Colors" on the night of the Musical Coterie concert (Left). Mrs. C. L. Moore, Jr., pianist whose brilliant rendition of "Flirtation in a Chinese Garden" by Ariel Chasins, will be one of the highlights of the evening's concert. (Right). Portrait by Downing studio.

Mrs. D. L. Davenport, attractive member of the younger set who was selected sponsor for one of the Yuletide balls sponsored by a Greek letter fraternity. (Center). Portrait by Downing studio.

Beautiful Country Home Of The Harrison Rhymes' Setting For Charming Event

Friends motored out to the beautiful country home of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Rhymes Friday afternoon, where charming hospitality was dispensed by their daughter, Miss Beatrice Rhymes, between the hours of three-thirty and five. The guest of honor on this occasion was Miss Joy Griffing, whose approaching marriage has just been announced. Miss Griffing was a beautiful figure in a smart afternoon model of brown transparent velvet with corsage of Talisman roses. Miss Rhymes received in a black crepe and gold model, and Mrs. Rhymes wore a lovely black velvet model. Mrs. Marie Dell Anders, Miss Helen Jones, Miss Nellie Breard, and Miss Virginia Scheen, wearing charming afternoon models, assisted in the many courtesies that distinguished this affair as one of the most charming of the season.

Flowers, reminiscent of early spring time, banked the reception suite and dining room, where the tea table, covered with handsome Renaissance lace over yellow satin, was developed in shades of yellow and green. An artistic plaque of California daisies, yellow tinted baby breath and maiden hair fern centered the table. Rainbow sandwiches and delicious little cakes embossed in the initials of Miss Griffing and her fiance were served. Miniature candles in crystalized candy holders graced each plate.

A feature of the afternoon's pleasures was the presentation of beautiful gifts to Miss Griffing. The beautifully wrapped packages, piled high in a green enameled basket, comprised gifts of linen, crystal, silver and china and articles of a more personal nature. Miss Rhymes presented Miss Griffing with a gift of Noritake china.

The guests, before departure, were privileged to write a few lines of sentimental nature in the scrapbook of the bride-to-be.

Mrs. Dan A. Breard, Miss Nellie Breard, Miss Virginia Scheen, Miss Helena Hayward, Mrs. E. F. Hayward, Mrs. F. A. Jones, Miss Helen Jones, Mrs. Shelby Cage, Miss Mary J. Mrs. A. Rose introduced her attractive house guest, Miss Marie Cartun of St. Louis, Mo., to a few intimates at her home on Glenmar Saturday afternoon. Bridge was introduced and following the interesting games a delectable barbecue luncheon course was served at the card tables to Miss Cartun, Mrs. Mark Wilinzick, Mrs. Alex Wilinzick, Mrs. Victor Goldberg, Mrs. Louis Cohen, Mrs. Sidney Cahn, Mrs. Louis Masur, Mrs. I. W. Jaffe, Mrs. A. Miller of Shreveport, Mrs. David Kaplan, Mrs. David Silverstein.

Beauty Of Springtime Is Portrayed In Miss White's Charming Luncheon Table

Flowering quince, first harbinger of spring, inspired the appealing pink color theme for Miss Catherine White's artistic luncheon table Saturday afternoon when she entertained complimentary to Miss Suzanne Sperry whose marriage to Mr. Walter Kellogg on the seventh of February is engaging the affectionate interest of society at the present moment.

Miss White, assisted by her lovely mother, Mrs. Carrick B. White, presided over the pink damask covered luncheon table with its pink crystal service and beautiful silver. An oblong plaque of flowering quince formed the floral note with the approaching nuptials portrayed in clever manner by the cunning brides in full wedding regalia, the favors found at each cover. Simplicity Characterizes Hamilton-Wilkinson Nuptial Event January The Twelfth

A marriage, characterized by exquisite simplicity and one in which the sincere and affectionate interest of countless friends in this section of the state is centered, was that of Miss Ora Hamilton, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Hamilton of Downsville, La., and Mr. Frederick G. Wilkinson, son of the late Professor L. W. and Effie Wilkinson, Saturday, January the twelfth, at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Robert McGee, with Rev. S. E. McFadden officiating in the presence of the family and a few intimate friends.

Miss Mildred Roberts sang in splendid voice, "Love in Bloom" and "I Love You Truly," accompanied at the piano by Mrs. E. B. Green, sister of the bridegroom and Mr. J. David Baughman, violinist.

The reception suite was transformed into a scene of sylvan beauty with southern smilax, luxuriant ferns and baskets of pink carnations forming the background for the impressive, double ring ceremony.

The bride wore a smart, early spring model of dark blue with trimmings of fur. A chic, close fitting hat of black and a corsage of Radiance roses completed the distinctive toilette.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Hamilton.

SOCIETY

BY EVE BRADFORD

GOOD MORNING! Can spring be far behind when a host of golden daffodils toss their heads in sprightly dance? . . .when green fields sleep in the sun . . . when small boys play marbles close to the earth's sweet smelling breast . . . when like an army defeated, every sign of winter departs . . . when everything is upward striving . . . when women don new hats and wear violets jauntily under their chins . . . It would be rather futile to dispute the calendar, but just the same these are June days, not only from a weather point of view but from a romantic one as well . . . the golden daffodils have evidently been mistaken by romantic young things for orange blossoms . . . each blissful January day brings news of engagements, secret marriages and rumors that ripen into realities . . . Like the song writer, we have decided that it's not the spring, it's love in bloom.

Vacation days are in the far distant future for most of us, yet we experienced a yearning for far-off places when we heard Marie Bendel tell of her visit in Los Angeles . . . she quite lost sight of the football game in the Rose Bowl when the evening sun casts its glorious rays along the snow capped mountains in the distance . . . she also told of the tournament of roses and the air permeated with the fragrance of millions of rose petals . . . the supper party at Palo Alto dancing to the strains of Mexican music. . . . Home via the Grand Canyon where the grandeur of the scenery will dwell in her memory as long as she lives . . . from the sunny orange groves to the snow capped mountains is sufficient variety to please even a Louisianian. . . . Elizabeth Carr will drop down at Seinan Field tomorrow fresh from New York and ready to add her beautiful self to Suzonne Sperry's wedding pageant. . . . The beauty of the pageant will also be enhanced by Jean Dryburgh's lovely personality . . . Jean will come from the University of Alabama for this interesting event. . . . It will be June in January for Clyde and Anna Brown when they drift placidly into the golden waters of the Caribbean sea. . . . We can visualize Anna, looking the essence of 1935 chic, in one of those sport costumes tucked away in her wardrobe trunk. . . . Really the world looks better just the minute you think about the glamorous ports to be visited by Clyde and Anna . . .

Life there is in direct contrast to the American mode of living we are told. . . . Romance stalked the I. Heinberg home during the Yuletide and as a result their son Harold hurried off to Memphis where his marriage took place yesterday. . . . His bride is gracious and lovely and will be a distinct acquisition to social Monroe. . . . Harold's mother, Mrs. I. Heinberg and sister, Sadie Abramson will introduce his bride to friends during the coffee hour next Saturday. . . . We are anticipating this event with pleasure as this home is one of the most hospitable in the city. . . . You only live once so why not don a nifty spring dance frock and join the Junior Leaguers at the Virginia on the thirtieth . . . they are sponsoring the president's ball, you know . . . Our orchids today go to Mrs. Sallie Ruffin, one of Monroe's kindliest matrons and most energetic grandmothers . . . we saw her yesterday in black crepe frock with white silver flecked collar and a corsage of English violets and narcissus, hurrying to attend a luncheon given in honor of her granddaughter. . . . Immediately the favors were sighted she thought of some friend who would enjoy having the cunning little doll bride. . . . Other members of the luncheon party motored home but Mrs. Ruffin walked. . . . She mounted the stairs of an office building and left the charming little gift on the desk of her friend. Dame Rumor has started a whispering campaign about a certain Monroe couple but they tell us "it is not true" . . . Time will tell and we will not be at all suprised when they announce the fact. . . . Joy Griffing's luscious brown eyes just matched the brown velvet gown she wore Friday afternoon at Bea Rhyme's tea in her honor. . . . And speaking of chic, Bea just oozed it in a black and gold model. . . . Country homes like the Harrison Rhymes' were built for entertaining on a large scale . . . no one ever turned away from their door disappointed as to lack of hospitality. . . . It was a company of well dressed women who attended this tea on Friday . . . peace like a river may flow o'er our souls if Emerson was right when he said "The sense of being perfectly well dressed gives us a feeling of inward tranquility which religion is powerless to bestow." . . . Monroe women are more or less noted for their perfect grooming and for their faultless taste in the matter of clothes. . . . We have made it a practice to compare our women with those seen in other sections of the country and our own women are always the richer by comparison. . . . After hearing Bobby Anders sing and watching him dance we have come to the conclusion that he is an infant prodigy . . . you will be privileged to judge for yourself when he appears in Mrs. Harry Rice's dance revue in a few weeks. . . . A gift of great distinction was recently bestowed upon a bride and bridegroom to be . . . it was a pair of Bohemian glass wine bottles bearing the stamp of a well known Royal street dealer in antiques (of course when we say Royal street we take it for granted that you will know it came from New Orleans). . . .

A distinguished visitor in Monroe is Jacques Steinau, famous mural artist and cartoonist of New York, who is spending a few days with his aunt, Mrs. Arnold Bernstein and his cousin, Mrs. Edgar Florsheim. Mr. Steinau has achieved nation-wide celebrity for his mural paintings that appear in many public buildings in the east, and for his clever cartoons that have been published in various leading magazines.

In the pictures today we have two lovely members of Monroe's musical world, Mrs. Frances Miller Leavell, whose beautiful contralto voice will be heard in John Alden Carpenter's cycle "Water Colors" on the night of the Musical Coterie's concert (Left). Mrs. C. L. Moore, Jr., pianist, whose brilliant rendition of "Flirtation in a Chinese Garden" by Abram Chasins, will be one of the highlights of the evening's concert. (Right). Portrait by Downing studio.

Miss Doris Davenport, attractive member of the younger set who was selected sponsor for one of the Yuletide balls sponsored by a Greek letter fraternity. (Center). Portrait by Downing studio.

Beautiful Country Home Of The Harrison Rhymes' Setting For Charming Event

Friends motored out to the beautiful country home of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Rhymes Friday afternoon, where charming hospitality was dispensed by their daughter, Miss Beatrice Rhymes, between the hours of three-thirty and five. The guest of honor on this occasion was Miss Joy Griffing, whose approaching marriage has just been announced. Miss Griffing was a beautiful figure in a smart afternoon model of brown transparent velvet with corsage of Talisman roses. Miss Rhymes received in a black crepe and gold model, and Mrs. Rhymes wore a lovely black velvet model. Mrs. Marie Dell Anders, Miss Helen Jones, Miss Nellie Breard, and Miss Virginia Scheen, wearing charming afternoon models, assisted in the many courtesies that distinguished this affair as one of the most charming of the season.

Flowers, reminiscent of early spring time, banked the reception suite and dining room, where the tea table, covered with handsome Renaissance lace over yellow satin, was developed in shades of yellow and green. An artistic plaque of California daisies, yellow tinted baby breath and maiden hair fern centered the table. Rainbow sandwiches and delicious little cakes embossed in the initials of Miss Griffing and her fiance were served. Miniature candles in crystalized candy holders graced each plate.

A feature of the afternoon's pleasures was the presentation of beautiful gifts to Miss Griffing. The beautifully wrapped packages, piled high in a green enameled basket, comprised gifts of linen, crystal, silver and china and articles of a more personal nature. Miss Rhymes presented Miss Griffing with a gift of Noritake china.

The guests, before departure, were privileged to write a few lines of sentimental nature in the scrapbook of the bride-to-be.

Mrs. Dan A. Breard, Miss Nellie Breard, Miss Virginia Scheen, Miss Helena Hayward, Mrs. E. F. Hayward, Mrs. F. A. Jones, Miss Helen Jones, Mrs. Shelby Cage, Miss Mary J. W. Jaffe, Mrs. A. Miller of Shreveport, Mrs. David Kaplan, Mrs. David Silverstein.

Beauty Of Springtime Is Portrayed In Miss White's Charming Luncheon Table

Flowering quince, first harbinger of spring, inspired the appealing pink color theme for Miss Catherine White's artistic luncheon table Saturday afternoon when she entertained complimentary to Miss Suzanne Sperry whose marriage to Mr. Walter Kellogg on the seventh of February is engaging the affectionate interest of society at the present moment.

Miss White, assisted by her lovely mother, Mrs. Carrick B. White, presided over the pink damask covered luncheon table with its pink crystal service and beautiful silver. An oblong plaque of flowering quince formed the floral note with the approaching nuptials portrayed in clever manner by the cunning brides in full wedding regalia, the favors found at each cover. The first course, a fruit cocktail, was suggestive of a wedding bouquet and the confectionery course accentuated the wedding theme in the ices molded in the form of bride's slippers.

Miss Sperry was an outstanding figure in an early spring model of brown crepe with a cluster of pink chiffon roses at her throat.

Present on this delightful occasion were, in addition to Miss Sperry: Mrs. Gladys Sperry, Mrs. Sallie Ruffin, Miss Sue Graves, Miss Jane Colbert, Miss Anna Laurie Smith, Miss Violet Meyer, Miss Winifred Culpepper, Miss Frances Stroud, Miss Frances Cole, Mrs. C. B. White and the hostess.

Importance Of Mid-Term Session State P.-T. A. Board Stressed By The President

A full attendance at the mid-term session of the State Board of the Louisiana Parent-Teachers' association on January 26, at Hotel Bentley, Alexandria, La., is urged by Mrs. Lawrence A. Mailhes of Shreveport, state president, in a message to board members over the state. Important business is scheduled to come before this meeting, Mrs. Mailhes said, among other matters that of plans for the spring convention of state organizations, to be held April 17-19, in Alexandria, and reports from committees not reporting at the fall session held last September.

The ratification of the appointment of Mrs. T. B. Bechnel, president of Gentilly Terrace Parent-Teacher association of New Orleans, to fill the vacancy created in the office of state safety chairman by the removal from the state of Mrs. E. G. Waring of Monroe, is also listed among the matters of business on the slate for the January 26 meeting, it was announced. Mrs. Waring was appointed at the 1934 spring convention.

This year's state convention in April will be one of the outstanding events of the organization's history, Mrs. Mailhes declared. Due to the dates immediately preceding the national convention in Miami, and the geographical position of Louisiana, many national chairmen will attend the state occasion en route to Florida for the national meet. Mrs. H. Summers of Sioux City, Iowa, a national vice-president and director in the national department of health, has already accepted the state's invitation to attend, the president said.

Many definite changes in state by-laws will be made also at the January board meeting next Saturday. This is election year for the state president and the first, second and sixth vice-presidents. Also for the treasurer of the state association. Recommendation for a three-year term of office for the state president will also be made at this meeting, Mrs. Mailhes stated.

The nominating committee will be named at the board session, and the convention theme selected. Mrs. S. P. Eggers of Alexandria is co-chairman for the convention, assisting Mrs. A. G. Alexander of Natchitoches, general chairman, in plans for the spring event.

Plans to increase the state membership from its present total of 17,000 to 20,000 by April 1, end of the 1934-35 fiscal year, have been well laid and are being rapidly carried to completion and success under the direction of Mrs. Albert Smith of Winnfield, third vice-president, and state director of memberships, the state president said. "Interest in the P.-T. A. has redoubled during the financial crisis through which the country is passing," and declared. "The Louisiana congress has welcomed several new units in 1934, bringing the total to 190 local associations. Rural sections particularly are recognizing the importance of an active P.-T. A. in their midst, and are proving loyal workers in their respective communities. This is especially gratifying. We have always functioned in the more prominent cities and towns of the state since the inception of a parent-teacher organization in Louisiana. That the suburban districts are joining their efforts with these is a matter of pardonable pride to the state, and the outlook for next year is a promising one for the underprivileged childhood of our state, for whose welfare the P.-T. A. devotes its energies."

Mrs. Thompson Gives News Of June Meeting

Mrs. Addison Thompson, state publicity chairman of the Louisiana Federated Women's clubs, submits the following interesting information on the triennial meeting in June:

Detroit will be the convention city for the triennial meeting of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, in June. The governor of Michigan, Hon. William A. Comstock, and the mayor of Detroit. Hon. Frank Couzens welcome cordially clubwomen to Michigan and the city of Detroit.

All officers will be elected at this time around which much interest centers. Ohio and Oklahoma present candidates for the presidency; Oregon and Illinois present candidates for the vice-presidency; for the office of second vice-president, New York and North Dakota present candidates Tennessee, Virginia, and West Virginia each aspire to the office of recording secretary; New Hampshire and Vermont vie for the honor of a treasurer.

Hostess clubs have initiated a novel plan to finance the convention by assembling a cookbook which they have entitled "A Cook's Tour." The recipe are well balanced, including every variety of food from the vegetable to the daintiest frozen dessert. The recipes have been contributed by club celebrities from many states and foreign countries, and have been many times tested. Mrs. R. I. C. Prout will mail copies of the book. Her address is Wakefield, Michigan.

"Education" is one of the major departments of the General Federation of Women's clubs. It is the theme of the January issue of the Clubwoman, official publication of the General Federation of Women's clubs. Of particular interest to Louisiana clubwomen is the quotation from state superintendent of education, the Hon. T. H. Harris, one of twenty-nine such educators quoted. His contribution to the symposium is as follows: "The support of your great organization means much to the educational system of America. Having solved in a reasonably satisfactory manner our financial problems, we are giving our attention to having the schools contribute to the physical, intellectual, and spiritual growth of the pupils by fostering music, health, accurate learning, class-room supervision etc."

In the list of states giving the per pupil cost of public school education, Louisiana ranks tenth with a cost of $49.42. Arkansas quotes the lowest figure, $31.70. The highest cost is given by New York, $152.85. The average is $87.67. In 25 states the cost is below average, while in 24, it is above. The warm winters of the south which decreases the cost of heating and the low standard of education for the negro are responsible for the low figures submitted by southern states. The above quotations were for the year 1931-32.

Much Interest Is Centered In P.-T.A. Meeting

The interest that fathers and mothers are taking in P.-T. A. work in this city was clearly manifested when a capacity house greeted the entertainment committee at the Barkdull Faulk school auditorium Thursday night in observance of "Dad's Night."

Mrs. W. H. Armstrong presided during the study period featuring a talk on "Thrift" by Mrs. Virginia Newman. Several subjects of great interest to teachers and parents were touched upon by the speaker.

Splendid reports from various committees were heard at this time, outstanding being the report of the treasurer, Mrs. N. N. Culburn.

Mrs. Luther Howell read Mrs. Mary L. Langworthy's message and Mrs. R. G. Stewart gave the message of state president, Mrs. L. H. Maihles.

The subject was "Resources and Thrift," Mrs. Merl Padgett gave a talk on thrift in the home management and several fathers talked briefly about "Thrift."

Mrs. Daisy Terzia, member of city school board, compiled data regarding the resources of the city schools as follows:

The assessed valuation of property in 1930 was $32,625,690. There is a constitutional tax of three mills required and the city pays 1 1-2 mills extra making a total of 4 1-2 mills taxes. Some cities pay as high as 18 mills to their schools. Fines of city go to the schools. In 1930 $23,875 was collected in 1934 only 6,500 was collected. People couldn't pay the fines and worked them out. Income from taxes, fines and miscellaneous totaled about $150,000 in 1930. Expenditures were around $131,500. In 1934 assessed value of property dropped to $21,918,055. So the income dropped to about $115,000 including taxes, fines and miscellaneous. The budget for 1934 and 1935 is about $115,000. A small amount has been received from the state equalization. The children have had no decrease in their school facilities thus far.

The American Legion quartette, composed of Dr. S. A. Collins, Mr. John Bailey, Mr. Merl Padgett and Mr. Walter Veach, entertained with several numbers which were thoroughly enjoyed and received much applause. They also took charge of the "Ole Hoss Sale" with Mr. Walter Veach, the auctioneer. Forty dollars was realized from the sale and the various concessions.

Mrs. Ben Stern, chairman of the entertainment committee was assisted by Mrs. M. B. Harrell, Mrs. J. W. Rohr, Mrs. J. H. Rushing, Mrs. M. W. Montgomery, Mrs. Clyde Henderson, Mrs. J. B. Evans, Mrs. R. L. Grayson, Mrs. Z. Meister and Mrs. B. S. McRaney.

Favors, miniature bottles of Coca Cola, were distributed by the company during the evening.

ton. The wedding cake, a beautiful confection, elaborately decorated, was surmounted by a miniature bride and bridegroom with tiny wedding bells arched above. It was the handiwork of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Fred Hamilton.

Mrs. Wilkinson, a charming personality and a great favorite in younger social circles, is a member of old southern families, on both her maternal and paternal sides.

Mr. Wilkinson, born and reared in New Orleans, is a young man of sterling qualities. His father was prominently identified with the faculty of Tulane university for a number of years.

The many handsome wedding gifts which were on display were an expression of affection and esteem in which this popular young couple is held.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilkinson are now at home to their friends in Farmerville.

SOCIETY

Importance Of Mid-Term Session State P.-T. A. Board Stressed By The President

A full attendance at the mid-term session of the State Board of the Louisiana Parent-Teachers' association on January 26, at Hotel Bentley, Alexandria, La., is urged by Mrs. Lawrence A. Mailhes of Shreveport, state president, in a message to board members over the state. Important business is scheduled to come before this meeting, Mrs. Mailhes said, among other matters that of plans for the spring convention of state organizations, to be held April 17-19, in Alexandria, and reports from committees not reporting at the fall session held last September.

The ratification of the appointment of Mrs. T. B. Bechnel, president of Gentilly Terrace Parent-Teacher association of New Orleans, to fill the vacancy created in the office of state safety chairman by the removal from the state of Mrs. E. G. Waring of Monroe, is also listed among the matters of business on the slate for the January 26 meeting, it was announced. Mrs. Waring was appointed at the 1934 spring convention.

This year's state convention in April will be one of the outstanding events of the organization's history, Mrs. Mailhes declared. Due to the dates immediately preceding the national convention in Miami, and the geographical position of Louisiana, many national chairmen will attend the state occasion en route to Florida for the national meet. Mrs. H. Summers of Sioux City, Iowa, a national vice-president and director in the national department of health, has already accepted the state's invitation to attend, the president said.

Many definite changes in state by-laws will be made also at the January board meeting next Saturday. This is election year for the state president and the first, second and sixth vice-presidents. Also for the treasurer of the state association. Recommendation for a three-year term of office for the state president will also be made at this meeting, Mrs. Mailhes stated.

The nominating committee will be named at the board session, and the convention theme selected. Mrs. S. P. Eggers of Alexandria is co-chairman for the convention, assisting Mrs. A. G. Alexander of Natchitoches, general chairman, in plans for the spring event.

Plans to increase the state membership from its present total of 17,000 to 20,000 by April 1, end of the 1934-35 fiscal year, have been well laid and are being rapidly carried to completion and success under the direction of Mrs. Albert Smith of Winnfield, third vice-president, and state director of memberships, the state president said. "Interest in the P.-T. A. has redoubled during the financial crisis through which the country is passing," and declared. "The Louisiana congress has welcomed several new units in 1934, bringing the total to 190 local associations. Rural sections particularly are recognizing the importance of an active P.-T. A. in their midst, and are proving loyal workers in their respective communities. This is especially gratifying. We have always functioned in the more prominent cities and towns of the state since the inception of a parent-teacher organization in Louisiana. That the suburban districts are joining their efforts with these is a matter of pardonable pride to the state, and the outlook for next year is a promising one for the underprivileged childhood of our state, for whose welfare the P.-T. A. devotes its energies."

Mrs. Thompson Gives News Of June Meeting

Mrs. Addison Thompson, state publicity chairman of the Louisiana Federated Women's clubs, submits the following interesting information on the triennial meeting in June:

Detroit will be the convention city for the triennial meeting of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, in June. The governor of Michigan, Hon. William A. Comstock, and the mayor of Detroit. Hon. Frank Couzens welcome cordially clubwomen to Michigan and the city of Detroit.

All officers will be elected at this time around which much interest centers. Ohio and Oklahoma present candidates for the presidency; Oregon and Illinois present candidates for the vice-presidency; for the office of second vice-president, New York and North Dakota present candidates Tennessee, Virginia, and West Virginia each aspire to the office of recording secretary; New Hampshire and Vermont vie for the honor of a treasurer.

Hostess clubs have initiated a novel plan to finance the convention by assembling a cookbook which they have entitled "A Cook's Tour." The recipe are well balanced, including every variety of food from the vegetable to the daintiest frozen dessert. The recipes have been contributed by club celebrities from many states and foreign countries, and have been many times tested. Mrs. R. I. C. Prout will mail copies of the book. Her address is Wakefield, Michigan.

"Education" is one of the major departments of the General Federation of Women's clubs. It is the theme of the January issue of the Clubwoman, official publication of the General Federation of Women's clubs. Of particular interest to Louisiana clubwomen is the quotation from state superintendent of education, the Hon. T. H. Harris, one of twenty-nine such educators quoted. His contribution to the symposium is as follows: "The support of your great organization means much to the educational system of America. Having solved in a reasonably satisfactory manner our financial problems, we are giving our attention to having the schools contribute to the physical, intellectual, and spiritual growth of the pupils by fostering music, health, accurate learning, class-room supervision etc."

In the list of states giving the per pupil cost of public school education, Louisiana ranks tenth with a cost of $49.42. Arkansas quotes the lowest figure, $31.70. The highest cost is given by New York, $152.85. The average is $87.67. In 25 states the cost is below average, while in 24, it is above. The warm winters of the south which decreases the cost of heating and the low standard of education for the negro are responsible for the low figures submitted by southern states. The above quotations were for the year 1931-32.

These able chairmen with Mrs. Streator are making plans to serve the clubs of the state in their respective arts. Mrs. Streator feels assured that these plans will be most interesting and worthwhile, and that there will be some branch to fill the needs of every club.

District chairmen or individual clubs desiring information on the study of the arts are invited to write to the chairmen or to Mrs. Streator.

Contests for club scrapbooks will again be conducted for the year 1934-35; district and state chairmen of publicity will have charge of the contests. The books make valuable records which will be cherished for their sentiment in the years to come, and it is the desire of the chairmen that much interest will be taken in them. By request the rules are reproduced.

The following rules must be observed.

Three scrapbooks may be entered by a district in the state contest.

Books will be graded as to: (a) Arrangement—Newspaper clippings of the club's activities for the year arranged in sequence. (b) Completeness—Newspaper reports of each club meeting, November 1934 to November, 1935. One meeting must feature publicity; this does not mean that the entire program must be devoted to publicity; the publicity feature may be simple or elaborate. The department does not feel that this is asking too much as publicity is vital to the success of a club. (c) Attractiveness—Artistic touches, paintings, local color, or anything that will contribute to the attractiveness of the book.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Humble of Mangham entertained at supper Friday night complimentary to their daughter, Miss Marguerite Humble, who observed her sixteenth birthday anniversary at this time. Other guests of honor were members of the Mangham orchestra.

The beautifully appointed supper table was ornamented with a handsome three tier birthday cake. The blowing out of the candles and the cutting of the cake by the celebrant was a lovely ceremony. The supper served buffet style, was enjoyed at linen covered tables in the living room. Bowls of fragrant narcissi centered the tables and each cover was marked with a place card bearing a black music staff and cleft. Salted nuts, mints and other confections were served with the ice course.

CHAPTER XIII

Barrett Colvin strode blindly through the chill winter afternoon. "Amorous tableaus," "necking," "modern"—the words echoed in his brain. He kept hearing Lida Stafford say them again and again.

So he had only been "another man" to Elinor—the girl to whom he had been so careful for fear a hurried courtship might frighten her.

He despised himself because the touch of her lips still stirred him; because he could not forget their softness and warmth and the promise of generous giving that had been made by their pressure.

"I was mad about you—" he said half-aloud.

A newsboy looked after him to murmur "Nut!"

Snow began to fall as Barrett walked. Marcia had told him that Bobby Telfair was Elinor's "almost accepted admirer." Marcia had added, "I suppose she doesn't want to settle down yet. These are the years when girls of her age want to have a gay time."

That had not alarmed Barrett nor seemed to hold any particular significance when it was spoken. But he understood—he was certain he understood—now. And Miss Ella had said, "Older men always admire Elinor."

"Older men!" Even Miss Ella had seen him as one, no doubt. Barrett had been wounded where he was most vulnerable. Elinor's mother had said the girl laughed over the way older men drank in her flattery. "Amorous tableaus!"

Even while he told himself that he despised such a girl he was aching for her. And hating himself for it.

He had lived decently; kept to his code. It seemed to Barrett, who rarely gave himself pity, that this was unfair. Why should the one girl to whom he had offered his honest love have proven to be of such tawdry material?"

He saw a street light through the whirling, fine, dry snow that was blowing across the pavement to heap in corners. The winter around him was tropic compared with the chill of his heart.

He wondered dully how long it would take to get over it. Had the whole affair been a masquerade? Had Elinor felt nothing at all of that which he felt so fully? That love that had made him lie wakeful in the dark—warmed, shaken by remembering her words, her smile, her laugh. Older men always liked her. She made them think they were young. Well, she had done that to him, he knew. He had never known a man could feel so young.

He'd have to get through it somehow, of course—and he would. He told himself this over and over again but could not down the pain in his heart.

Higgins admitted him at 10. Barrett said slowly, "Sorry, forgot I had a key—"

"It's a bad night, sir," Higgins said, worried.

Barrett's coat was damp from the snow that clung to it. He was white and tired; his hands stiffened by the cold and reddened by it.

"We supposed you dined out, sir."

"Oh, yes—" Barrett said. He hadn't dined but he could not think of food.

Higgins' worried eyes followed him. "That will be all," Barrett said. "You may lock the house—"

He plodded slowly up the broad stairs. As Higgins looked at him a vision of Barrett's father appeared before him. The "old master" had plodded slowly, wearily up those stairs in almost the same way when he had known that something wrong was going on behind his back, something no one would tell him.

Higgins understood that something was wrong now. He hoped it was about Mrs. Radnor's boy, for otherwise it might concern "the young lady." Mr. Barrett had come to care a great deal, they all knew. Higgins could tell from the way, for instance, that Barrett reached for a note from her, letting the other letters wait while he read and reread it. He could tell from the fact that Barrett's appetite was capricious—very good or none at all. And from the way he spoke to her at the telephone. Higgins hoped with all his heart that nothing had happened to spoil all this. Such a blow for his master would be too cruel!

Higgins was saying a prayer, as he often did without knowing it fully, but feeling it. And since the Kingdom of God is made by those who love others better than themselves, no doubt God knew.

For three days Elinor waited, trembling if the butler drew near, hoping that this time he would say, "Mr. Colvin is at the telephone, Miss Stafford."

For three days and nights her mind whirled with conjectures of what could have happened to make the change. Lying full-stretched and tense upon her bed, eyes widely open in the dark, she planned questions she would ask him. They were rather childish and very wistful questions which she shaped and reshaped until she felt they were perfect examples of worldly finesse. But with the coming of each day she shrank from beckoning and reckoning.

The explanation of his silence she began to feel—swallowing hard as she thought on it—probably lay in the blunt fact that he was tired of her. She was certain that she did not know how to please people, that she was as inept socially as her mother had said. Lida had repeated this in various ways again and again—and any tune, sung often enough, clings!

Perhaps, Elinor reflected, the really big puzzle of the affair was the fact that he had tarried near so long as he did.

She wondered (her conjectures were endless) if he considered her the sort of a girl a man kissed easily before he rode away. Her cheeks flamed at this thought. Perhaps now he was smiling over the "little affair." She could not imagine him faintly and ironically amused by such an episode and yet, she realized, she had not known him really. She had only known her dream of him, her love for him and a new need through him.

She grew thin, strained, and her smile became rather forced. Bentwell Stafford, seeing that smile, found his heart which had seemed inured to pain breaking anew as it had in youth and quite as painfully.

Lida's emotions were mixed. She was amused and sometimes rather annoyed. "Just as well," she decided, "for the child to learn that happiness is not made by some one's smile but through one's hold on tangible things." Yet now and then she felt herself touched, and this always aroused resentment. She loathed "going soft" or feeling apologetic about anything that she had done.

She gave Elinor a hat she had worn but twice. This donation came after Elinor had said—halting at the threshold of Lida's sleeping room—"Mother, did—did you say anything to him!"

Lida responded, "Darling, what could I say? I can't think what you mean!"

She was a consummate actress. Every gesture she made was a pose. Her bafflement at Elinor's question was completely convincing.

"He is tired of me," Elinor mused, standing by a window, looking down on Park avenue and seeing nothing. "Or else he despises me because he thinks I'm one of those girls who let any man kiss them—"

She did not cry. She wished she could cry but tears, the relief valve for bitterness and hurt, were denied her. Elinor unfortunately had from childhood had to bear a good deal of hurt without showing it.

Putting Quality and Uniformity Into ATLANTIC BOND

"We Don't Own Rhode Island"

The Eastern Manufacturing Company cannot say that they own the state of Rhode Island. However they can say that they own or control timber lands in Maine, the area of which equals roughly that of the state of Rhode Island. Over a thousand square miles of land within a convenient radius of Bangor is the scene of the Eastern Manufacturing Company's lumbering operations each year.

Of course the whole area is not worked at one time. The extent of their holdings is such that they can shift their operations from one tract to another. In this way they can limit their cuttings to those trees which are of the proper growth to be used in ATLANTIC BOND and other Eastern Manufacturing Co. papers.

"What Has This to Do With the Marketing of Atlantic Bond"

Just this. The first step in the making of a uniformly good product is the immediate control of the raw product. Their own forestry division carries on lumbering operations with a definite knowledge of the types of trees that are suitable for such a grade of paper as ATLANTIC BOND.

They have a wide enough field of operations that they can make this choice of raw product without restriction. The result is that only first grade logs of the proper growth reach their mills.

This is only one reason why we can offer you ATLANTIC BOND as a uniformly good paper. When we tell you that you will get uniformity in ATLANTIC BOND, we know that we are giving you uniformity from the ground up. It starts with the first swing of the lumberman's axe in the Maine woods, and continues throughout the entire process of paper making.

We are consistant users of ATLANTIC BOND. Why not give us a trial on that next printing order of yours.

Cobb, Thursday morning at the home of Rev. and Mrs. E. E. Huntsberry. Rev. Huntsberry performed the ceremony in the presence of a few intimate friends and relatives.

Mrs. Cobb has been a resident of West Monroe for the past eight months, having come with her parents from Muskogee, Okla., where she was reared. During this time, she has acquired a wide circle of friends. Mr. Cobb is a member of one of the best known and highly regarded families in this vicinity. He graduated from Ouachita parish high school and Junior college and is at this time affiliated with Brown Paper mill, being editor of "The Little Brown Jug," the mill paper. He is also active in church circles, and director of the choir of the First Baptist church.

Mr. and Mrs. Cobb are now at home to their friends at 305 Ludwig avenue and have the sincerest wishes of their host of friends for much happiness.

Buffet Supper Enjoyed In The Humble Home

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Humble of Mangham entertained at supper Friday night complimentary to their daughter, Miss Marguerite Humble, who observed her sixteenth birthday anniversary at this time. Other guests of honor were members of the Mangham orchestra.

Mrs. Humble, wearing a blue crepe model, and Miss Humble in a brick-dust crepe model, welcomed the guests and bestowed numerous charming courtesies during the evening.

The beautifully appointed supper table was ornamented with a handsome three tier birthday cake. The blowing out of the candles and the cutting of the cake by the celebrant was a lovely ceremony. The supper served buffet style, was enjoyed at linen covered tables in the living room. Bowls of fragrant narcissi centered the tables and each cover was marked with a place card bearing a black music staff and cleft. Salted nuts, mints and other confections were served with the ice course.

A feature of the evening was the presentation of beautiful gifts to Miss Humble and the musical numbers rendered by Mrs. Fred Perry.

CHAPTER XIII

Barrett Colvin strode blindly through the chill winter afternoon. "Amorous tableaus," "necking," "modern"—the words echoed in his brain. He kept hearing Lida Stafford say them again and again.

So he had only been "another man" to Elinor—the girl to whom he had been so careful for fear a hurried courtship might frighten her.

He despised himself because the touch of her lips still stirred him; because he could not forget their softness and warmth and the promise of generous giving that had been made by their pressure.

"I was mad about you—" he said half-aloud.

A newsboy looked after him to murmur "Nut!"

Snow began to fall as Barrett walked. Marcia had told him that Bobby Telfair was Elinor's "almost accepted admirer." Marcia had added, "I suppose she doesn't want to settle down yet. These are the years when girls of her age want to have a gay time."

That had not alarmed Barrett nor seemed to hold any particular significance when it was spoken. But he understood—he was certain he understood—now. And Miss Ella had said, "Older men always admire Elinor."

"Older men!" Even Miss Ella had seen him as one, no doubt. Barrett had been wounded where he was most vulnerable. Elinor's mother had said the girl laughed over the way older men drank in her flattery. "Amorous tableaus!"

Even while he told himself that he despised such a girl he was aching for her. And hating himself for it.

He had lived decently; kept to his code. It seemed to Barrett, who rarely gave himself pity, that this was unfair. Why should the one girl to whom he had offered his honest love have proven to be of such tawdry material?"

He saw a street light through the whirling, fine, dry snow that was blowing across the pavement to heap in corners. The winter around him was tropic compared with the chill of his heart.

He wondered dully how long it would take to get over it. Had the whole affair been a masquerade? Had Elinor felt nothing at all of that which he felt so fully? That love that had made him lie wakeful in the dark—warmed, shaken by remembering her words, her smile, her laugh. Older men always liked her. She made them think they were young. Well, she had done that to him, he knew. He had never known a man could feel so young.

He'd have to get through it somehow, of course—and he would. He told himself this over and over again but could not down the pain in his heart.

Higgins admitted him at 10. Barrett said slowly, "Sorry, forgot I had a key—"

"It's a bad night, sir," Higgins said, worried.

Barrett's coat was damp from the snow that clung to it. He was white and tired; his hands stiffened by the cold and reddened by it.

"We supposed you dined out, sir."

"Oh, yes—" Barrett said. He hadn't dined but he could not think of food.

Higgins' worried eyes followed him. "That will be all," Barrett said. "You may lock the house—"

He plodded slowly up the broad stairs. As Higgins looked at him a vision of Barrett's father appeared before him. The "old master" had plodded slowly, wearily up those stairs in almost the same way when he had known that something wrong was going on behind his back, something no one would tell him.

Higgins understood that something was wrong now. He hoped it was about Mrs. Radnor's boy, for otherwise it might concern "the young lady." Mr. Barrett had come to care a great deal, they all knew. Higgins could tell from the way, for instance, that Barrett reached for a note from her, letting the other letters wait while he read and reread it. He could tell from the fact that Barrett's appetite was capricious—very good or none at all. And from the way he spoke to her at the telephone. Higgins hoped with all his heart that nothing had happened to spoil all this. Such a blow for his master would be too cruel!

Higgins was saying a prayer, as he often did without knowing it fully, but feeling it. And since the Kingdom of God is made by those who love others better than themselves, no doubt God knew.

For three days Elinor waited, trembling if the butler drew near, hoping that this time he would say, "Mr. Colvin is at the telephone, Miss Stafford."

For three days and nights her mind whirled with conjectures of what could have happened to make the change. Lying full-stretched and tense upon her bed, eyes widely open in the dark, she planned questions she would ask him. They were rather childish and very wistful questions which she shaped and reshaped until she felt they were perfect examples of worldly finesse. But with the coming of each day she shrank from beckoning and reckoning.

The explanation of his silence she began to feel—swallowing hard as she thought on it—probably lay in the blunt fact that he was tired of her. She was certain that she did not know how to please people, that she was as inept socially as her mother had said. Lida had repeated this in various ways again and again—and any tune, sung often enough, clings!

Perhaps, Elinor reflected, the really big puzzle of the affair was the fact that he had tarried near so long as he did.

She wondered (her conjectures were endless) if he considered her the sort of a girl a man kissed easily before he rode away. Her cheeks flamed at this thought. Perhaps now he was smiling over the "little affair." She could not imagine him faintly and ironically amused by such an episode and yet, she realized, she had not known him really. She had only known her dream of him, her love for him and a new need through him.

She grew thin, strained, and her smile became rather forced. Bentwell Stafford, seeing that smile, found his heart which had seemed inured to pain breaking anew as it had in youth and quite as painfully.

Lida's emotions were mixed. She was amused and sometimes rather annoyed. "Just as well," she decided, "for the child to learn that happiness is not made by some one's smile but through one's hold on tangible things." Yet now and then she felt herself touched, and this always aroused resentment. She loathed "going soft" or feeling apologetic about anything that she had done.

She gave Elinor a hat she had worn but twice. This donation came after Elinor had said—halting at the threshold of Lida's sleeping room—"Mother, did—did you say anything to him!"

Lida responded, "Darling, what could I say? I can't think what you mean!"

She was a consummate actress. Every gesture she made was a pose. Her bafflement at Elinor's question was completely convincing.

"He is tired of me," Elinor mused, standing by a window, looking down on Park avenue and seeing nothing. "Or else he despises me because he thinks I'm one of those girls who let any man kiss them—"

She did not cry. She wished she could cry but tears, the relief valve for bitterness and hurt, were denied her. Elinor unfortunately had from childhood had to bear a good deal of hurt without showing it.

Putting Quality and Uniformity Into ATLANTIC BOND

"We Don't Own Rhode Island"

The Eastern Manufacturing Company cannot say that they own the state of Rhode Island. However they can say that they own or control timber lands in Maine, the area of which equals roughly that of the state of Rhode Island. Over a thousand square miles of land within a convenient radius of Bangor is the scene of the Eastern Manufacturing Company's lumbering operations each year.

Of course the whole area is not worked at one time. The extent of their holdings is such that they can shift their operations from one tract to another. In this way they can limit their cuttings to those trees which are of the proper growth to be used in ATLANTIC BOND and other Eastern Manufacturing Co. papers.

"What Has This to Do With the Marketing of Atlantic Bond"

Just this. The first step in the making of a uniformly good product is the immediate control of the raw product. Their own forestry division carries on lumbering operations with a definite knowledge of the types of trees that are suitable for such a grade of paper as ATLANTIC BOND.

They have a wide enough field of operations that they can make this choice of raw product without restriction. The result is that only first grade logs of the proper growth reach their mills.

This is only one reason why we can offer you ATLANTIC BOND as a uniformly good paper. When we tell you that you will get uniformity in ATLANTIC BOND, we know that we are giving you uniformity from the ground up. It starts with the first swing of the lumberman's axe in the Maine woods, and continues throughout the entire process of paper making.

We are consistant users of ATLANTIC BOND. Why not give us a trial on that next printing order of yours.

Reported That St. Louis Club Got $30,000 In Cash In Deal

By W. N. Paxton
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Manager Rogers Hornsby of the St. Louis Browns announced tonight that Pitcher Irving "Bumps" Hadley had been traded to the Washington Senators for Catcher Luke Sewell and cash, and that Sewell in turn had been sold to the Chicago White Sox.

Hadley

Hornsby declined to say how much money was involved, but it probably approximates $30,000. The proceeds will be used to purchase outfielders, sorely needed by the Browns.

"We made the deal because we considered it the best way of getting what we wanted," explained the one-time "Rajah" of the National league, who last year succeeded in dragging the once "tail end" St. Louis Americans part way up the league ladder.

"We tried to arrange a trade for outfielders," continued Hornsby, "but nobody would give us what we wanted. The offer from Washington was so attractive that we took it and will use the cash now to get what we need."

The pitching fortunes of Hadley did not rise in 1934 in conformance with the general Brownie performance. In 1933 he was the hardest working hurler in the league, with 15 wins and 30 losses in 317 innings. Last year he dropped 16 games and won 10. He is 30 years old.

Since the trade last fall which sent Bruce Campbell to Cleveland in exchange for Pitcher Bob Weiland and Infielder John Burnett, the Browns have been seeking outfield reinforcements. At present there are only four fly-chasers on the roster, Ray Pepper, Sammy West, Beau Bell and Debs Garms.

It is well known, although not officially admitted, that Hornsby would like to obtain Gerald Walker from Detroit. The flashy outfielder aroused the ire of Manager Mickey Cochrane last summer when he was caught off base several times and was fined for careless running, and he has been reported on the block.

WILDCATS DEFEAT LOYOLA, 47 TO 39

Louisiana College Makes It Two Straight In Easy Victory

PINEVILLE, La., Jan. 19.—(AP)—Louisiana college swept the two-game series with Loyola university of New Orleans by defeating the Wolfpack 47 to 39, here tonight in a heavy-scoring contest in which Referee Curry called 39 fouls, 17 of them on the winners.

Although Richard Crowell, Wildcat guard, was one of the two Louisiana college sophomores to be "excused" on four fouls, he was high point man with 14 points as the Wolves guarded Carroll Barron, Friday night's leader, closely and he was able to account for only 10.

George Patterson, of Louisiana college, had one run of nine straight points and finished tied with Beter of Loyola for second honors with 13. Pel Hughes slapped in 12.

The Cats showed vast improvement in passing and shooting over their earlier performances.

Pine Bluff Club Delays Election Of Secretary

PAR SMASHED IN SACRAMENTO OPEN

Sarazen, Lacey And Horton Smith Take Lead With Snappy 70s

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Jan. 19.—(AP)—A quartet of the country's leading professionals bettered par by two strokes today to tie for 18-hole leadership in the $2,500 Sacramento open golf tournament.

Gene Sarazen, New York; Charles Lacey, Great Neck, Long Island; Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa., and Horton Smith, of Oak Park, Ill., turned in 70s over the long wind-swept municipal links.

Only a stroke behind and themselves one under par were Jimmy Thomson, Long Beach, Calif., and Clarence Clark, Bloomfield, N. J.

Bracketed at 72 were Denny Shute, Philadelphia; Jim Demaret, Galveston, Texas, and Mark Frey, Oakland, Calif.

A chill wind proved a trying handicap to many in the field along with a course made soft by recent rains.

Despite the cold a large gallery turned out, with Walter Hagen, Detroit, and Richard Arlen, Hollywood film player, dividing most of the spectators with Sarazen and Ky Laffoon of Chicago.

Hagen toured the 6,787-yard course in 74, while Arlen, after playing a nice 37 on the out nine, faltered to a 42 coming home and wound up with a 79.

Sarazen, cracking his tee shots down the middle and getting long distance, was out in 35 and home in 35.

Smith matched par 36 on the outward nine, dropped a stroke on the par four twelfth and recouped with three birdies and a par in the next four holes.

Lacey, with a great spoon on the second and another distance-shattering wood on the seventh, chalked up two birdie fours to go out in 34 and then ran off nine straight pars on the back side to come home in 36.

A long drive and a crisp brassie brought Picard to the 435-yard eighth green in two pretty shots and he rolled in a short putt for a birdie to go out in 35. He picked up another birdie on the par four eleventh, lost his advantage when he took a five on the par four thirteenth but followed up with a birdie on the fourteenth to come home with another 35.

The day's work found not a few of the favorites back in the middle or high seventies. Dick Metz, Chicago, could do no better than a 77, while Johnny Revolta, Milwaukee, carded a 76, and Vic Ghezzi, winner of the Los Angeles open earlier this week, needed a 75.

Another eighteen holes will be played tomorrow, with the final 36 scheduled for Monday.

Curt Davis, Phillies' pitcher, did not play any baseball at all until he was 15 years old, then started as a first baseman.

EAST DIXIE LOOP TO MEET TODAY

Columbus And Helena May Be Added To Increase Clubs To Eight

VICKSBURG, Miss., Jan. 19.—(AP)—Membership o fthe East Dixie baseball league for the 1935 season will be definitely determined at a meeting of directors of the circuit to be held here tomorrow.

Alvin Gardner, of Dallas, president of East and West Dixie leagues and the Texas league, will preside at the session. An eight-club circuit is being planned for 1935.

At a recent meeting six clubs announced ready for 1935 season, including the membership that finished 1934 season. They are El Dorado and Pine Bluff, Ark., and Jackson, Greenville, Greenwood and Clarksdale, Mississippi.

Columbus, Miss., and Helena, Arkansas may be invited into the league. Columbus announced ready to enter at a meeting held last December. Helena's delegation was optimistic over entering if a big league hook-up could be arranged. Reports from Helena indicated that an attempt was being made to obtain hook-up with the Cincinnati Reds.

Vicksburg also is being considered for a berth.

The Clarksdale Ginners plan to enter the league and play night baseball. President George Comeaux is negotiating with Detroit and Milwaukee for working agreements. Ben Tincup, veteran pitcher, has been mentioned as the 1935 manager of Ginners. A financial campaign in Clarksdale has been meeting with success.

The El Dorado Lions will re-enter the circuit, and George Harper, former major leaguer, may again pilot the team. William Styles will manage the Pine Bluff Judges again this season and Herschel Boba has been signed as manager of Jackson Senators to succeed Guy Lacy.

Clay Hopper, for ten years connected with Cardinal farm systems, will manage the Greenwood Chiefs. Work will begin next week on Greenwood's new park.

Greenville, winner of the second half in the pennant chase last season, will be under the managership of Glenn Bolton, former Cleveland pitcher and first baseman for the Buckshots last season. Bolton will succeed Frank Brazill, who returns to the Southern association as manager of the Nashville Vols.

Vice-President Ben Gildart of East Dixie league, and Secretary F. J. Millette of the Greenville Buckshots will attend the meeting.

Irving "Buzz" Bartling of the Michigan State college baseball squad has received at least seven offers from big league scouts eager to get an option on him but has declined them all. He has two more seasons in college.

CENTER QUINTET TO PLAY 2 GAMES WITH SUNFLOWER

Indians Meet Strong Mississippi Junior College This Week

Still seeking a victory after three defeats in as many games, the Northeast Center cagers will go into a two-game series with the Sunflower Junior College of Moorhead, Mississippi, at the Northeast Center gymnasium, Thursday and Friday nights.

The Sunflower junior college boasts one of the ranking quintets in the junior college conference of Mississippi and will be one of the favorites for honors in their conference. The rangy Mississippians have come out on the long end of score in the majority of the games they have played this season.

Heading this brilliant Mississippi five is their elongated center, Burnett, who is the ace sharpshooter of the club, and opponents find it hard to get the rebound off the bankboard over this Sunflower star. Besides Burnett, the entire team is composed of excellent "shots" and it is seldom that any of the starters fail to break into the scoring.

The Northeast Center squad seems unable to shake their inferiority complex but this has not cast any gloomy atmosphere over the club. Coach Phillips said that he expected to lose several games at the beginning of the season as the entire Purple and Gold squad is composed of freshman material with no cage experience. Coach Phillips expressed his confidence in his squad, stating that they would hit their stride soon and begin turning in some high scores in games that will net them victories.

The Indians' second defeat at the hands of the smooth working Arkansas Aggies Friday night was caused by their inability to make good their free throws. Out of eighteen charity tosses, the local Redmen were only able to sink six of them.

Coach Phillips had his charges going through their paces yesterday as usual and said that he would begin to lengthen the Indians' practice periods. By the time the first of the two games with the Sunflower quintet starts, the Redskin cagers should be in tip-top shape.

Besides the two-game series with the Mississippi junior college, a game is pending for Saturday night at the local gym with a touring squad of basketeers that are reputed to be one of the fastest clubs on exhibition this season.

URANIA EASILY DEFEATS BOLTON

Foresters Take Early Lead And Trim Alexandrians, 29 To 16

URANIA, La., Jan. 19.—(Special)—The Urania Foresters showed fine form in subduing the Bolton Bears of Alexandria in the Urania gym last night by the score of 29 to 16. The Foresters took an early lead and were never in danger of being overtaken. The score at the half was 17 to 5.

The passwork of Schrader and Schultz was superb and they kept the Bears fighting for the ball all the time. The cool smooth floorwork of this pair kept their opponents on the defense almost the entire game and were able to take advantage of the defense set to stop Rooney, rangy Forester center. The efforts of Williams and Milner who were covering Rooney in the pivot position were in vain as Rooney led the scoring of the local with 9 points. Williams made 9 points for Bolton.

ON THE SIDELINES

by Edward J. Neil

If you need more than two successive sellout houses of 16,000 at Madison Square garden to convince you that college basketball has reached major league proportions in the east, harken to the absolute clincher. The boys have started an argument, a controversy bitter enough to grace any major sport.

And, after all, that's the final proof that a game, or anything else, has definitely arrived. No one bothers to work up a bet, and go out and offer to wrestle his neighbor to the death, unless he has developed more than a passing interest in the proceedings.

It's the officiating, the great controversy incites again, of course, matching boxing's "We woz robbed"; baseball's "Kill that thieving, mother-slugging tramp of an umpire," and horse racing's wails no matter when way the judge's call a nose and nose finish.

The battle comes of New York university having defeated both Notre Dame and Kentucky in succession before packed houses at the garden. After Kentucky's defeat by a single point on a foul shot in the final 50 seconds of play, the roaring reached a new high, aimed at two officials, both easterners.

Here's the situation as summed up by Ned Irish, the basketball bug who brought the college game into the Garden:

"Adolph Rupp, Kentucky coach, stated that he had been robbed of the contest. The officials of the game, Dave Walsh and John Murray, I consider among the most efficient in this district.

"The plays Kentucky used in the first half were in direct violation of the rules as interpreted in New York and the east. Many tutors in the midwest, from which section Rupp got his basketball, try to evade the rules in their use of the contact block.

"I am fully convinced that an official of Murray's experience and capability would never have called a block in the final minute of play if there had not been one committed. Murray would have been open to just as much censure from Howard Cann, coach of N. Y. U., if he had permitted such a block and the Kentucky player had gone through to score the deciding basket.

"If anything, it is a case of interpretation.

"Simply because in Rupp's own district and in Kansas an illegal block is taught and condoned by officials is no reason for metropolitan district men to accept this standard.

"I have written L. W. St. John, chairman of the joint rules committee, expressing my opinion that the pivot play under the basket should be legislated out of the game. It gives rise to most of the arguments on interpretation variations.

"Before last Saturday's game the coaches conferred with Walsh and Murray regarding this play. It was agreed upon that if a player took his place in the pivot and remained still without feeling for his defensive opponent by backing up or shifting his body they would insist on the defensive man not making contact. On the other hand, if the pivot man moved with the defensive man the officials would take no action until the ball was passed to the pivot man. From then on they would be considered in the same way as any other two players on the floor.

"I think that the task of deciding which initiates the contact in this situation is so difficult for officials that the best solution would be to take it out of the game."

Major Sasse To Visit Mississippi State Today

STATE COLLEGE, Miss., Jan. 19.—(AP)—Major Ralph Sasse, the former West Point Military academy coach, is expected here tomorrow to "look things over."

State college is negotiating with him for head coach of football and college officials and alumni today expressed the hope that Sasse and the college would be able to reach an agreement.

"It is our hope that some agreement, at least tentative, can be reached," G. D. Humphrey, president of the college said today.

In case things go well here tomorrow the state alumni interested in football at State expect to meet Monday in Jackson and express their interest in the athletic prospects.

If Sasse accepts the position he will succeed Coach A. R. MacKechnie, resigned.

Southeastern Basketball Tourney Likely To Be Held

ATLANTA, Jan. 19.—(AP)—The Journal says present indications are that the 1934 rule which abolished the annual Southeastern conference basketball tournament will be rescinded at the meeting of the conference executive committee in Nashville February 8 and 9.

With abolition of the rule, the paper says, there is strong likelihood that the event will be reinstated this year as a part of the conference athletic program.

An unofficial survey of the situation was said to have revealed the possibility that nine of the 13 committee members who will vote on the question will favor the tournament.

Pirates' Rookie Catcher Hurt When Struck By Limb

JACKSON, Miss., Jan. 19.—(AP)—Struck by a tree limb in the head as he was demonstrating a tractor in Attala county, Hal Finney, 28-year-old catcher, under contract with the Pittsburgh Pirates, was in a hospital here today.

He was badly bruised as the tractor rolled under a tree and a limb snapped back and struck him in the head.

He was said to be responding to treatment at the hospital here.

His father, Charles Finney of Chambers county, Ala., arrived here today.

Finney was farmed out to Albany in the International league last summer. He probably will report to the Pirates spring training camp in California next month.

NEW LIGHTWEIGHTS RESTORE INTEREST IN BOXING RACKET

Ambers, Del Genio And Other Good Youngsters Forge To Front

By Jimmy Donahue
(NEA Service Sports Writer)

Several lightweights have blossomed forth into championship caliber in the last 12 months, and restored considerable interest in that division.

Tony Canzoneri, Sammy Fuller, and Frankie Klick are the only old-line contenders for Barney Ross' leadership. The others have mushroomed to fame practically overnight. Ross squares off with Klick in a non-title engagement at Miami on January 24.

Who ever heard of Lou Ambers until the New York commission picked him out of the pack a month or two ago and decreed that Ross must meet the Herkimer Hurricane in defense of his crown? Ross was suspended for failing to accept Ambers' challenge. Ambers, a smaller edition of the late Harry Greb, smacked the stuffing out of Harry Dublinsky, Chicago tough nut, the other night.

Unless you've been in New York in recent months, you've probably never heard of Leonard Del Genio, who has made only 20 professional starts, none of them outside of the big burg.

Del Genio stopped Frankie Wallace, tough Cleveland belter, on the same bill that saw Ambers socking Dublinsky. Now they're calling Del Genio a second Terry McGovern, and Brooklyn youth is gunning for Ambers and Ross.

Chicago has three new first rate entries, Davey Day, Frankie Sicilio, and Leo Rodak. Day is a stablemate of Ross.

Rodak, who has turned in 22 consecutive victories, is paired with Canzoneri on the lake front on January 31. Last August Rodak scored a smashing victory over Petey Hayes, of the Bronx. Hayes was fresh from cuffing the broken Kid Chocolate into oblivion. Rodak will be hot on Ross' trail if he gets over Canzoneri, which still is something in the way of a robust assignment.

Eddie Cool, a Philadelphian with considerable more experience than Ambers, Del Genio, Day, Sicilio, or Rodak, also is available. His name did not appear in the first 10 last year. A rather dismal performance against Fuller in New York not long ago took the edge off Cool, but close observers wouldn't be surprised to see him bob right back in a top position before the last fist is flung in 1935.

With several scuffles in the offing, between members of this crop for the right to tackle Ross, it would seem that the 135-pound lads are due to dispel the depression.

Irish Basketeers Show They Can 'Draw', Too

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Jan. 19.—(AP)—It seems the fans like to watch Notre Dame basketball teams as well as the Irish outfits which tread the gridiron.

The first eight games of a 22-contest schedule this season attracted 59,000 persons. With some of the best games still to be played, university officials believe last year's record of 102,000 spectators at 24 games will be bettered.

Great Salvator's Mile Mark Stood For 28 Years

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth of a series of articles on the 10 greatest feats of running horse racing.

By Max Riddle
(NEA Service Turf Writer)

On a summer day in 1932, an old gentleman named Matt Byrne sat in the stands at Arlington Park and watched a horse whirl to a new world record for the mile. The sight of the great Equipoise racing to a record called back to him vivid memories of a horse of another day.

It was more than 40 years ago that Matt Byrne trained the immortal Salvator for his race against time. And Matt could not help but mutter as Ekky steamed down the stretch in 1:34 2-5, that Salvator would have made it in 1.32.

That was a pretty broad statement to make, considering the fact that the world mark set by Salvator in 1890, and which stood for nearly 30 years, was only 1:35 1-2. But there were several factors that influenced Byrne's remark.

To begn with, the Arlington track on which Equipoise made his mark was the fastest of all our circuits at that time. Monmouth Park, where Salvator raced, was a number of seconds slower.

Second, back at the beginning of the gay nineties, no one had any idea a horse could run so fast a mile as 1:36, or under. And, as had been so often proved in our human mile races, one must have the vision of that sort of speed to achieve it.

Thus, Salvator, as other horses of his time, was trained to run in bursts of speed, usually in the stretch, while modern horses race at top speed from post to flag.

Last, neither then nor now has anyone ever tried to intimate that Salvator did his best in the race in which his only opponent was time.

Matt Byrne, in fact, was nearly wild at the riding tactics of Marty Bergen, and always claimed that had Isaac Murphy ridden Salvator (Murphy was under suspension at the time, or he would have) the hoss would have raced the mile in 1:33.

In noting Matt Byrne's angered comments, one should remember that Salvator was not merely lowering a world record, but was dropping it from 1:39 1-4 to 1:35 1-2, or nearly four whole seconds. In other words, though the rest of the world was positively startled by the performance Byrne was disappointed, and mourned the loss of Murphy, the incomparable jockey who rated horses like Nurmi rates himself with a stop watch.

Yet, despite Byrne's angry opinion, Bergen gave Salvator a very able ride for he clicked off the quarters in nearly even time to accomplish a superb example of rating.

He took Salvator to the half in even quarters of 23 3-4 seconds, where, seeing Byrne gesticulating wildly, he apparently eased Salvator slightly. Yet he raced each of the last two quarters in 24 seconds each, and finished the last half only 1-2 second slower than the first.

Byrne always said Bergen had raced Salvator's heart out in the first half so that he had nothing left with which to finish. Actually, Bergen had kept Salvator under a steadying restraint during the last half, and had not asked Salvator for his best.

Reported That St. Louis Club Got $30,000 In Cash In Deal

By W. N. Paxton
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Manager Rogers Hornsby of the St. Louis Browns announced tonight that Pitcher Irving "Bumps" Hadley had been traded to the Washington Senators for Catcher Luke Sewell and cash, and that Sewell in turn had been sold to the Chicago White Sox.

Hadley

Hornsby declined to say how much money was involved, but it probably approximates $30,000. The proceeds will be used to purchase outfielders, sorely needed by the Browns.

"We made the deal because we considered it the best way of getting what we wanted," explained the one-time "Rajah" of the National league, who last year succeeded in dragging the once "tail end" St. Louis Americans part way up the league ladder.

"We tried to arrange a trade for outfielders," continued Hornsby, "but nobody would give us what we wanted. The offer from Washington was so attractive that we took it and will use the cash now to get what we need."

The pitching fortunes of Hadley did not rise in 1934 in conformance with the general Brownie performance. In 1933 he was the hardest working hurler in the league, with 15 wins and 30 losses in 317 innings. Last year he dropped 16 games and won 10. He is 30 years old.

Since the trade last fall which sent Bruce Campbell to Cleveland in exchange for Pitcher Bob Weiland and Infielder John Burnett, the Browns have been seeking outfield reinforcements. At present there are only four fly-chasers on the roster, Ray Pepper, Sammy West, Beau Bell and Debs Garms.

It is well known, although not officially admitted, that Hornsby would like to obtain Gerald Walker from Detroit. The flashy outfielder aroused the ire of Manager Mickey Cochrane last summer when he was caught off base several times and was fined for careless running, and he has been reported on the block.

WILDCATS DEFEAT LOYOLA, 47 TO 39

Louisiana College Makes It Two Straight In Easy Victory

PINEVILLE, La., Jan. 19.—(AP)—Louisiana college swept the two-game series with Loyola university of New Orleans by defeating the Wolfpack 47 to 39, here tonight in a heavy-scoring contest in which Referee Curry called 39 fouls, 17 of them on the winners.

Although Richard Crowell, Wildcat guard, was one of the two Louisiana college sophomores to be "excused" on four fouls, he was high point man with 14 points as the Wolves guarded Carroll Barron, Friday night's leader, closely and he was able to account for only 10.

George Patterson, of Louisiana college, had one run of nine straight points and finished tied with Beter of Loyola for second honors with 13. Pel Hughes slapped in 12.

The Cats showed vast improvement in passing and shooting over their earlier performances.

PAR SMASHED IN SACRAMENTO OPEN

Sarazen, Lacey And Horton Smith Take Lead With Snappy 70s

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Jan. 19.—(AP)—A quartet of the country's leading professionals bettered par by two strokes today to tie for 18-hole leadership in the $2,500 Sacramento open golf tournament.

Gene Sarazen, New York; Charles Lacey, Great Neck, Long Island; Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa., and Horton Smith, of Oak Park, Ill., turned in 70s over the long wind-swept municipal links.

Only a stroke behind and themselves one under par were Jimmy Thomson, Long Beach, Calif., and Clarence Clark, Bloomfield, N. J.

Bracketed at 72 were Denny Shute, Philadelphia; Jim Demaret, Galveston, Texas, and Mark Frey, Oakland, Calif.

A chill wind proved a trying handicap to many in the field along with a course made soft by recent rains.

Despite the cold a large gallery turned out, with Walter Hagen, Detroit, and Richard Arlen, Hollywood film player, dividing most of the spectators with Sarazen and Ky Laffoon of Chicago.

Hagen toured the 6,787-yard course in 74, while Arlen, after playing a nice 37 on the out nine, faltered to a 42 coming home and wound up with a 79.

Sarazen, cracking his tee shots down the middle and getting long distance, was out in 35 and home in 35.

Smith matched par 36 on the outward nine, dropped a stroke on the par four twelfth and recouped with three birdies and a par in the next four holes.

Lacey, with a great spoon on the second and another distance-shattering wood on the seventh, chalked up two birdie fours to go out in 34 and then ran off nine straight pars on the back side to come home in 36.

A long drive and a crisp brassie brought Picard to the 435-yard eighth green in two pretty shots and he rolled in a short putt for a birdie to go out in 35. He picked up another birdie on the par four eleventh, lost his advantage when he took a five on the par four thirteenth but followed up with a birdie on the fourteenth to come home with another 35.

The day's work found not a few of the favorites back in the middle or high seventies. Dick Metz, Chicago, could do no better than a 77, while Johnny Revolta, Milwaukee, carded a 76, and Vic Ghezzi, winner of the Los Angeles open earlier this week, needed a 75.

Another eighteen holes will be played tomorrow, with the final 36 scheduled for Monday.

Curt Davis, Phillies' pitcher, did not play any baseball at all until he was 15 years old, then started as a first baseman.

EAST DIXIE LOOP TO MEET TODAY

Columbus And Helena May Be Added To Increase Clubs To Eight

VICKSBURG, Miss., Jan. 19.—(AP)—Membership o fthe East Dixie baseball league for the 1935 season will be definitely determined at a meeting of directors of the circuit to be held here tomorrow.

Alvin Gardner, of Dallas, president of East and West Dixie leagues and the Texas league, will preside at the session. An eight-club circuit is being planned for 1935.

At a recent meeting six clubs announced ready for 1935 season, including the membership that finished 1934 season. They are El Dorado and Pine Bluff, Ark., and Jackson, Greenville, Greenwood and Clarksdale, Mississippi.

Columbus, Miss., and Helena, Arkansas may be invited into the league. Columbus announced ready to enter at a meeting held last December. Helena's delegation was optimistic over entering if a big league hook-up could be arranged. Reports from Helena indicated that an atiempt was being made to obtain hook-up with the Cincinnati Reds.

Vicksburg also is being considered for a berth.

The Clarksdale Ginners plan to enter the league and play night baseball. President George Comeaux is negotiating with Detroit and Milwaukee for working agreements. Ben Tincup, veteran pitcher, has been mentioned as the 1935 manager of Ginners. A financial campaign in Clarksdale has been meeting with success.

The El Dorado Lions will re-enter the circuit, and George Harper, former major leaguer, may again pilot the team. William Styles will manage the Pine Bluff Judges again this season and Herschel Bobo has been signed as manager of Jackson Senators to succeed Guy Lacy.

Clay Hopper, for ten years connected with Cardinal farm systems, will manage the Greenwood Chiefs.

Work will begin next week on Greenwood's new park.

Greenville, winner of the second half in the pennant chase last season, will be under the managership of Glenn Bolton, former Cleveland pitcher and first baseman for the Buckshots last season. Bolton will succeed Frank Brazill, who returns to the Southern association as manager of the Nashville Vols.

Vice-President Ben Gildart of East Dixie league, and Secretary F. J. Millette of the Greenville Buckshots will attend the meeting.

Irving "Buzz" Bartling of the Michigan State college baseball squad has received at least seven offers from big league scouts eager to get an option on him but has declined them all. He has two more seasons in college.

CENTER QUINTET TO PLAY 2 GAMES WITH SUNFLOWER

Indians Meet Strong Mississippi Junior College This Week

Still seeking a victory after three defeats in as many games, the Northeast Center cagers will go into a two-game series with the Sunflower Junior College of Moorhead, Mississippi, at the Northeast Center gymnasium, Thursday and Friday nights.

The Sunflower junior college boasts one of the ranking quintets in the junior college conference of Mississippi and will be one of the favorites for honors in their conference. The rangy Mississippians have come out on the long end of score in the majority of the games they have played this season.

Heading this brilliant Mississippi five is their elongated center, Burnett, who is the ace sharpshooter of the club, and opponents find it hard to get the rebound off the bankboard over this Sunflower star. Besides Burnett, the entire team is composed of excellent "shots" and it is seldom that any of the starters fail to break into the scoring.

The Northeast Center squad seems unable to shake their inferiority complex but this has not cast any gloomy atmosphere over the club. Coach Phillips said that he expected to lose several games at the beginning of the season as the entire Purple and Gold squad is composed of freshman material with no cage experience. Coach Phillips expressed his confidence in his squad, stating that they would hit their stride soon and begin turning in some high scores in games that will net them victories.

The Indians' second defeat at the hands of the smooth working Arkansas Aggies Friday night was caused by their inability to make good their free throws. Out of eighteen charity tosses, the local Redmen were only able to sink six of them.

Coach Phillips had his charges going through their paces yesterday as usual and said that he would begin to lengthen the Indians' practice periods. By the time the first of the two games with the Sunflower quintet starts, the Redskin cagers should be in tip-top shape.

Besides the two-game series with the Mississippi junior college, a game is pending for Saturday night at the local gym with a touring squad of basketeers that are reputed to be one of the fastest clubs on exhibition this season.

If you need more than two successive sellout houses of 16,000 at Madison Square garden to convince you that college basketball has reached major league proportions in the east, harken to the absolute clincher. The boys have started an argument, a controversy bitter enough to grace any major sport.

And, after all, that's the final proof that a game, or anything else, has definitely arrived. No one bothers to work up a bet, and go out and offer to wrestle his neighbor to the death, unless he has developed more than a passing interest in the proceedings.

It's the officiating, the great controversy incites again, of course, matching boxing's "We wuz robbed"; baseball's "Kill that thieving, mother-slugging tramp of an umpire," and horse racing's wails no matter which way the judges call a nose and nose finish.

The battle comes of New York university having defeated both Notre Dame and Kentucky in succession before packed houses at the garden. After Kentucky's defeat by a single point on a foul shot in the final 50 seconds of play, the roaring reached a new high, aimed at two officials, both easterners.

Here's the situation as summed up by Ned Irish, the basketball bug who brought the college game into the Garden:

"Adolph Rupp, Kentucky coach, stated that he had been robbed of the contest. The officials of the game, Dave Walsh and John Murray, I consider among the most efficient in this district.

"The plays Kentucky used in the first half were in direct violation of the rules as interpreted in New York and the east. Many tutors in the midwest, from which section Rupp got his basketball, try to evade the rules in their use of the contact block.

"I am fully convinced that an official of Murray's experience and capability would never have called a block in the final minute of play if there had not been one committed. Murray would have been open to just as much censure from Howard Cann, coach of N. Y. U., if he had permitted such a block and the Kentucky player had gone through to score the deciding basket.

"If anything, it is a case of interpretation.

"Simply because in Rupp's own district and in Kansas an illegal block is taught and condoned by officials is no reason for metropolitan district men to accept this standard.

"I have written L. W. St. John, chairman of the joint rules committee, expressing my opinion that the pivot play under the basket should be legislated out of the game. It gives rise to most of the arguments on interpretation variations.

"Before last Saturday's game the coaches conferred with Walsh and Murray regarding this play. It was agreed upon that if a player took his place in the pivot and remained still without feeling for his defensive opponent by backing up or shifting his body they would insist on the defensive man not making contact. On the other hand, if the pivot man moved with the defensive man the officials would take no action until the ball was passed to the pivot man. From then on they would be considered in the same way as any other two players on the floor.

"I think that the task of deciding which initiates the contact in this situation is so difficult for officials that the best solution would be to take it out of the game."

Major Sasse To Visit Mississippi State Today

STATE COLLEGE, Miss., Jan. 19.—(AP)—Major Ralph Sasse, the former West Point Military academy coach, is expected here tomorrow to "look things over."

State college is negotiating with him for head coach of football and college officials and alumni today expressed the hope that Sasse and the college would be able to reach an agreement.

"It is our hope that some agreement, at least tentative, can be reached," G. D. Humphrey, president of the college said today.

In case things go well here tomorrow the state alumni interested in football at State expect to meet Monday in Jackson and express their interest in the athletic prospects.

If Sasse accepts the position he will succeed Coach A. R. MacKechnie, resigned.

Southeastern Basketball Tourney Likely To Be Held

ATLANTA, Jan. 19.—(AP)—The Journal says present indications are that the 1934 rule which abolished the annual Southeastern conference basketball tournament will be rescinded at the meeting of the conference executive committee in Nashville February 8 and 9.

With abolition of the rule, the paper says, there is strong likelihood that the event will be reinstated this year as a part of the conference athletic program.

An unofficial survey of the situation was said to have revealed the possibility that nine of the 13 committee members who will vote on the question will favor the tournament.

Pirates' Rookie Catcher Hurt When Struck By Limb

JACKSON, Miss., Jan. 19.—(AP)—Struck by a tree limb in the head as he was demonstrating a tractor in Attala county, Hal Finney, 28-year-old catcher, under contract with the Pittsburgh Pirates, was in a hospital here today.

He was badly bruised as the tractor rolled under a tree and a limb snapped back and struck him in the head.

He was said to be responding to treatment at the hospital here.

His father, Charles Finney of Chambers county, Ala., arrived here today.

Finney was farmed out to Albany in the International league last summer. He probably will report to the Pirates spring training camp in California next month.

NEW LIGHTWEIGHTS RESTORE INTEREST IN BOXING RACKET

Ambers, Del Genio And Other Good Youngsters Forge To Front

By Jimmy Donahue
(NEA Service Sports Writer)

Several lightweights have blossomed forth into championship caliber in the last 12 months, and restored considerable interest in that division.

Tony Canzoneri, Sammy Fuller, and Frankie Klick are the only old-line contenders for Barney Ross' leadership. The others have mushroomed to fame practically overnight. Ross squares off with Klick in a non-title engagement at Miami on January 24.

Who ever heard of Lou Ambers until the New York commission picked him out of the pack a month or two ago and decreed that Ross must meet the Herkimer Hurricane in defense of his crown? Ross was suspended for failing to accept Ambers' challenge. Ambers, a smaller edition of the late Harry Greb, smacked the stuffing out of Harry Dublinsky, Chicago tough nut, the other night.

Unless you've been in New York in recent months, you've probably never heard of Leonard Del Genio, who has made only 20 professional starts, none of them outside of the big burg.

Del Genio stopped Frankie Wallace, tough Cleveland belter, on the same bill that saw Ambers socking Dublinsky. Now they're calling Del Genio a second Terry McGovern, and a Brooklyn youth is gunning for Ambers and Ross.

Chicago has three new first rate entries, Davey Day, Frankie Sigilio, and Leo Rodak. Day is a stablemate of Ross.

Rodak, who has turned in 22 consecutive victories, is paired with Canzoneri on the lake front on January 31. Last August Rodak scored a smashing victory over Petey Hayes, of the Bronx. Hayes was fresh from cuffing the broken Kid Chocolate into oblivion. Rodak will be hot on Ross' trail if he gets over Canzoneri, which still is something in the way of a robust assignment.

Eddie Cool, a Philadelphian with considerable more experience than Ambers, Del Genio, Day, Sigilio, or Rodak, also is available. His name did not appear in the first 10 last year. A rather dismal performance against Fuller in New York not long ago took the edge off Cool, but close observers wouldn't be surprised to see him bob right back in a top position before the last fist is flung in 1935.

With several scuffles in the offing, between members of this crop for the right to tackle Ross, it would seem that the 135-pound lads are due to dispel the depression.

Irish Basketeers Show They Can 'Draw', Too

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Jan. 19.—(AP)—It seems the fans like to watch Notre Dame basketball teams as well as the Irish outfits which tread the gridiron.

The first eight games of a 22-contest schedule this season attracted 50,000 persons. With some of the best games still to be played, university officials believe last year's record of 102,000 spectators at 24 games will be bettered.

Great Salvator's Mile Mark Stood For 28 Years

By Max Riddle
(NEA Service Turf Writer)

On a summer day in 1932, an old gentleman named Matt Byrne sat in the stands at Arlington Park and watched a horse whirl to a new world record for the mile. The sight of the great Equipoise racing to a record called back to him vivid memories of a horse of another day.

It was more than 40 years ago that Matt Byrne trained the immortal Salvator for his race against time. And Matt could not help but mutter as Ekky steamed down the stretch in 1:34 2-5, that Salvator would have made it in 1.32.

That was a pretty broad statement to make, considering the fact that the world mark set by Salvator in 1890, and which stood for nearly 30 years, was only 1:35 1-2. But there were several factors that influenced Byrne's remark.

To begn with, the Arlington track on which Equipoise made his mark was the fastest of all our circuits at that time. Monmouth Park, where Salvator raced, was a number of seconds slower.

Second, back at the beginning of the gay nineties, no one had any idea a horse could run so fast a mile as 1:36, or under. And, as had been so often proved in our human mile races, one must have the vision of that sort of speed to achieve it.

Thus, Salvator, as other horses of his time, was trained to run in bursts of speed, usually in the stretch, while modern horses race at top speed from post to flag.

Last, neither then nor now has anyone ever tried to intimate that Salvator did his best in the race in which his only opponent was time.

Matt Byrne, in fact, was nearly wild at the riding tactics of Marty Bergen, and always claimed that had Isaac Murphy ridden Salvator (Murphy was under suspension at the time, or he would have) the hoss would have raced the mile in 1:33.

In noting Matt Byrne's angered comments, one should remember that Salvator was not merely lowering a world record, but was dropping it from 1:39 1-4 to 1:35 1-2, or nearly four whole seconds. In other words, though the rest of the world was positively startled by the performance Byrne was disappointed, and mourned the loss of Murphy, the incomparable jockey who rated horses like Nurmi rates himself with a stop watch.

Yet, despite Byrne's angry opinion, Bergen gave Salvator a very able ride, for he clicked off the quarters in nearly even time to accomplish a superb example of rating.

He took Salvator to the half in even quarters of 23 3-4 seconds, where, seeing Byrne gesticulating wildly, he apparently eased Salvator slightly. Yet he raced each of the last two quarters in 24 seconds each, and finished the last half only 1-2 second slower than the first.

Byrne always said Bergen had raced Salvator's heart out in the first half so that he had nothing left with which to finish. Actually, Bergen had kept Salvator under a steadying restraint during the last half, and had not asked Salvator for his best.

PLUMMER MEETS SAUTA FOR CRACK AT BLACKSTOCK

WINNER OF NEXT MATCH WILL GET CHANCE AT TEXAN

Californian Said To Be Worthy Opponent For Husky Iowa Meanie

Johnny Plummer, tough Iowan, will meet Dr. Sauta, spectacular California matman, in the main event of the weekly wrestling show at Roosevelt stadium Wednesday night with a bout with Marshall Blackstock the reward for the winner, promoter Charlie Bruscato announced yesterday.

Blackstock performed here last week, beating Scotty Dawkins in straight falls. Two weeks ago the tough Blackstock injured his hand when he knocked out Chief Chewchki in New Orleans and he still carried the injured member in a bandage last week. Blackstock will rest this week in order to give his hand time to heal. He will be in good shape for his match with the winner of the Plummer-Sauta battle the following week.

Dr. Sauta is said to be one of the greatest drawing cards on the Pacific coast. Weighing 225 pounds, Sauta is called the "medico of the mat world." He was an all-round athlete, with wrestling as his hobby. He is a former boxer, basketball player, football star and swimming idol.

The Californian knows all the holds, but according to his press notices, he can wrestle "clean" or use the rough tactics that go over so well at the local stadium. And when he decides to get tough, he's plenty hard to beat.

Plummer, of course, is well known to local fans. He, too, is plenty tough, Johnny's match with Nick Elitch was one of the sensations of the double main event last week, and there is every indication that the Plummer-Sauta bout will be equally as good, with both boys bearing a reputation for roughness.

Plummer asked Promoter Bruscato for a crack at Blackstock after he had defeated Elitch in straight falls last week, but the local promoter decided to stage a sort of elimination bout for the dubious honor. Plummer said he realized that Blackstock is a tough opponent but he figured to gamble on holding his own against the tough Texan, as a victory over him would boost Johnny's stock considerably.

The match between Blackstock and the winner of the Plummer-Sauta match will be on a winner-take-all basis, Promoter Bruscato said.

Bruscato said that he would attempt to bring Elitch back here for the semi-final bout. He declared that he is reasonably sure of signing the spectacular Greek and that he is looking around for a worthy opponent for Nick.

Both bouts will be best two out of three falls, with the main event limited to two hours and the semi-final having a one-hour time limit.

Minnesota Gets Another Large Sports Structure

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Dedication of Minnesota's new physical education building February 16 will mark the completion of the third major sports structure on the campus in recent years.

The three-story building, located near the open end of massive Memorial stadium, long has been described as a paramount necessity. It houses athletic administrations offices and classrooms in addition to a top floor gymnasium and two swimming pools.

Across busy University avenue is the fieldhouse, one of the largest of its kind in the United States.

The new physical education building provides accommodations previously supplied by the Armory, one of the oldest buildings on the campus. The largest of the swimming pools, 75 feet long and 40 feet wide, will make it possible for Minnesota to be host to conference and sectional swimming meets, previously impractical because of the Armory pool's limited size.

J. Francis Hogan, portly Boston Braves catcher, has had the billiard room of his Somerville, Mass., home made over into a gymnasium in his determination to trim himself down to playing weight.

Champion Ross Favored Over Klick In Title Fight

Barney Given Edge Because Of Weight Agreement They Made

By John J. Romano

Barney Ross will risk his mythical junior welterweight title at Miami Thursday evening. Barney's opponent will be Frankie Klick, the Ukranian scrapper from the Slot district of San Francisco. Ross will be the odds on choice to whip his adversary indecisive fashion and possibly stop him before the ten round limit is reached. It is all in the way you look upon Barney's prowess with the padded mittens. Klick is not a set-up by any means. He has the distinction of holding Ross even in ten rounds. Those who doubt the wisdom of that verdict point out that the scrap was held in Frankie's home town and allowance should be made for the officials favoring a Native Son. But Klick silences all such nonsense by stepping up and signing to fight Ross for little or nothing and at a weight which gives Barney every physical advantage. This is nothing new to Klick who has been fighting mostly for glory during the past two years. The Frisco battler is a puzzle to sticklers for weight agreements. It matters not to him if the fight is booked at 126 pounds or 140. He sheds weight or puts it on with equal facility and strangely enough does not impair his fighting ability.

Ross has been a fighter from today he first saw the light of day in New York's lower east side. It was touch and go for the elder Rasofky trying to assuage the pangs of hunger and keep seven little Rasofkys in clothes. Relatives in Chicago induced Mr. Rasofky to make his home there. Barney was but twelve years old when he tasted the first bitter iron of life. Returning from school one day he saw a large crowd gathered in front of the little store of his father. Pushing his way through his startled eyes beheld the outstretched form of his parent, a victim of a hoodlum's bullet. From then on Barney looked at the world in a different light. Chicago began to know a different Rasofky than the meek little Jewish lad who would walk blocks out of his way to avoid the little toughs who hold him up and exacted homage in tasty cakes, candies and whatever else was in the little store. The new Barney stood up to his rights manfully. True he came home with blackened eyes and mashed lips. But not all the time. Soon the toughs took to their heels and admitted "the little Jew can really fight."

Barney's mother could not take care of her large brood. She was compelled to place three of them in an orphanage. He was kept in school and managed to get two years in high school training before he decided the burden was too great for Mother Rasofky. His natural inclination led toward the prize ring and in his first year captured the Golden Gloves lightweight championship.

Then came the hard grind. Turning professional he was considered "just another kid from the West Side" until Jackie Fields, then world's welterweight champion, took him under his wing and developed his natural fighting ability. It was a tough road to travel. Purses were small unless he fought on the same card as his mentor-champion but out of his earnings he was able to send some money home and hasten the return of his younger sisters and brothers to their own home.

Then came the chance to fight Tony Canzoneri for the world's lightweight title. Barney took the fight and the small end of the purse. The fans did not think enough of his chances with the result that he barely made training expenses out of the fight. It was different when he won the fight and title and moved to New York to reap the benefits of his untiring efforts.

Chicagoans did not appreciate Ross until he met and vanquished Jimmy McLarnin. He stepped in where other Jewish fighters of prominence refused to tread. McLarnin had been poison to boys of Jewish extraction. Not even the great Benny Leonard was able to forestall the mighty Irishman's bludgeoning fists. But Barney took the dare and came out of the scrap with the world's welterweight crown. It was the first time in fistic history a lad of his weight held both titles at the same time. But there was one jinx Ross could not subdue. The Madison Square Bowl has yet to witness a champion successfully defend his title. Ross succumbed to McLarnin. The fight changed doubtful opinion as to his ability into certainty and there are those who place him on the same plane as the immortals of the prize ring.

To be frank Ross is not as great as he has shown thus far. His work against Tony Canzoneri and Jimmy McLarnin cannot be taken as a true gauge. They are the type of fighters who make a boxer look good.

Despite Barney Ross' rightful claim to headlines he will be overshadowed by the one and only Max Baer and his "kid" brother, Buddy. Max and Bud will do their stuff against Tony Canzeli and Frankie Simms. It will be fine clowning and still take the edge from the earnest efforts to Ross and Klick.

Bobby Jones Says

The following comes from one of the golfing brotherhood in Melbourne, Australia:

"I have read articles of yours on bunker play in which you say that one should be able to chip cleanly from sand as well as explode. In none of these articles have I been able to find anything beyond the fact that you believe the club employed for chipping from sand should be more lofted than would be used for playing from a similar lie on turf. What is really troubling me is whether in playing these shots, the clubhead should be descending slightly when it meets the ball, or should be travelling parallel to the ground. I always feel more confident when playing them in the manner first mentioned, but I have been told that this is not the correct method of execution. Would you be good enough to give me a slant on this question?"

Dubbed Chip Disastrous

Chipping from sand is about the riskiest method that can be chosen. Often one is tempted by an attractive lie to attempt the shot when the situation is not as favorable as it ought to be. It is always well to remember that the chip that fails may be doubly disastrous, because in all likelihood the ball will be left under the bank of the bunker where nothing but an heroic explosion will get it out.

It is because of the delicacy of the stroke that I advise using a more lofted club than would be used from a similar situation on turf. A chip from the fairway may be struck squarely in the back with little risk, but a feather of sand taken behind a ball in a bunker will be fatal. Using the more lofted club, and addressing the ball more nearly off the right foot, a descending blow can be delivered which will greatly lessen the chances of a serious mistake. Thus is my correspondent's question answered specifically.

Dislikes Explosion Shot

While on the subject of bunker play, I cannot help thinking how strange it is that the average golfer hates to explode. Watch any number of them and you will see them try to chip, cut the ball out, and everything else before they will lay the club off and take a healthy wallop at the sand. They dislike any method designed primarily to get out of the trouble, and in trying to save one stroke, more often than not lose two or three unnecessarily. A ridge of sand a quarter-inch high behind the ball might be enough to switch an expert from a chip to a half or full explosion, but it would not likely deter a less experienced and less capable player.

Bunker technique varies a great deal among even the better players. There are always enough possibilities in any situation to give free rein to a player's individuality. But it is a good rule to play the thing as safely as you can. If there is any reasonable amount of doubt about your ability to keep your club free of sand until after striking you would best go on into it and know what is going to happen.

Coaches Can't Agree On Where To Place Baskets

Basketball Experts To Let Fans Decide Which Rules They Want

By Charles Grumich
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 19.—Opposing schools of thought in two midwestern basketball capitals will lay their pet schemes to make the game more appealing to the spectator and more fair to the players—long and short—before the next meeting of the national rules committee.

They are lined up in diametrically opposed camps, one holding that scoring should be made more difficult and the other that it should be easier.

The first definite move was made by Dr. F. C. (Phog) Allen of the University of Kansas, who had his team play two experimental games with the baskets hoisted to a position 12 feet above the floor, two feet higher than the official level.

He sought to forestall the tall centers and forwards, whom he terms "dunkers" because of their ability to leap up and drop the ball through the hoop.

Few agreed that the baskets should be raised, among them Dr. James Naismith of the University of Kansas, who started it all by nailing a pair of peach baskets 10 feet high at opposite ends of a gymnasium in Springfield, Mass., nearly a half century ago.

However, Allen insists the baskets will be raised within the next five years, although probably not the full two feet he originally proposed.

A leader in the opposite camp is Coach George Edwards of the University of Missouri, who with several other coaches is experimenting with a present-height basket 20 inches in diameter, two inches larger than official size—using the same idea Gene Sarazen had a few years ago when he proposed that golf should be made easier by doubling the size of the cups.

Allen points out that adoption of larger baskets would necessitate wholesale replacements all over the country and that the same results could be obtained by reducing the size of the ball, which, he asserts, would also help the proponents of larger scores by facilitating ball-handling. He also points out that the diameter of the ball has been trimmed three inches in the last five years.

Craig Ruby of the University of Illinois, who joined Edwards in the larger-goal, more-scoring experiment, now expresses belief, Allen says, that the goals should be raised at least six inches. Ruby's conversion to the Allen belief resulted from another innovation tried in the 12-foot basket game.

The bankboards were moved from the present station two feet inside the end boundaries to a point six feet inside the court. This was favored by a majority of those balloting on the proposals and is likely to be adopted generally. The change is designed to reduce the number of time-wasting throw-ins from out of bounds when a goal is attempted and missed.

Rubs points out that with the bankboards farther inside the court, the angle of incidence of a pass being thrown in when the ball does go outside behind the board will necessitate greater clearance between the floor and the bottom of the board.

Among the experiments being studied are the Pacific coast conference's "no-jump" rule and the counting of field goals as three points on the theory that they should enjoy a 3-to-1 ratio to free throws.

Cubs Delay Offering Root A Contract For This Year

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—(AP)—The Chicago Cubs apparently have decided not to offer Charlie Root, veteran right handed pitcher, a contract for 1935 until he demonstrates he has regained winning form.

The Cub war office announced that Root, who was a holdout last spring, has "agreed to terms," but said nothing about a contract. At the same time Vice President-Manager Charlie Grimm said the signed contract of Augie Galan, young infielder who is to be tried in the outfield, was received today.

Root, the work horse of the Cub staff for several seasons, won only four games last year while losing seven.

Irish Have Long Track Card; Rely On Gridders

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Jan. 19.—(AP)—Fifteen indoor and outdoor engagements, one of the most comprehensive schedules ever drawn up, face Notre Dame's track team during the coming season.

The schedule includes dual meets and various relays and conference and state engagements, beginning February 1 and ending June 7.

The team is expected to be strong in the sprints and middle distance events. Mike Layden, football star, is a fast hurdler, while Don Elser, another gridder, is the bulwark in the shot put department.

Captain Vincent Murphy, winner of nine firsts in an equal number of attempts, gives the Irish a nest egg of points in the high jump.

Booing Is International, South Americans Display

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 19.—(AP)—While boxing in Buenos Aires is meeting with only mediocre, or worse, financial success despite the presence of Primo Carnera, Tommy Loughran and Paulino Uzcudun, wrestling packs them in with regularity.

Three wrestling shows are held weekly at Luna Park, the Madison Square Garden of the Argentine, with the Zbyszkyo brothers, both past middle age, among the star performers. Fiercest of the performers, however, are a 300-pound Argentine called "The Terrible Iguazu," and Jack Russell, billed as "the American Cowboy."

The atmosphere is just like that of American wrestling shows. Russell, whose success was assured by building of the animosity of audiences with awesome gouging tactics, universally is greeted with "Buuh . . . Fuera . . . Fuera." Yes, it means "Boo . . . Throw Him Out."

TERRY THINKS HIS GIANTS WILL WIN

Cubs And Cardinals Are Most Dangerous Rivals, Says Pilot

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Bill Terry is so sure his patched up Giants will come through this season that he is serving warning to all that has is the club to beat.

Terry is touring the south, playing one night stands as part of an oil company's traveling show which features, in addition to Terry, a dance band and a group of the company's officials.

Between speeches to Rotary clubs, the Giant pilot finds time to size up the coming National league flag chase.

"The team that beats us will win the championship" predicted Terry in his latest interview. "And the clubs with the best chances are the Cubs and the Cardinals."

The Giants will be much stronger than in 1934, he thinks, because of the acquisition of Shortstop Dick Bartell and Outfielder George Davis and because Terry feels Carl Hubbell, the Oklahoma southpaw, will be better than ever.

Hubbell suffered from overwork in the fag end of the last campaign when the Giants developed the jitters and blew higher than a kite as they thundered down the home stretch with the Cardinals.

The lanky portsider was the first Giant to sign a contract for 1935, thereby spiking reports that he was sulking because Terry offered to trade him soon after the season closed.

The only publicized holdout so far seems to be Zeke Bonura, White Sox first sacker. Zeke says unless the Sox raise his ante he'll quit baseball and go into business with his father.

There was talk that Guy Bush, traded to the Pirates, is dissatisfied with salary terms, but the latest from the Mississippian is that the shift from the Cubs pleases him immensely since he doesn't have to pitch to the Waner boys any more.

Jimmy Jordan, Brooklyn's clever-fielding shortstop and second baseman, who gained considerable notoriety last summer by going A. W. O. L. for a while, has signed his 1935 contract.

Charlie Dressen intends that his young and untried Cincinnati Reds shall see nothing but the toughest sparring partners in their spring games. Except for five games with Toronto, the Reds will shun minor league clubs during their southern rehearsing. Thirteen games will be played with the American league champions, Detroit's Tigers.

MIDGET ATLANTAN AGAIN SHUFFLES TENNIS RANKINGS

Bitsy Grant Continues In Role Of 'Giant Killer' In Florida

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 19.—(Special)—Bryan M. (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, Ga., has again shuffled the national rating cards and stacked them to suit himself.

In the face of the statement of William T. Tilden that he was "just a marathon runner with a lot of courage," Grant hurled back the stinging challenge that he "would play the big boy on any clay court in America for $100 if permitted three weeks of training." He didn't get an answer to this. So the wee Atlantan "poured on" the proverbial "oil" by making the professional star "eat his own words."

The opportunity presented itself for this simultaneously with the staging of the annual Miami Biltmore tennis tournament here. In the first major net event of the 1935 season this month the little "Giant Killer" duplicated an act of 1934 in the same tourney when he eliminated Frank X. Shields, No. 1 ranking U. S. player in the semi-final round.

This year it was Sidney B. Wood, Jr., of New York, the nation's second ranking star that Grant decisively defeated in the same round. He then went on to win from Berkeley Bell, also of New York and rated seventh in the country, in the finals to gain a leg on the Colonel Henry L. Doherty trophy. So with Grant ranking only tenth in the nation all of this apparently puts the professional star, Tilden, in a very embarrassing position. More so in view of the fact that Tilden, when comparing Grant with "a marathon runner," also rated Wood as "tops" among the amateur players of the present era.

The little Atlantan, weighing only 128 pounds and about twice as fast as a tennis racquet standing on end, made these defeats most decisive, taking both Wood and Bell in straight set matches.

Prior to the opening of the tournament Grant said he hadn't picked up a racquet since last year when he won the national clay courts crown. He also predicted that Dr. Eugene McCauliff, seventeenth ranking player in the nation would eliminate him in the quarter-final round. On the contrary Grant lost only one set in fighting his way to the title through a field of 64 players.

The fact that he most decisively defeated Wood by the set scores of 8-6, 6-1 and 6-0 certainly proves something. One game in the last two sets was all that the "nucleus" of this year's American Davis Cup team could garner off the midget racquet wielder.

It is doubtful if the little Georgian will participate in many tournaments this year. His father wants him to settle down to business and Bitsy is making a strong effort to please him. He has started off a career in the automobile sales business.

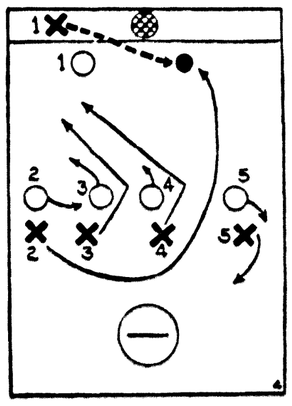
When Grant won the Miami Biltmore singles crown Wood and Bell were not the only other tanning stars that were fighting for the same honor. In the field were such netmen as J. Gilbert Hall, of South Orange, N. J., eastern clay courts champion; Marcel Rainville, of Montreal, Canada and No. 1 player of the Canadian Davis Cup team; young Frank Guernsey, of Orlando, Fla., and champion of Florida state, besides a number of other players who packed enough ability to clip off any of the heretofore mentioned stars.

In the previous two years of the tournament George Lott, of Chicago, was the victor and had his name inscribed on the Doherty trophy. But those inscriptions went to waste for Lott has since turned professional. He joined Tilden and his barnstorming exhibitionists. So Grant is the only player now having a bona-fide claim on the three-year cup.

Ranking stars who competed in the tournament here this year came forward with high praise for the array of young southern talent that vied also for the championship. The tough battles, many going to deuce set scores, that the youngsters put up against the more experienced players was sufficient proof of this.

WINNING BASKETBALL

By Nat Holman



Here is another out-of-bounds play. As X-1 takes the ball out of bounds, the rest of the team lines up across the court about five feet behind the foul circle.

X-3 and X-4 feint right and cut left toward the passer. X-2, using X-3, X-4, and their guards as a screen, cuts around them for the pass.

X-5 swings back or to the side, to carry his man out of the play.

By Harry Grayson

In explaining why he was the terror of American league batteries and infields for 24 campaigns, Tyrus Raymond Cobb says he simply stood on his "aggressive rights."

"Aggressive rights"—a definition of success in any form of competition as short as Cobb made the sprint from second base to the plate. "Aggressive rights"—taking all the rules allow and then some. "Aggressive rights"—the difference between the winner and the loser. The general run of baseball attacks are altogether too mild.

The Cardinals and the Tigers made the 1934 world series a memorable one by taking their aggressive rights. The base lines were theirs, and they claimed every inch of them, with menacing spikes and flying arms.

Pepper Martin, Joe Medwick, Bill DeLancey, Rip Collins and Ernie Orsatti didn't stop to be tagged, and the Cardinals edged out the Giants in the dizziest stretch drive in the history of the majors.

Frankie Frisch never went out of his way to cause trouble, but neither did he ever run away from it. While the once Fordham Flash has lost much of his get up and go, he, too, blazed in emergencies.

One or two inspired players can spread the flag fever. Mickey Cochrane's fiery charge, backed by the spirit of skinny Jo-Jo White and Goose Goslin, kept the Detroit Tigers fairly roaring along from barrier to tape.

It was White's scissors slide that turned what otherwise might have been a humdrum world series into a sizzling scrap. The Cardinals are firm believers in retaliation, and two sides were playing the game after White kicked the ball from Frisch's hands two or three times in St. Louis.

The climax of what was perhaps the wildest world series ever played came in the closing contest, when Judge Landis took the easy way out, and banished Medwick in a shower of bottles and buns. Medwick was only making the most of his aggressive rights when he came roaring into Third Baseman Owen with glistening spikes whistling in the air.

In 1933 it was the get-the-hell-out-of-the-way assault of Joe Cronin, Heinie Manush, and Buddy Myer that saw Washington through. Manush undoubtedly has had more first basemen threatening his life than any other player of recent years.

It was his dash that last year suddenly lifted Bill Werber, of the Boston Americans, from the ranks of the mediocre. The Red Sox won't be sluggish this trip, with Cronin, Werber, Roy Johnson, Bill Cissell, and Wesley Ferrell. Johnson steps out of the way for nobody. Cissell's hustle largely was instrumental in making Cleveland a contender in 1932.

A pitcher's "aggressive rights" are of a different type. While Wesley Ferrell no longer has the high, hard one that prompted hitters to pull in their necks, he gets all he is entitled to in other ways. Ferrell dislikes to lose. Fellows like that are hard to beat.

Ben Chapman, of the Yankees, loves to get on the bases and go. Tony Lazzeri while not demonstrative, never has been cheated.

Dick Bartell, traded to the Giants by the Phillies, makes his own breaks. Bill Jurges, of the Cubs, slides fast without even stopping to ask questions later. Al Lopez, of the Dodgers, never hesitates.

Athletes with vastly less ability than many who remain in the background have made themselves outstanding simply by standing on their aggressive rights.

Contemporaries of Cobb hit more naturally, were faster, and threw better than the Georgia Peach, but lacked his dominating passion to excel.

The career of Jimmy Dykes, manager of the White Sox, now closing out his run, is a striking success story of a player who kept trying.

Baseball could use more young men who are not afraid to stand on their "aggressive rights." Then the game wouldn't have to be played at night, and a major league park wouldn't be going to the dogs.

LEAGUE TO LOAN BRAVES MONEY TO RETAIN FRANCHISE

Judge Fuchs Given Until Feb. 5 To Complete Other Arrangements

By Bill King
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

BOSTON, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Apparently pledged to silence about the National league's relief plans for their Boston Braves, Emil Fuchs and Charles F. Adams, president and vice president, respectively, returned home today to clean up their end of a financial deal that must be completed on or before February 5.

During yesterday's 13-hour special league meeting in New York, which saw Fuchs abandon the Braves field dog racing plans that brought his dire financial troubles under a glaring spotlight, he and Adams were given less than three weeks of grace to contact "certain parties" who must be reckoned with before Ford C. Frick, young National league head, can announce a satisfactory solution of the first major problem to beset his presidency.

These "certain parties," although Frick, Fuchs and Adams carefully avoided saying so, are the minority stockholders of the Boston Braves, most of whom are friendly to Fuchs.

Few of them have been financially interested in the Braves for more than a year, for Fuchs persuaded many of his friends to invest in the club last season, after the National league granted him a heavy loan.

This loan came after Adams, who had carried the financial burden for several unsuccessful seasons, served notice that he was not to be called upon for further financial assistance.

The official instructions to contact these "certain parties" indicated to those "in the know" about the Braves' financial affairs that the league had promised Fuchs another loan large enough to either buy out Adams' interests outright or repurchase enough of his stock to regain control.

Among those "certain parties," it is believed, are Governor James M. Curley and a group of his political friends. Last season, when some new stockholders were added to the Braves' list, Paul Curley, son of the governor, replaced Weston Adams, a large stockholder in his own right, as the Braves' traveling secretary. Young Curley is still occupying that position.

It is known that Adams would welcome such an arrangement. He has often said that he would not take over the club and that his only aim was to salvage as much of his baseball investment as was possible.

Having assured his fellow magnates that dogs will never race in Braves field, the popular Fuchs has probably regained their sympathy and support. Any possibility of the Braves going into new hands disappeared with Fuchs' announcement that he would continue as the Braves' president with Bill McKechnie as his manager.

Therefore it seems assured that the Braves, with the same old faces, will be doing business at the same old stand, with the help of a few new pocketbooks.

PLUMMER MEETS SAUTA FOR CRACK AT BLACKSTOCK

WINNER OF NEXT MATCH WILL GET CHANCE AT TEXAN

Californian Said To Be Worthy Opponent For Husky Iowa Meanie

Johnny Plummer, tough Iowan, will meet Dr. Sauta, spectacular California matman, in the main event of the weekly wrestling show at Roosevelt stadium Wednesday night with a bout with Marshall Blackstock the reward for the winner, promoter Charlie Bruscato announced yesterday.

Blackstock performed here last week, beating Scotty Dawkins in straight falls. Two weeks ago the tough Blackstock injured his hand when he knocked out Chief Chewchki in New Orleans and he still carried the injured member in a bandage last week. Blackstock will rest this week in order to give his hand time to heal. He will be in good shape for his match with the winner of the Plummer-Sauta battle the following week.

Dr. Sauta is said to be one of the greatest drawing cards on the Pacific coast. Weighing 225 pounds. Sauta is called the "medico of the mat world." He was an all-round athlete, with wrestling as his hobby. He is a former boxer, basketball player, football star and swimming idol.

The Californian knows all the holds, but according to his press notices, he can wrestle "clean" or use the rough tactics that go over so well at the local stadium. And when he decides to get tough, he's plenty hard to beat.

Plummer, of course, is well known to local fans. He, too, is plenty tough, Johnny's match with Nick Elitch was one of the sensations of the double main event last week, and there is every indication that the Plummer-Sauta bout will be equally as good, with both boys bearing a reputation for roughness.

Plummer asked Promoter Bruscato for a crack at Blackstock after he had defeated Elitch in straight falls last week, but the local promoter decided to stage a sort of elimination bout for the dubious honor. Plummer said he realized that Blackstock is a tough opponent but he figured to gamble on holding his own against the tough Texan, as a victory over him would boost Johnny's stock considerably.

The match between Blackstock and the winner of the Plummer-Sauta match will be on a winner-take-all basis, Promoter Bruscato said.

Bruscato said that he would attempt to bring Elitch back here for the semi-final bout. He declared that he is reasonably sure of signing the spectacular Greek and that he is looking around for a worthy opponent for Nick.

Both bouts will be best two out of three falls, with the main event limited to two hours and the semi-final having a one-hour time limit.

Minnesota Gets Another Large Sports Structure

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Dedication of Minnesota's new physical education building February 16 will mark the completion of the third major sports structure on the campus in recent years.

The three-story building, located near the open end of massive Memorial stadium, long has been described as a paramount necessity. It houses athletic administrations offices and classrooms in addition to a top floor gymnasium and two swimming pools.

Across busy University avenue is the fieldhouse, one of the largest of its kind in the United States.

The new physical education building provides accommodations previously supplied by the Armory, one of the oldest buildings on the campus. The largest of the swimming pools, 75 feet long and 40 feet wide, will make it possible for Minnesota to be host to conference and sectional swimming meets, previously impractical because of the Armory pool's limited size.

J. Francis Hogan, portly Boston Braves catcher, has had the billiard room of his Somerville, Mass., home made over into a gymnasium in his determination to trim himself down to playing weight.

Champion Ross Favored Over Klick In Title Fight

By John J. Romano

Barney Ross will risk his mythical junior welterweight title at Miami Thursday evening. Barney's opponent will be Frankie Klick, the Ukranian scrapper from the Slot district of San Francisco. Ross will be the odds on choice to whip his adversary indecisive fashion and possibly stop him before the ten round limit is reached. It is all in the way you look upon Barney's prowess with the padded mittens. Klick is not a set-up by any means. He has the distinction of holding Ross even in ten rounds. Those who doubt the wisdom of that verdict point out that the scrap was held in Frankie's home town and allowance should be made for the officials favoring a Native Son. But Klick silences all such nonsense by stepping up and signing to fight Ross for little or nothing and at a weight which gives Barney every physical advantage. This is nothing new to Klick who has been fighting mostly for glory during the past two years. The Frisco battler is a puzzle to sticklers for weight agreements. It matters not to him if the fight is booked at 126 pounds or 140. He sheds weight or puts it on with equal facility and strangely enough does not impair his fighting ability.

Ross has been a fighter from today he first saw the light of day in New York's lower east side. It was touch and go for the elder Rasofky trying to assuage the pangs of hunger and keep seven little Rasofkys in clothes. Relatives in Chicago induced Mr. Rasofky to make his home there. Barney was but twelve years old when he tasted the first bitter iron of life. Returning from school one day he saw a large crowd gathered in front of the little store of his father. Pushing his way through his startled eyes beheld the outstretched form of his parent, a victim of a hoodlum's bullet. From then on Barney looked at the world in a different light. Chicago began to know a different Rasofky than the meek little Jewish lad who would walk blocks out of his way to avoid the little toughs who held him up and exacted homage in tasty cakes, candies and whatever else was in the little store. The new Barney stood up to his rights manfully. True he came home with blackened eyes and mashed lips. But not all the time. Soon the toughs took to their heels and admitted "the little Jew can really fight."

Barney's mother could not take care of her large brood. She was compelled to place three of them in an orphanage. He was kept in school and managed to get two years in high school training before he decided the burden was too great for Mother Rasofky. His natural inclination led toward the prize ring and in his first year captured the Golden Gloves lightweight championship.

Then came the hard grind. Turning professional he was considered "just another kid from the West Side," until Jackie Fields, then world's welterweight champion, took him under his wing and developed his natural fighting ability. It was a tough road to travel. Purses were small unless he fought on the same card as his mentor-champion, but out of his earnings he was able to send some money home and hasten the return of his younger sisters and brothers to their own home.

Then came the chance to fight Tony Canzoneri for the world's lightweight title. Barney took the fight and the small end of the purse. The fans did not think enough of his chances with the result that he barely made training expenses out of the fight. It was different when he won the fight and title and moved to New York to reap the benefits of his untiring efforts.

Chicagoans did not appreciate Ross until he met and vanquished Jimmy McLarnin. He stepped in where other Jewish fighters of prominence refused to tread. McLarnin had been poison to boys of Jewish extraction. Not even the great Benny Leonard was able to forestall the mighty Irishman's bludgeoning fists. But Barney took the dare and came out of the scrap with the world's welterweight crown. It was the first time in fistic history a lad of his weight held both titles at the same time. But there was one jinx Ross could not subdue. The Madison Square Bowl has yet to witness a champion successfully defend his title. Ross succumbed to McLarnin. The fight changed doubtful opinion as to his ability into certainty and there are those who place him on the same plane as the immortals of the prize ring.

To be frank Ross is not as great as he has shown thus far. His work against Tony Canzoneri and Jimmy McLarnin cannot be taken as a true gauge. They are the type of fighters who make a boxer look good.

Despite Barney Ross' rightful claim to headlines he will be overshadowed by the one and only Max Baer and his "kid" brother, Buddy. Max and Bud will do their stuff against Tony Cancela and Frankie Simms. It will be fine clowning and still take the edge from the earnest efforts to Ross and Klick.

MIDGET ATLANTAN AGAIN SHUFFLES TENNIS RANKINGS

Bitsy Grant Continues In Role Of 'Giant Killer' In Florida

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 19.—(Special)—Bryan M. (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, Ga., has again shuffled the national rating cards and stacked them to suit himself.

In the face of the statement of William T. Tilden that he was "just a marathon runner with a lot of courage," Grant hurled back the stinging challenge that he "would play the big boy on any clay court in America for $100 if permitted three weeks of training." He didn't get an answer to this. So the wee Atlantan "poured on" the proverbial "oil" by making the professional star "eat his own words."

The opportunity presented itself for this simultaneously with the staging of the annual Miami Biltmore tennis tournament here. In the first major net event of the 1935 season this month the little "Giant Killer" duplicated an act of 1934 in the same tourney when he eliminated Frank X. Shields, No. 1 ranking U. S. player in the semi-final round.

This year it was Sidney B. Wood, Jr., of New York, the nation's second ranking star that Grant decisively defeated in the same round. He then went on to win from Berkeley Bell, also of New York and rated seventh in the country, in the finals to gain a leg on the Colonel Henry L. Doherty trophy. So with Grant ranking only tenth in the nation all of this apparently puts the professional star, Tilden, in a very embarrassing position. More so in view of the fact that Tilden, when comparing Grant with "a marathon runner," also rated Wood as "tops" among the amateur players of the present era.

The little Atlantan, weighing only 128 pounds and about twice as tall as a tennis racquet standing on end, made these defeats most decisive, taking both Wood and Bell in straight set matches.

Prior to the opening of the tournament Grant said he hadn't picked up a racquet since last year when he won the national clay courts crown. He also predicted that Dr. Eugene McCauliff, seventeenth ranking player in the nation would eliminate him in the quarter-final round. On the contrary Grant lost only one set in fighting his way to the title through a field of 61 players.

The fact that he most decisively defeated Wood by the set scores of 8-6, 6-1 and 6-0 certainly proves something. One game in the last two sets was all that the "nucleus" of this year's American Davis Cup team could garner off the midget racquet wielder.

It is doubtful if the little Georgian will participate in many tournaments this year. His father wants him to settle down to business and Bitsy is making a strong effort to please him. He has started off a career in the automobile sales business.

When Grant won the Miami Biltmore singles crown Wood and Bell were not the only other ranking stars that were fighting for the same honer. In the field were such netmen as J. Gilbert Hall, of South Orange, N. J., eastern clay courts champion; Marcel Rainville, of Montreal, Canada and No. 1 player of the Canadian Davis Cup team; young Frank Guernsey, of Orlando, Fla., and champion of Florida state, besides a number of other players who packed enough ability to clip off any of the heretofore mentioned stars.

In the previous two years of the tournament George Lott, of Chicago, was the victor and had his name inscribed on the Doherty trophy. But those inscriptions went to waste for Lott has since turned professional. He joined Tilden and his barnstorming exhibitionists. So Grant is the only player now having a bona-fide claim on the three-year cup.

Ranking stars who competed in the tournament here this year came forward with high praise for the array of young southern talent that vied also for the championship. The tough battles, many going to deuce set scores, that the youngsters put up against the more experienced players was sufficient proof of this.

By Harry Grayson

In explaining why he was the terror of American league batteries and infields for 24 campaigns, Tyrus Raymond Cobb says he simply stood on his "aggressive rights."

"Aggressive rights"—a definition of success in any form of competition as short as Cobb made the sprint from second base to the plate, "Aggressive rights"—taking all the rules allow and then some. "Aggressive rights"—the difference between the winner and the loser. The general run of baseball attacks are altogether too mild.

The Cardinals and the Tigers made the 1934 world series a memorable one by taking their aggressive rights. The base lines were theirs, and they claimed every inch of them, with menacing spikes and flying arms.

Pepper Martin, Joe Medwick, Bill DeLancey, Rip Collins and Ernie Orsatti didn't stop to be tagged, and the Cardinals edged out the Giants in the dizziest stretch drive in the history of the majors.

Frankie Frisch never went out of his way to cause trouble, but neither did he ever run away from it. While the once Fordham Flash has lost much of his get up and go, he, too, blazed in emergencies.

One or two inspired players can spread the flag fever. Mickey Cochrane's fiery charge, backed by the spirit of skinny Jo-Jo White and Goose Goslin, kept the Detroit Tigers fairly roaring along from barrier to tape.

It was White's scissors slide that turned what otherwise might have been a humdrum world series into a sizzling scrap. The Cardinals are firm believers in retaliation, and two sides were playing the game after White kicked the ball from Frisch's hands two or three times in St. Louis.

The climax of what was perhaps the wildest world series ever played came in the closing contest, when Judge Landis took the easy way out, and banished Medwick in a shower of bottles and buns. Medwick was only making the most of his aggressive rights when he came roaring into Third Baseman Owen with glistening spikes whistling in the air.

In 1933 it was the get-the-hell-out-of-the-way assault of Joe Cronin, Heinie Manush, and Buddy Myer that saw Washington through. Manush undoubtedly has had more first basemen threatening his life than any other player of recent years.

It was his dash that last year suddenly lifted Bill Werber, of the Boston Americans, from the ranks of the mediocre. The Red Sox won't be sluggish this trip, with Cronin, Werber, Roy Johnson, Bill Cissell, and Wesley Ferrell. Johnson steps out of the way for nobody. Cissell's hustle largely was instrumental in making Cleveland a contender in 1932.

Baseball could use more young men who are not afraid to stand on their "aggressive rights." Then the game wouldn't have to be played at night, and a major league park wouldn't be going to the dogs.

LEAGUE TO LOAN BRAVES MONEY TO RETAIN FRANCHISE

Judge Fuchs Given Until Feb. 5 To Complete Other Arrangements

Bobby Jones Says

The following comes from one of the golfing brotherhood in Melbourne, Australia:

"I have read articles of yours on bunker play in which you say that one should be able to chip cleanly from sand as well as explode. In none of these articles have I been able to find anything beyond the fact that you believe the club employed for chipping from sand should be more lofted than would be used for playing from a similar lie on turf. What is really troubling me is whether in playing these shots, the clubhead should be descending slightly when it meets the ball, or should be travelling parallel to the ground. I always feel more confident when playing them in the manner first mentioned, but I have been told that this is not the correct method of execution. Would you be good enough to give me a slant on this question?"

Dubbed Chip Disastrous

Chipping from sand is about the riskiest method that can be chosen. Often one is tempted by an attractive lie to attempt the shot when the situation is not as favorable as it ought to be. It is always well to remember that the chip that fails may be doubly disastrous, because in all likelihood the ball will be left under the bank of the bunker where nothing but an heroic explosion will get it out.

It is because of the delicacy of the stroke that I advise using a more lofted club than would be used from a similar situation on turf. A chip from the fairway may be struck squarely in the back with little risk, but a feather of sand taken behind a ball in a bunker will be fatal. Using the more lofted club, and addressing the ball more nearly off the right foot, a descending blow can be delivered which will greatly lessen the chances of a serious mistake. Thus is my correspondent's question answered specifically.

Dislikes Explosion Shot

While on the subject of bunker play, I cannot help thinking how strange it is that the average golfer hates to explode. Watch any number of them and you will see them try to chip, cut the ball out, and everything else before they will lay the club off and take a healthy wallop at the sand. They dislike any method designed primarliy to get out of the trouble, and in trying to save one stroke, more often than not lose two or three unnecessarily. A ridge of sand a quarter-inch high behind the ball might be enough to switch an expert from a chip to a half or full explosion, but it would not likely deter a less experienced and less capable player.

Bunker technique varies a great deal among even the better players. There are always enough possibilities in any situation to give free rein to a player's individuality. But it is a good rule to play the thing as safely as you can. If there is any reasonable amount of doubt about your ability to keep your club free of sand until after striking you would best go on into it and know what is going to happen.

Coaches Can't Agree On Where To Place Baskets

Basketball Experts To Let Fans Decide Which Rules They Want

By Charles Grumich
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 19.—Opposing schools of thought in two midwestern basketball capitals will lay their pet schemes to make the game more appealing to the spectator and more fair to the players—long and short—before the next meeting of the national rules committee.

They are lined up in diametrically opposed camps, one holding that scoring should be made more difficult and the other that it should be easier.

The first definite move was made by Dr. F. C. (Phog) Allen of the University of Kansas, who had his team play two experimental games with the baskets hoisted to a position 12 feet above the floor, two feet higher than the official level.

He sought to forestall the tall centers and forwards, whom he terms "dunkers" because of their ability to leap up and drop the ball through the hoop.

Few agreed that the baskets should be raised, among them Dr. James Naismith of the University of Kansas, who started it all by nailing a pair of peach baskets 10 feet high at opposite ends of a gymnasium in Springfield, Mass., nearly a half century ago.

However, Allen insists the baskets will be raised within the next five years, although probably not the full two feet he originally proposed.

A leader in the opposite camp is Coach George Edwards of the University of Missouri, who with several other coaches is experimenting with a present-height basket 20 inches in diameter, two inches larger than official size—using the same idea Gene Sarazen had a few years ago when he proposed that golf should be made easier by doubling the size of the cups.

Allen points out that adoption of larger baskets would necessitate wholesale replacements all over the country and that the same results could be obtained by reducing the size of the ball, which, he asserts, would also help the proponents of larger scores by facilitating ball-handling. He also points out that the diameter of the ball has been trimmed three inches in the last five years.

Craig Ruby of the University of Illinois, who joined Edwards in the larger-goal, more-scoring experiment, now expresses belief, Allen says, that the goals should be raised at least six inches. Ruby's conversion to the Allen belief resulted from another innovation tried in the 12-foot basket game.

The bankboards were moved from the present station two feet inside the end boundaries to a point six feet inside the court. This was favored by a majority of those balloting on the proposals and is likely to be adopted generally. The change is designed to reduce the number of time-wasting throw-ins from out of bounds when a goal is attempted and missed.

Ruby points out that with the bankboards farther inside the court, the angle of incidence of a pass being thrown in when the ball does go outside behind the board will necessitate greater clearance between the floor and the bottom of the board.

Among the experiments being studied are the Pacific coast conference's "no-jump" rule and the counting of field goals as three points on the theory that they should enjoy a 3-to-1 ratio to free throws.

Cubs Delay Offering Root A Contract For This Year

CHICAGO, Jan. 19.—(AP)—The Chicago Cubs apparently have decided not to offer Charlie Root, veteran right handed pitcher, a contract for 1935 until he demonstrates he has regained winning form.

The Cub war office announced that Root, who was a holdout last spring, has "agreed to terms," but said nothing about a contract. At the same time Vice President-Manager Charlie Grimm said the signed contract of Augie Galan, young infielder who is to be tried in the outfield, was received today.

Root, the work horse of the Cub staff for several seasons, won only four games last year while losing seven.

Irish Have Long Track Card; Rely On Gridders

The schedule includes dual meets and various relays and conference and state engagements, beginning February 1 and ending June 7.

The team is expected to be strong in the sprints and middle distance events. Mike Layden, football star, is a fast hurdler, while Don Elser, another gridder, is the bulwark in the shot put department.

Captain Vincent Murphy, winner of nine firsts in an equal number of attempts, gives the Irish a nest egg of points in the high jump.

Booing Is International, South Americans Display

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 19.—(AP)—While boxing in Buenos Aires is meeting with only mediocre, or worse, financial success despite the presence of Primo Carnera, Tommy Loughran and Paulino Uzcudun, wrestling packs them in with regularity.

Three wrestling shows are held weekly at Luna Park, the Madison Square Garden of the Argentine, with the Zbyszkyo brothers, both past middle age, among the star performers. Fiercest of the performers, however, are a 300-pound Argentine called "The Terrible Iguazu," and Jack Russell, billed as "the American Cowboy."

The atmosphere is just like that of American wrestling shows. Russell, whose success was assured by building of the animosity of audiences with awesome gouging tactics, universally is greeted with "Buuh . . . Fuera . . . Fuera." Yes, it means "Boo . . . Throw Him Out."

TERRY THINKS HIS GIANTS WILL WIN

Cubs And Cardinals Are Most Dangerous Rivals, Says Pilot

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Bill Terry is so sure his patched up Giants will come through this season that he is serving warning to all that his is the club to beat.

Terry is touring the south, playing one night stands as part of an oil company's traveling show which features, in addition to Terry, a dance band and a group of the company's officials.

Between speeches to Rotary clubs, the Giant pilot finds time to size up the coming National league flag chase.

"The team that beats us will win the championship," predicted Terry in his latest interview. "And the clubs with the best chances are the Cubs and the Cardinals."

The Giants will be much stronger than in 1934, he thinks, because of the acquisition of Shortstop Dick Bartell and Outfielder George Davis and because Terry feels Carl Hubbell, the Oklahoma southpaw, will be better than ever.

Hubbell suffered from overwork in the fag end of the last campaign when the Giants developed the jitters and blew higher than a kite as they thundered down the home stretch with the Cardinals.

The lanky portsider was the first Giant to sign a contract for 1935, thereby spiking reports that he was sulking because Terry offered to trade him soon after the season closed.

The only publicized holdout so far seems to be Zeke Bonura, White Sox first sacker. Zeke says unless the Sox raise his ante he'll quit baseball and go into business with his father.

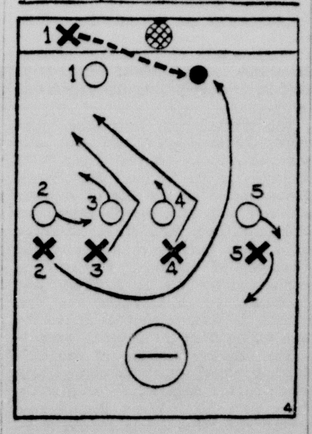
There was talk that Guy Bush, traded to the Pirates, is dissatisfied with salary terms, but the latest from the Mississippian is that the shift from the Cubs pleases him immensely since he doesn't have to pitch to the Waner boys any more.

Jimmy Jordan, Brooklyn's clever-fielding shortstop and second baseman, who gained considerable notoriety last summer by going A. W. O. L. for a while, has signed his 1935 contract.

Charlie Dressen intends that his young and untried Cincinnati Reds shall see nothing but the toughest sparring partners in their spring games. Except for five games with Toronto, the Reds will shun minor league clubs during their southern rehearsing. Thirteen games will be played with the American league champions, Detroit's Tigers.

WINNING BASKETBALL

By Nat Holman



Here is another out-of-bounds play. As X-1 takes the ball out of bounds, the rest of the team lines up across the court about five feet behind the foul circle.

X-3 and X-4 feint right and cut left toward the passer. X-2, using X-3, X-4, and their guards as a screen, cuts around them for the pass.

and made public later. They have precedent for such a course but it has been 30 years since it has been followed.

If the decision is not announced on Monday it will not be handed down until some time in February, since the court has scheduled a two weeks recess. Speculation has been stirred, however, that the momentuous answer may be forthcoming day after tomorrow.

The question up today was whether congress exceeded its powers in declaring worthless the clause found in most bonds and contracts guaranteeing payment in gold coin or its currency equivalent. An adverse ruling would give $100,000,000,000 of public and private bonds a value of 169,000,000,000 devaluated dollars.

Five days each week that the court is in session the nine sit in their silken robes behind the imposing mahogany bench of the courtroom and ceremoniously hear arguments on the cases which they must settle.

They enter in a stately procession, while attendants give each member an individual bow from the hips and the marshal intones the ancient formula which announces that the court is in session. But on Saturdays it is different.

Then they gather robeless in a large capitol chamber to exchange views on the cases which have been argued.

Chief Justice Hughes was the first to arrive today. Associate Justices Vandevanter and Butler, close friends and neighbors, came in together. The rest reached the consultation room singly. A negro messenger followed each with a bulky armload of records on the cases still to be decided.

BRUNO STUDIES MONEY ACCOUNTS

The state will submit to the jury of eight men and four women that Hauptmann, a carpenter with few jobs to keep him occupied in the depression period, managed to have an income of $49,960 between the times of the payment of the ransom, April 2, 1932, and the date of his arrest, September 19 last.

As it progresses through the devious business of revealing Hauptmann's brokerage transactions and the amount of his bank accounts, the prosecution will occasionally call witnesses to strengthen the state's contention Hauptmann was in the Hopewell area before and during the day of the kidnaping, March 1, 1932.

Federal Agents Edward Hill and William Frank and Assistant Attorney General Richard Stockton went over Hauptmann's bank and brokerage accounts in Trenton today. They eliminated 18 of the witnesses the state planned to call to testify to the Hauptmann accounts, and will produce only a certified public accountant and a federal agent.

The money angle of the case has been stressed from the beginning by Attorney General David T. Wilentz, chief of the prosecution staff. Hauptmann, he said in his opening to the jury on January 3, planned the kidnaping for money and collected the ransom alone.

He will show next week that Hauptmann bought a $400 radio shortly after the ransom collection date, that his wife, Anna, was able to make a trip to Germany in the summer of 1932, and that Hauptmann himself made frequent hunting trips. Moreover it was about that time, or a little later, the state will show, that Hauptmann opened his first brokerage account.

At the time of his arrest Hauptmann had a credit balance of $886 in his account with Steiner, Rouse and company, whose customer's man testified yesterday. Under his wife's maiden name, Anna Schoeffler, he had a credit balance of $5,017. In the Central Savings bank, New York, the Hauptmanns had a joint deposit account of $2,578. They held two mortgages, totalling $7,000, on houses in Brooklyn.

The state figures Hauptmann lost $7,000 in stock market speculations, and he made the assertion he loaned Isador Fisch, his German furrier friend, $7,500. Ransom money turned up before his arrest totalled more than $5,000 and when he was seized the authorities recovered $14,600, bringing the general total to $49,960.

The defense will try to offset the damaging effects of this evidence by showing that none of the ransom money turned up in Hauptmann's bank accounts or brokerage transactions. Reilly also has pointed out the carpenter and his wife were frugal in their habits and had sizeable bank accounts before the kidnaping.

The state will contend that Hauptmann changed ransom bills in small transactions and deposited numerous amounts of silver in the bank.

The so-called kidnap ladder, one of the most important pieces of evidence in the state's case, is still unaccepted as evidence by the court, though it has been marked for identification. The defense has objected to its admissibility on the grounds that its custody has not been clearly traced.

The state will call Arthur Koehler, federal forestry products expert, to trace the wood and to attempt to prove that Hauptmann made the ladder. The tools, found in his Bronx garage, including a plane, have been accepted as evidence and the state will try to show the plane was used in the ladder's construction.

Leila Roosevelt To Heed Lure Of African Jungle

20,000-Mile Trip Lies Ahead Of Attractive Cousin Of T. R.

(NEA Service Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Inspired by the wanderlust that she says is a family heritage, Leila Roosevelt, who last spring completed a trip around the world in a truck, will now emulate her illustrious cousin, the late Theodore Roosevelt, and set out to conquer African jungles, and the Sahara desert. Her cousin, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, entertained her at tea at the White House to wish her a safe journey.

Miss Roosevelt, who in private life is Mrs. Armand Denis, mother of four, including twins, will take her husband along with her this time to the Belgian Congo. On the truck expedition, Mrs. Denis was accompanied only by a woman friend.

Her preparations for taking off on a 20,000-mile trip that she expects will last a year and provide more thrills than the average 28-year-old girl knows in a lifetime, have been complicated by the fact that she has four children and at least a dozen pets to park somewhere.

The children—the oldest are twins, David and Armand, aged seven, the youngest, Heidi Ann, is two and a half—will board at the Connecticut school where their mother was educated. They will have their own cottage on the school grounds and a nurse to look after them. Also their grandmother will be only two miles away.

The pets, including two parakeets, a cockatoo, numerous cats, a kangaroo rat, three monkeys and a coati mundi, will be farmed out to zoos and friends.

Miss Roosevelt's personal baggage for her long trek, including 1,400 miles when she will be out of reach of all supplies, will be in one small suit case filled chiefly with riding clothes ("not shorts in the jungle," she comments. "Too many bugs and thorns!") She will also carry an evening dress, "just in case."

Miss Roosevelt is not so much interested in what she will wear, however, as she is in such equipment as vegetable peelers, a small sewing machine, cards of safety pins with which to bribe the natives and the small gasoline stove upon which meals will be cooked.

"I suppose I'll have to superintend all the cooking," she sighed, her brown eyes shadowed for a moment—usually everything about her glows with vitality and joy of living, teeth, skin, hair and eyes.

"I'm going to insist that the men take their turn, though. There'll be four others, besides my husband, including expert mechanics and a chauffeur loaned by the Belgian Charge d'Affaires at Washington who knows the Congo perfectly. Yes, I suppose I can get them to help with the cooking, but I expect I'll be the one who will have to sew on all the buttons and mend up all the rips. That's why I'm taking the machine. I may have to do the buttons by hand, but I am bound I won't sit in the middle of the Sahara patiently sewing up all the tears those men will get in their shirts.

"Am I scared?" Here her eyes resumed their sparkle. "I should say not! You see I'm going to take a camera and go all by myself from the Congo to Capetown, three thousand miles, altogether, taking animal pictures. Animals simply fascinate me and I hope to get some wonderful shots.

"I learned on that trip around the world that the worst hazards a woman alone has to fear are not from humans but from things like bridges that may give way with you. We broke three bridges on that trip of ours but we got across—just barely, though, a time or two. But we never were in any danger from humans. Once we camped right in the midst of a bunch of Persona bandits, too. They were perfectly polite and gave us gasoline. We heard next day that they'd just robbed and shot up some men, but they certainly treated us well."

Miss Roosevelt admits that she frightened her husband into taking her on this trip. It was when he refused to take her to Singapore two years ago that she organized an expedition of her own. This time he expects to keep an eye on her, at least as far as the Congo.

The Denis expedition will enter Africa through Morocco about 4,000 miles from its ultimate objective and will travel across the greater part of the continent by airplane and trucks equipped with inter-car radio communication facilities. Mr. Denis principal objective is the volcanic mountain range in Central Equatorial Africa which is the last known refuge of the mountain gorilla.

Denis' made the picture "Goona Goona" with Andre Roosevelt in Bali and was also production manager and director of Frank Buck's "Wild Cargo."

Tallulah

Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Ware entertained on Thursday evening at an informal supper at the Chicago Mill and Lumber company camp south of Tallulah, complimentary to their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Chandler of Memphis. Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Todd and Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Buckner were guests.

The Friday Night Bridge club met on Friday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Will Sevier, Jr., who served a delicious supper followed by bridge games. Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Scott were the fortunate winners of the high score awards. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Sevier, Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Scott, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Starrett and Mrs. H. W. Lee.

Circle one of the Methodist Missionary society met with Mrs. D. H. Allen on Monday afternoon with 15 members present. Mrs. T. W. In conclusion Mrs. Jones sang "Have Thine Own Way Lord."

Rev. H. L. Johns, presiding elder of the Monroe district of the Methodist church, occupied the pulpit at the Methodist church here Sunday night and preached an inspiring sermon. At the close of the service he held the first quarterly conference of the year when reports were given of the various phases of the church work.

On Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Ware entertained most charmingly with a steak supper at the Community club complimentary to their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Chandler of Memphis. Following the delicious supper bridge games were enjoyed resulting in the high score prizes being won by Mrs. Chandler and Mr. L. J. Kathan. Those in attendance were Mr. and Mrs. Chandler, Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Yerger, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Dickinson, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Todd, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Buckner, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Sevier, Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Kathan, Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Johnson and Mrs. Faye Conroy.

Trinity Guild of the Women's auxiliary of the Episcopal church was entertained at the home of Mrs. A. J. Sevier on Monday afternoon. Mrs. Lawrence Yerger presided over the business session when plans for raising money were discussed. The hostess served delicious refreshments during the social period.

The circles of the Woman's Missionary union of the Baptist church met at the church on Monday afternoon with 40 members present. Following the opening rymn, "Fling Out the Banner," Mrs. J. L. Davis conducted the devotional using the 12th chapter of Romans. During the session plans were made for the association meeting to be held in Tallulah Jan. 23. The group then divided into the six circles when the various officers were elected.

The January meeting of the American Legion auxiliary was held at the Community club building on Tuesday afternoon with a large attendance. Mrs. R. T. Campbell presided. After the opening ritual and during the business session plans were made and committees appointed for the president's ball which will be sponsored by the auxiliary. Mrs. Colvin Todd, chairman of the Christmas seals sale reported $150 secured from this source, $100 of which is to remain in this parish for tubercular work.

The program on "Legislation" was under the direction of Mrs. A. L. Sevier who spoke on the "Four-Point Program of the Legion." Mrs. Henry Sevier spoke on the life of Andrew Jackson and Mrs. R. K. Boney on Robert E. Lee. Mrs. W. L. Rountree as a vocal number sang "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny." She was accompanied by Mrs. R. N. Ware. The hostesses, Mrs. A. L. Sevier and Mrs. Claude Searles, served delicious cake and coffee during the social hour.

The January meeting of the Tallulah Parent-Teacher association took place in the high school auditorium here with Mrs. Albert Bunch presiding and Miss Velma Colvin serving as secretary. The program consisted of assembly singing, a talk on the conservation and resources and a piano solo by Mrs. James Davis. Mrs. Bomer's room received the attendance award.

INDUSTRIAL--REVIEW OF THE TWIN CITIES

NEW NASH HAS ALL-STEEL BODY

New Type Is One Of Strongest And Safest Ever Constructed

Of all-steel, one-piece construction, welded into a single steel unit, the 1935 Nash bodies are among the strongest and safest types ever developed for a motor car. New methods of bracing, the use of a solid steel floor which, when bolted to the chassis, gives the effect of two steel frames in one, and the new "steel-arch" construction principle results in the bodies having far greater strength and rigidity than was the case in former types of all-steel body construction.

Claimed for this type of construction is the final and complete elimination of body squeaks and rattles, plus greater safety due to the parabolic shape of the body itself. These were brought out during torsional and concussion tests conducted by Nash experimental engineers.

In the new Nash passengers literally ride completely enclosed and protected by sheet steel. The floor plates are strongly reinforced by three heavy cross members connecting the sturdy "u" type body sills which are also of steel construction. The first cross member is located at the forward edge of the front seat, the second just behind the front seat while the third is placed at the forward edge of the rear seat. The first two cross members are box-section girders, the other is an angle girder.

To further strengthen and reinforce the all-steel floor, ridges are stamped in the floor plates. This practice also eliminates "drumming" by breaking up the rhythm of vibrations.

Instead of resting directly upon the side members of the chassis frame, the steel body sills overhang the members thus giving a wider base for attaching the body to the frame with sixteen bolts, eight on a side.

The cowl, windshield pillars and the front roof crown panel are formed of one solid piece of heavy steel plate. A still heavier piece of steel, in the form of an arch, gives this front crown panel extra reinforcement by forming the inner panel of a steel box section. Both the outer and inner panels are welded to the side of the body, providing resistance to twisting strains at this point and resulting in greater safety and production in the event of a severe blow. The rounded surface at the front roof corners of the body also gives greater strength than the former sharp-cornered design.

Both front corner posts and center door posts are made entirely of welded steel in the shape of box-type girders resembling a square steel tube period at their base, these staunch, steel pillars are welded to the steel body sills; at the top, to the roof crown panels. The body roof is of tightly stretched, fine mesh, steel wire suported by cross beams and steel corner plates.

The all-steel doors are really two doors in one. They consist of two separate, heavy gauge, steel stampings, an inner and an outer panel, welded together to form a steel box. This construction makes the doors unusually rigid, eliminates the possibilities of their sagging even under heavy loads. The edge to which the hinges are fastened is reinforced with a heavy bridge type girder running from top to bottom. To prevent "drumming" the inner panel of the door is stamped in ridges. Nash Aeroform bodies are completely and scientifically soundproofed and insulated against heat, cold and noise. The steel floor has 4 layers of insulation as follows: On the under, or road, side it is sprayed with asphaltum compound. On the upper side a layer of Curzy pad is cemented, a layer of silencing material on that and finally the floor carpet. All body panels and doors are also sprayed with an asphaltum compound, while dash, toe-board and cowl sides are insulated with heavy wool fiber packing.

PLYMOUTH MEETS 1935 CONDITIONS

New Model Is Termed Revolutionary High-Speed Safety Car

Walter P. Chrysler termed the 1935 Plymouths as "revolutionary new-type high-speed safety cars, expressly designed to meet modern traffic conditions." The cars are on display at the Monroe Automobile Supply company.

Introduced in six beautiful body types the new Plymouths, streamlined in design, have added engineering developments which today more than ever before gives emphasis to its claim of being "America's best engineered low price car."

To quickly catalog the outstanding features of the new car—the 1935 Plymouth has an 82 horsepower engine with a compression ratio of 6.7 to 1; a torpedo-type all-steel safety body; syncro-silent transmission; a new "ride" achieved by a redistribution of weight, plus a new front spring assembly, "Floating Power" engine mountings and hydraulic brakes.

Mr. Chrysler, in announcing the new Plymouth, said that it was created to satisfy a critical need in America at the present time for safer transportation.

Chrysler motors engineers, pioneers in the development of such safety features as the all-steel body, hydraulic brakes and new principles of weight distribution, have perfected these safety factors in the new Plymouth.

The all-steel body of the 1935 Plymouth fits down over the double-drop X-type frame. The body and frame are bolted together at 46 different points. Thus, the frame becomes a unit of the body along with the all-steel floor, side panels, center posts and other members. This design also permitted the engineers to build more room in the bodies. Plymouth seats are wider. The floor has been lowered 3 1-4 inches, providing a lower center of gravity and more leg and head room for the passengers.

The Plymouth engine, "cushioned" in Floating Power rubber mountings, has been moved forward over the front axle to slow down the action of the front springs and make more room for the larger body. Plymouth passengers ride between the front and rear axles, entirely surrounded by protecting walls of steel.

With the engine over the front axle and the body moved forward and fitted onto the frame, the entire weight of the car has been re-distributed to create an entirely new kind of ride. To further improve the ride, the engineers have developed a new type of springs, double-action shock absorbers, and a sway eliminator.

Plymouth's hydraulic brakes have been improved this year by changing the size of the wheel cylinder pistons so that the pistons operating on the rear shoes of each wheel are larger than the piston actuating the front shoe. This equalizes the wear on the facings and provides much longer life to these parts. The new Plymouth has centrifuse brake drums that combine the light weight and strength of steel with the ideal braking characteristics of cast iron.

The new Plymouth engine, with its unusually high compression ratio, includes three major engineering refinements to keep engine temperatures down and reduce gasoline and oil consumption.

The three major refinements are—full-length water jackets, directional water circulation and calibrated ignition. Water jackets completely cool the engine cylinder bores from top to bottom. Previously, the water jackets extended only along the upper half of the cylinder bores. The new directional water circulation system supplies water direct to each cylinder and exhaust valve seat, the hottest parts of the engine, by means of a tube inserted through the engine block. Calibrated ignition is a new method of spark control that utilizes the vacuum in the intake manifold and assures maximum engine efficiency under all conditions without spark knock, and using only ordinary fuel.

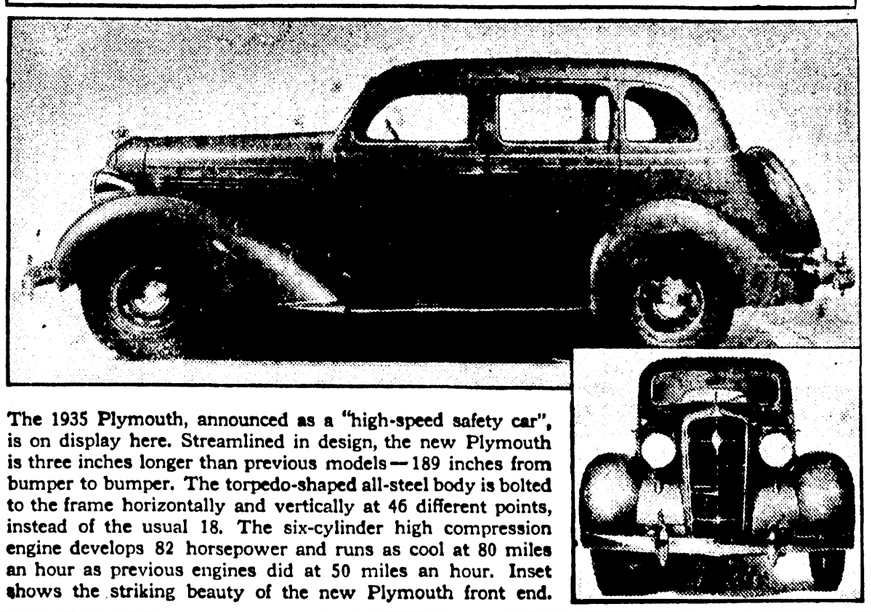
In the design of the new Plymouth, the engineers have applied their extensive study of aerodynamics. The Plymouth is streamlined to resist wind pressure in front and wind "drag" in the rear. The streamlined radiator, new headlamps and the general treatment of new front and styling—all combine to eliminate wind traps and flat surfaces. Authentic air-stream lines flow symmetrically back over the entire body structure to the tapering rear deck.

AUTOMOBILE FIRE

Firemen were called late Saturday afternoon to the 500 block of South Grand street to extinguish an automobile fire said to have been caused by operation of the automobile with the emergency brake in use. The damage was confined to the brake lining, it was stated. H. J. Fernandez is the owner of the car.

State biologists estimated 200 rattlesnakes as well as 90 to 95 per cent of the prairie dog population, died in Bailey county, Texas, in a program of spreading poisoned grain.

NEW "HIGH-SPEED SAFETY" PLYMOUTH



The 1935 Plymouth, announced as a "high-speed safety car", is on display here. Streamlined in design, the new Plymouth is three inches longer than previous models—189 inches from bumper to bumper. The torpedo-shaped all-steel body is bolted to the frame horizontally and vertically at 46 different points, instead of the usual 18. The six-cylinder high compression engine develops 82 horsepower and runs as cool at 80 miles an hour as previous engines did at 50 miles an hour. Inset shows the striking beauty of the new Plymouth front end.

TWIN CITY SHOWS NEW OLDSMOBILE

Strikingly Styled Models Placed On Display On South Grand

Featured by larger and roomier bodies, the new "turret" all-steel top, further advances in streamline treatment and a number of mechanical improvements, the new Oldsmobile sixes and straight eights are being presented at the Twin City Motor Co., 1700 South Grand street.

The principal improvements announced are: The solid steel "turret-top" body by Fisher, having as an integral part a roof stamped from a solid sheet of seamless steel. The body has steel protection for the passengers on all sides, top and bottom.

A streamline design in which the entire car slopes gracefully from the new radiator, back over the slanting windshield, rounded top and to the rear bumper in one sweeping line, accentuated by the single piece streamline fenders.

An A-type frame, 40 per cent stronger and more rigid than those of previous models. A boxed-in section has been added at the rear of the frame, the holes in the X-member eliminated as far as possible, and two fore and aft straddle bars are used over the gas tank as compared to the single bar of 1934.

A complete system of sound-proofing of chassis, engine and body. Roomier interiors with ample head and leg space, widened seats and smart new fittings. Huge luggage compartments.

Redistribution of weight to permit all passengers to ride between the axles, thus adding to comfort. This is done by moving the motor and the seats about five inches forward from the 1934 position. Longer wheelbase on both cars.

Increased power achieved largely through the use of an entirely new design cylinder head which gives a high compression ratio and still permits the use of standard fuel.

More economical operation because of improvements in the manifolding system and carburetor. Proving ground tests of the six have registered 18 miles to the gallon of gas at 50 miles an hour.

Retained for 1935 will be all the well-known Oldsmobile features of 1934. Principal among them are: Super-hydraulic self-energizing brakes with braking area increased by 14 per cent and longer life for the lining assured. The self-energizing feature employs the momentum of the car to increase the stopping power.

Knee-action wheels of the coil-spring tye used on the higher-priced cars. With this construction, employed and proved successful by Oldsmobile in 1934, the front wheels move up and down independently of each other, mounted on the chassis by strong upper and lower control arms.

The new body introduces for the first time in modern automobile manufacturing the all-steel roof, serving three purposes: First, the roof provides an extra margin of safety, heretofore unavailable in any car. Second, it adds greatly to the structural strength of the entire body. And third, it permits of beauty of line never before possible when the roof was covered with fabric material.

The designers have obtained scientific streamlining which enhances beauty. The front is completely new, with narrow and higher radiator grilles, new radiator ornaments, new fenders and restyled hood louvers.

Headlamps are mounted on the radiator shell instead of on the fender hood ledge. Running boards are entirely separate from the fenders and are mounted on three steel supports instead of the customary two. The spare tire no longer is mounted outside but is concealed in the new spacious luggage compartment in the rear of the car. Luggage space is now provided in standard models, and models with built-in trunks now have extra large carrying capacity.

The interiors of the new Oldsmobiles are smart and modern. The instrument panel, built of steel and integral with the body, is given a modern treatment. Provision is made for the installation of a radio dial as part of the panel.

The new Oldsmobiles are roomier in every respect, with the front seat of the six more than three inches wider than that of the eight of 1934. There is increased head and leg room. The cars are easier of access because of larger doors both front and rear.

Both six and eight will have seven body models. They are the business coupe, sport coupe, five-passenger coupe with built-in trunk, convertible coupe, sedan and touring sedan with built-in trunk.

W. C. T. U. Field Officer Will Talk In Twin Cities

Miss Lillie Grace Matheson, field secretary of the national Women's Christian Temperance union, will arrive in Monroe Wednesday and will make a number of public appearances in Monroe, West Monroe and the parish Wednesday and Thursday, an official of the West Monroe W. C. T. U. said Saturday night.

In her first appearance in the Twin Cities, Miss Matheson will speak Wednesday night at the First Baptist church in Monroe. On the following night she will speak at the same hour at the First Methodist church in West Monroe. Special messages for the young people will be given at both of these meetings, it was announced. Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock the field secretary will address the Parent-Teacher association at Claiborne school.

Records kept by breeders of Hartz mountain canaries show some of the birds live to be 17 years old.

and made public later. They have precedent for such a course but it has been 30 years since it has been followed.

If the decision is not announced on Monday it will not be handed down until some time in February, since the court has scheduled a two weeks recess. Speculation has been stirred, however, that the momentuous answer may be forthcoming day after tomorrow.

The question up today was whether congress exceeded its powers in declaring worthless the clause found in most bonds and contracts guaranteeing payment in gold coin or its currency equivalent. An adverse ruling would give $100,000,000,000 of public and private bonds a value of 169,000,000,000 devaluated dollars.

Five days each week that the court is in session the nine sit in their silken robes behind the imposing mahogany bench of the courtroom and ceremoniously hear arguments on the cases which they must settle.

They enter in a stately procession, while attendants give each member an individual bow from the hips and the marshal intones the ancient formula which announces that the court is in session. But on Saturdays it is different.

Then they gather robeless in a large capitol chamber to exchange views on the cases which have been argued.

Chief Justice Hughes was the first to arrive today. Associate Justices Vandevanter and Butler, close friends and neighbors, came in together. The rest reached the consultation room singly. A negro messenger followed each with a bulky armload of records on the cases still to be decided.

state begins presentation of this testimony.

The state will submit to the jury of eight men and four women that Hauptmann, a carpenter with few jobs to keep him occupied in the depression period, managed to have an income of $49,960 between the times of the payment of the ransom, April 2, 1932, and the date of his arrest, September 19 last.

As it progresses through the devious business of revealing Hauptmann's brokerage transactions and the amount of his bank accounts, the prosecution will occasionally call witnesses to strengthen the state's contention Hauptmann was in the Hopewell area before and during the day of the kidnaping, March 1, 1932.

Federal Agents Edward Hill and William Frank and Assistant Attorney General Richard Stockton went over Hauptmann's bank and brokerage accounts in Trenton today. They eliminated 18 of the witnesses the state planned to call to testify to the Hauptmann accounts, and will produce only a certified public accountant and a federal agent.

The money angle of the case has been stressed from the beginning by Attorney General David T. Wilentz, chief of the prosecution staff. Hauptmann, he said in his opening to the jury on January 3, planned the kidnaping for money and collected the ransom alone.

He will show next week that Hauptmann bought a $400 radio shortly after the ransom collection date, that his wife, Anna, was able to make a trip to Germany in the summer of 1932, and that Hauptmann himself made frequent hunting trips. Moreover it was about that time, or a little later, the state will show, that Hauptmann opened his first brokerage account.

At the time of his arrest Hauptmann had a credit balance of $886 in his account with Steiner, Rouse and company, whose customer's man testified yesterday. Under his wife's maiden name, Anna Schoeffler, he had a credit balance of $5,017. In the Central Savings bank, New York, the Hauptmanns had a joint deposit account of $2,578. They held two mortgages, totalling $7,000, on houses in Brooklyn.

The state figures Hauptmann lost $7,000 in stock market speculations, and he made the assertion he loaned Isador Fisch, his German furrier friend, $7,500. Ransom money turned up before his arrest totalled more than $5,000 and when he was seized the authorities recovered $14,600, bringing the general total to $49,960.

The defense will try to offset the damaging effects of this evidence by showing that none of the ransom money turned up in Hauptmann's bank accounts or brokerage transactions. Reilly also has pointed out the carpenter and his wife were frugal in their habits and had sizeable bank accounts before the kidnaping.

The state will contend that Hauptmann changed ransom bills in small transactions and deposited numerous amounts of silver in the bank.

The so-called kidnap ladder, one of the most important pieces of evidence in the state's case, is still unaccepted as evidence by the court, though it has been marked for identification. The defense has objected to its admissibility on the grounds that its custody has not been clearly traced.

The state will call Arthur Koehler, federal forestry products expert, to trace the wood and to attempt to prove that Hauptmann made the ladder. The tools, found in his Bronx garage, including a plane, have been accepted as evidence and the state will try to show the plane was used in the ladder's construction.

Leila Roosevelt To Heed Lure Of African Jungle

20,000-Mile Trip Lies Ahead Of Attractive Cousin Of T. R.

(NEA Service Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Inspired by the wanderlust that she says is a family heritage, Leila Roosevelt, who last spring completed a trip around the world in a truck, will now emulate her illustrious cousin, the late Theodore Roosevelt, and set out to conquer African jungles, and the Sahara desert. Her cousin, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, entertained her at tea at the White House to wish her a safe journey.

Miss Roosevelt, who in private life is Mrs. Armand Denis, mother of four, including twins, will take her husband along with her this time to the Belgian Congo. On the truck expedition, Mrs. Denis was accompanied only by a woman friend.

Her preparations for taking off on a 20,000-mile trip that she expects will last a year and provide more thrills than the average 28-year-old girl knows in a lifetime, have been complicated by the fact that she has four children and at least a dozen pets to park somewhere.

The children—the oldest are twins, David and Armand, aged seven, the youngest, Heidi Ann, is two and a half—will board at the Connecticut school where their mother was educated. They will have their own cottage on the school grounds and a nurse to look after them. Also their grandmother will be only two miles away.

The pets, including two parakeets, a cockatoo, numerous cats, a kangaroo rat, three monkeys and a coati mundi, will be farmed out to zoos and friends.

Miss Roosevelt's personal baggage for her long trek, including 1,400 miles when she will be out of reach of all supplies, will be in one small suit case filled chiefly with riding clothes ("not shorts in the jungle," she comments. "Too many bugs and thorns!") She will also carry an evening dress, "just in case."

Miss Roosevelt is not so much interested in what she will wear, however, as she is in such equipment as vegetable peelers, a small sewing machine, cards of safety pins with which to bribe the natives and the small gasoline stove upon which meals will be cooked.

"I suppose I'll have to superintend all the cooking," she sighed, her brown eyes shadowed for a moment—usually everything about her glows with vitality and joy of living, teeth, skin, hair and eyes.

"I'm going to insist that the men take their turn, though. There'll be four others, besides my husband, including expert mechanics and a chauffeur loaned by the Belgian Charge d'Affaires at Washington who knows the Congo perfectly. Yes, I suppose I can get them to help with the cooking, but I expect I'll be the one who will have to sew on all the buttons and mend up all the rips. That's why I'm taking the machine. I may have to do the buttons by hand, but I am bound I won't sit in the middle of the Sahara patiently sewing up all the tears those men will get in their shirts.

"Am I scared?" Here her eyes resumed their sparkle. "I should say not! You see I'm going to take a camera and go all by myself from the Congo to Capetown, three thousand miles, altogether, taking animal pictures. Animals simply fascinate me and I hope to get some wonderful shots.

"I learned on that trip around the world that the worst hazards a woman alone has to fear are not from humans but from things like bridges that may give way with you. We broke three bridges on that trip of ours but we got across—just barely, though, a time or two. But we never were in any danger from humans. Once we camped right in the midst of a bunch of Persona bandits, too. They were perfectly polite and gave us gasoline. We heard next day that they'd just robbed and shot up some men, but they certainly treated us well."

Miss Roosevelt admits that she frightened her husband into taking her on this trip. It was when he refused to take her to Singapore two years ago that she organized an expedition of her own. This time he expects to keep an eye on her, at least as far as the Congo.

The Denis expedition will enter Africa through Morocco about 4,000 miles from its ultimate objective and will travel across the greater part of the continent by airplane and trucks equipped with inter-car radio communication facilities. Mr. Denis principal objective is the volcanic mountain range in Central Equatorial Africa which is the last known refuge of the mountain gorilla.

In conclusion Mrs. Jones sang "Have Thine Own Way Lord."

Rev. H. L. Johns, presiding elder of the Monroe district of the Methodist church, occupied the pulpit at the Methodist church here Sunday night and preached an inspiring sermon. At the close of the service he held the first quarterly conference of the year when reports were given of the various phases of the church work.

On Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Ware entertained most charmingly with a steak supper at the Community club complimentary to their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Chandler of Memphis. Following the delicious supper bridge games were enjoyed resulting in the high score prizes being won by Mrs. Chandler and Mr. L. J. Kathan. Those in attendance were Mr. and Mrs. Chandler, Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Yerger, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Dickinson, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Todd, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Buckner, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Mrs. Lawrence Yerger presided over the business session when plans for raising money were discussed. The hostess served delicious refreshments during the social period.

The circles of the Woman's Missionary union of the Baptist church met at the church on Monday afternoon with 40 members present. Following the opening rymn, "Fling Out the Banner," Mrs. J. L. Davis conducted the devotional using the 12th chapter of Romans. During the session plans were made for the association meeting to be held in Tallulah Jan. 23. The group then divided into the six circles when the various officers were elected.

The January meeting of the American Legion auxiliary was held at the Community club building on Tuesday afternoon with a large attendance. Mrs. R. T. Campbell presided. After the opening ritual and during the business session plans were made and committees appointed for the president's ball which will be sponsored by the auxiliary. Mrs. Colvin Todd, chairman of the Christmas seals sale reported $150 secured from this source, $100 of which is to remain in this parish for tubercular work.

The program on "Legislation" was under the direction of Mrs. A. L. Sevier who spoke on the "Four-Point Program of the Legion." Mrs. Henry Sevier spoke on the life of Andrew Jackson and Mrs. R. K. Boney on Robert E. Lee. Mrs. W. L. Rountree as a vocal number sang "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny." She was accompanied by Mrs. R. N. Ware. The hostesses, Mrs. A. L. Sevier and Mrs. Claude Searles, served delicious cake and coffee during the social hour.

The January meeting of the Tallulah Parent-Teacher association took place in the high school auditorium here with Mrs. Albert Bunch presiding and Miss Velma Colvin serving as secretary. INDUSTRIAL--REVIEW OF THE TWIN CITIES

NEW NASH HAS ALL-STEEL BODY

New Type Is One Of Strongest And Safest Ever Constructed

Of all-steel, one-piece construction, welded into a single steel unit, the 1935 Nash bodies are among the strongest and safest types ever developed for a motor car. New methods of bracing, the use of a solid steel floor which, when bolted to the chassis, gives the effect of two steel frames in one, and the new "steel-arch" construction principle results in the bodies having far greater strength and rigidity than was the case in former types of all-steel body construction.

Claimed for this type of construction is the final and complete elimination of body squeaks and rattles, plus greater safety due to the parabolic shape of the body itself. These were brought out during torsional and concussion tests conducted by Nash experimental engineers.

In the new Nash passengers literally ride completely enclosed and protected by sheet steel. The floor plates are strongly reinforced by three heavy cross members connecting the sturdy "u" type body sills which are also of steel construction. The first cross member is located at the forward edge of the front seat, the second just behind the front seat while the third is placed at the forward edge of the rear seat. The first two cross members are box-section girders, the other is an angle girder.

To further strengthen and reinforce the all-steel floor, ridges are stamped in the floor plates. This practice also eliminates "drumming" by breaking up the rhythm of vibrations.

Instead of resting directly upon the side members of the chassis frame, the steel body sills overhang the members thus giving a wider base for attaching the body to the frame with sixteen bolts, eight on a side.

The cowl, windshield pillars and the front roof crown panel are formed of one solid piece of heavy steel plate. A still heavier piece of steel, in the form of an arch, gives this front crown panel extra reinforcement by forming the inner panel of a steel box section. Both the outer and inner panels are welded to the side of the body, providing resistance to twisting strains at this point and resulting in greater safety and production in the event of a severe blow. The rounded surface at the front roof corners of the body also gives greater strength than the former sharp-cornered design.

Both front corner posts and center door posts are made entirely of welded steel in the shape of box-type girders resembling a square steel tube period at their base, these staunch, steel pillars are welded to the steel body sills; at the top, to the roof crown panels. The body roof is of tightly stretched, fine mesh, steel wire suported by cross beams and steel corner plates.

The all-steel doors are really two doors in one. They consist of two separate, heavy gauge, steel stampings, an inner and an outer panel, welded together to form a steel box. This construction makes the doors unusually rigid, eliminates the possibilities of their sagging even under heavy loads. The edge to which the hinges are fastened is reinforced with a heavy bridge type girder running from top to bottom. To prevent "drumming" the inner panel of the door is stamped in ridges. Nash Aeroform bodies are completely and scientifically soundproofed and insulated against heat, cold and noise. The steel floor has 4 layers of insulation as follows: On the under, or road, side it is sprayed with asphaltum compound. On the upper side a layer of Curzy pad is cemented, a layer of silencing material on that and finally the floor carpet. All body panels and doors are also sprayed with an asphaltum compound, while dash, toe-board and cowl sides are insulated with heavy wool fiber packing.

PLYMOUTH MEETS 1935 CONDITIONS

New Model Is Termed Revolutionary High-Speed Safety Car

Walter P. Chrysler termed the 1935 Plymouths as "revolutionary new-type high-speed safety cars, expressly designed to meet modern traffic conditions." The cars are on display at the Monroe Automobile Supply company.

Introduced in six beautiful body types the new Plymouths, streamlined in design, have added engineering developments which today more than ever before gives emphasis to its claim of being "America's best engineered low price car."

To quickly catalog the outstanding features of the new car—the 1935 Plymouth has an 82 horsepower engine with a compression ratio of 6.7 to 1; a torpedo-type all-steel safety body; syncro-silent transmission; a new "ride" achieved by a redistribution of weight, plus a new front spring assembly, "Floating Power" engine mountings and hydraulic brakes.

Mr. Chrysler, in announcing the new Plymouth, said that it was created to satisfy a critical need in America at the present time for safer transportation.

Chrysler motors engineers, pioneers in the development of such safety features as the all-steel body, hydraulic brakes and new principles of weight distribution, have perfected these safety factors in the new Plymouth.

The all-steel body of the 1935 Plymouth fits down over the double-drop X-type frame. The body and frame are bolted together at 46 different points. Thus, the frame becomes a unit of the body along with the all-steel floor, side panels, center posts and other members. This design also permitted the engineers to build more room in the bodies. Plymouth seats are wider. The floor has been lowered 3 1-4 inches, providing a lower center of gravity and more leg and head room for the passengers.

The Plymouth engine, "cushioned" in Floating Power rubber mountings, has been moved forward over the front axle to slow down the action of the front springs and make more room for the larger body. Plymouth passengers ride between the front and rear axles, entirely surrounded by protecting walls of steel.

With the engine over the front axle and the body moved forward and fitted onto the frame, the entire weight of the car has been re-distributed to create an entirely new kind of ride. To further improve the ride, the engineers have developed a new type of springs, double-action shock absorbers, and a sway eliminator.

Plymouth's hydraulic brakes have been improved this year by changing the size of the wheel cylinder pistons so that the pistons operating on the rear shoes of each wheel are larger than the piston actuating the front shoe. This equalizes the wear on the facings and provides much longer life to these parts. The new Plymouth has centrifuse brake drums that combine the light weight and strength of steel with the ideal braking characteristics of cast iron.

The new Plymouth engine, with its unusually high compression ratio, includes three major engineering refinements to keep engine temperatures down and reduce gasoline and oil consumption.

The three major refinements are—full-length water jackets, directional water circulation and calibrated ignition. Water jackets completely cool the engine cylinder bores from top to bottom. Previously, the water jackets extended only along the upper half of the cylinder bores. The new directional water circulation system supplies water direct to each cylinder and exhaust valve seat, the hottest parts of the engine, by means of a tube inserted through the engine block. Calibrated ignition is a new method of spark control that utilizes the vacuum in the intake manifold and assures maximum engine efficiency under all conditions without spark knock, and using only ordinary fuel.

In the design of the new Plymouth, the engineers have applied their extensive study of aerodynamics. The Plymouth is streamlined to resist wind pressure in front and wind "drag" in the rear. The streamlined radiator, new headlamps and the general treatment of new front and styling—all combine to eliminate wind traps and flat surfaces. Authentic air-stream lines flow symmetrically back over the entire body structure to the tapering rear deck.

AUTOMOBILE FIRE

Firemen were called late Saturday afternoon to the 500 block of South Grand street to extinguish an automobile fire said to have been caused by operation of the automobile with the emergency brake in use. The damage was confined to the brake lining, it was stated. H. J. Fernandez is the owner of the car.

State biologists estimated 200 rattlesnakes as well as 90 to 95 per cent of the prairie dog population, died in Bailey county, Texas, in a program of spreading poisoned grain.

NEW "HIGH-SPEED SAFETY" PLYMOUTH

The 1935 Plymouth, announced as a "high-speed safety car", is on display here. Streamlined in design, the new Plymouth is three inches longer than previous models—189 inches from bumper to bumper. The torpedo-shaped all-steel body is bolted to the frame horizontally and vertically at 46 different points, instead of the usual 18. The six-cylinder high compression engine develops 82 horsepower and runs as cool at 80 miles an hour as previous engines did at 50 miles an hour. Inset shows the striking beauty of the new Plymouth front end.

TWIN CITY SHOWS NEW OLDSMOBILE

Strikingly Styled Models Placed On Display On South Grand

Featured by larger and roomier bodies, the new "turret" all-steel top, further advances in streamline treatment and a number of mechanical improvements, the new Oldsmobile sixes and straight eights are being presented at the Twin City Motor Co., 1700 South Grand street.

The principal improvements announced are: The solid steel "turret-top" body by Fisher, having as an integral part a roof stamped from a solid sheet of seamless steel. The body has steel protection for the passengers on all sides, top and bottom.

A streamline design in which the entire car slopes gracefully from the new radiator, back over the slanting windshield, rounded top and to the rear bumper in one sweeping line, accentuated by the single piece streamline fenders.

An A-type frame, 40 per cent stronger and more rigid than those of previous models. A boxed-in section has been added at the rear of the frame, the holes in the X-member eliminated as far as possible, and two fore and aft straddle bars are used over the gas tank as compared to the single bar of 1934.

A complete system of sound-proofing of chassis, engine and body. Roomier interiors with ample head and leg space, widened seats and smart new fittings. Huge luggage compartments.

Redistribution of weight to permit all passengers to ride between the axles, thus adding to comfort. This is done by moving the motor and the seats about five inches forward from the 1934 position. Longer wheelbase on both cars.

Increased power achieved largely through the use of an entirely new design cylinder head which gives a high compression ratio and still permits the use of standard fuel.

More economical operation because of improvements in the manifolding system and carburetor. Proving ground tests of the six have registered 18 miles to the gallon of gas at 50 miles an hour.

Retained for 1935 will be all the well-known Oldsmobile features of 1934. Principal among them are: Super-hydraulic self-energizing brakes with braking area increased by 14 per cent and longer life for the lining assured. The self-energizing feature employs the momentum of the car to increase the stopping power.

Knee-action wheels of the coil-spring tye used on the higher-priced cars. With this construction, employed and proved successful by Oldsmobile in 1934, the front wheels move up and down independently of each other, mounted on the chassis by strong upper and lower control arms.

The new body introduces for the first time in modern automobile manufacturing the all-steel roof, serving three purposes: First, the roof provides an extra margin of safety, heretofore unavailable in any car. Second, it adds greatly to the structural strength of the entire body. And third, it permits of beauty of fine never before possible when the roof was covered with fabric material.

The designers have obtained scientific streamlining which enhances beauty. The front is completely new, with narrow and higher radiator grilles, new radiator ornaments, new fenders and restyled hood louvers.

Headlamps are mounted on the radiator shell instead of on the fender hood ledge. Running boards are entirely separate from the fenders and are mounted on three steel supports instead of the customary two. The spare tire no longer is mounted outside but is concealed in the new spacious luggage compartment in the rear of the car. Luggage space is now provided in standard models, and models with built-in trunks now have extra large carrying capacity.

The interiors of the new Oldsmobiles are smart and modern. The instrument panel, built of steel and integral with the body, is given a modern treatment. Provision is made for the installation of a radio dial as part of the panel.

The new Oldsmobiles are roomier in every respect, with the front seat of the six more than three inches wider than that of the eight of 1934. There is increased head and leg room. The cars are easier of access because of larger doors both front and rear.

Both six and eight will have seven body models. They are the business coupe, sport coupe, five-passenger coupe with built-in trunk, convertible coupe, sedan and touring sedan with built-in trunk.

W. C. T. U. Field Officer Will Talk In Twin Cities

Miss Lillie Grace Matheson, field secretary of the national Women's Christian Temperance union, will arrive in Monroe Wednesday and will make a number of public appearances in Monroe, West Monroe and the parish Wednesday and Thursday, an official of the West Monroe W. C. T. U. said Saturday night.

In her first appearance in the Twin Cities, Miss Matheson will speak Wednesday night at the First Baptist church in Monroe. On the following night she will speak at the same hour at the First Methodist church in West Monroe. Special messages for the young people will be given at both of these meetings, it was announced. Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock the field secretary will address the Parent-Teacher association at Claiborne school.

Records kept by breeders of Hartz mountain canaries show some of the birds live to be 17 years old.

Cotton

New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 19.—(AP)—The cotton market opened quiet today but became more active in the last trading, closing the day with a rally that carried December to a six-point net gain.

After starting 4 to 6 points up, the market gradually eased off on week-end liquidation and some selling on fears that the supreme court would decide the gold case Monday.

Late in the session March traded down to 12.38, May to 12.46, July to 12.47 and Oct. to 12.36, or 8 points down from the opening highs.

The market rallied moderately at the end of shorts covering, regaining 4 to 5 points of the earlier loss and closed steady net unchanged to six points up, December showing the greatest gain.

Exports for the day were 6,691.

Cotton futures closed steady net unchanged to 6 points up.

New York Stocks

By Victor Eubank

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Improvement in steel issues, together with further demand for scattered preferred equities, gave the stock market a fairly cheerful tone in today's brief session. Dealings were quiet, however, and many of the so-called leaders continued narrow. The close was steady. Transfers approximated 370,000 shares.

A decided lift to sentiment was given by the latest estimates of steel mill operations at Youngstown where the operating rate for next week was placed at 64 per cent of capacity, a jump of four points over the previous week and the sharpest January upswing on record for that district.

Improvement in business throughout the steel industry was generally attributed to increased demand from automobile manufacturers, producers of farm equipment, sanitary ware makers and metal furniture and refrigerator plants. Railway inquiries were also expected to expand in the near future.

While restrained optimism was the rule in most board rooms, some brokers pointed out that market leadership was lacking, so far as the old-line stocks are concerned, and, until better support appeared for other than the preferred and specialty groups, it was probable that trading caution would not be entirely abandoned.

Although the gold clause controversy seemed to be less of a market factor than at any time since it came before the supreme court, many potential equity accumulators were inclined to hold aloof pending a decision on this important case.

Grains were a little better, but cotton was again somewhat reactionary. Firmness of rail loans helped the bond list, although prime investments and U. S. government securities held their own without any great difficulty. Foreign exchanges were quiet.

Otis Steel preferred shares got up 5 points, Colorado Fuel & Iron preferred advanced 4 and others, up 1 to around 2, included preference stocks of Republic Steel, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem and Mullins Manufacturing.

Among gainers of fractions to about a point were U. S. Steel and Bethlehem common, Colorado Fuel & Iron common, American Rolling Mill, Otis Steel common, Caterpillar Tractor, Case, Deere, Du Pont, United Corp. preferred, Santa Fe and N. Y. Central.

Such issues as American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Union Pacific, North American, Western Union, U. S. Smelting, American Smelting, Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck recorded only small variations. The Radio Corp. group eased under profit taking after the spurt of yesterday.

Sugar

NEW YORK, Jan 19.—(AP)—Raw sugar was unchanged today. Although no sales were confirmed, it was revealed that late yesterday a local refiner bought 34,200 bags of Puerto Rican for February arrival at 2.80, and an outport refiner 30,000 bags of Cuban for March shipment at 2.79. The former represented an advance of 3 points, and there appeared to be nothing available today below that level. While some holders were asking slightly higher.

Price changes in futures were narrow and after opening from 1 point higher to 1 point lower, prices eased slightly under increased liquidation and selling by producing interests. The market closed unchanged to 2 points lower in the old contract and unchanged to 1 lower in the new. Sales were 10,600 tons in each contract, including considerable exchanging between months. In the No. 1 contract March sold off from 1.88 to 1.87, May from 1.93 to 1.92 and July 1.97 to 1.96, with final prices at the lower levels.

Refined was quiet and unchanged at 4.30 for fine granulated.

Sugar futures closed barely steady, unchanged to 2 lower. Sales 10,600 tons. Jan 1.82b; March 1.87, May 1.92, July 1.98b; Sept 2.00b; Dec 2.07b.

Cotton

New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 19.—(AP)—The cotton market opened quiet today but became more active in the last trading, closing the day with a rally that carried December to a six-point net gain.

After starting 4 to 6 points up, the market gradually eased off on week-end liquidation and some selling on fears that the supreme court would decide the gold case Monday.

Late in the session March traded down to 12.38, May to 12.46, July to 12.47 and Oct. to 12.36, or 8 points down from the opening highs.

The market rallied moderately at the end of shorts covering, regaining 4 to 5 points of the earlier loss and closed steady net unchanged to six points up, December showing the greatest gain.

Exports for the day were 6,691.

Cotton futures closed steady net unchanged to 6 points up.

By Victor Eubank

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Improvement in steel issues, together with further demand for scattered preferred equities, gave the stock market a fairly cheerful tone in today's brief session. Dealings were quiet, however, and many of the so-called leaders continued narrow. The close was steady. Transfers approximated 370,000 shares.

A decided lift to sentiment was given by the latest estimates of steel mill operations at Youngstown where the operating rate for next week was placed at 64 per cent of capacity, a jump of four points over the previous week and the sharpest January upswing on record for that district.

Improvement in business throughout the steel industry was generally attributed to increased demand from automobile manufacturers, producers of farm equipment, sanitary ware makers and metal furniture and refrigerator plants. Railway inquiries were also expected to expand in the near future.

While restrained optimism was the rule in most board rooms, some brokers pointed out that market leadership was lacking, so far as the old-line stocks are concerned, and, until better support appeared for other than the preferred and specialty groups, it was probable that trading caution would not be entirely abandoned.

Although the gold clause controversy seemed to be less of a market factor than at any time since it came before the supreme court, many potential equity accumulators were inclined to hold aloof pending a decision on this important case.

Grains were a little better, but cotton was again somewhat reactionary. Firmness of rail loans helped the bond list, although prime investments and U. S. government securities held their own without any great difficulty. Foreign exchanges were quiet.

Otis Steel preferred shares got up 5 points, Colorado Fuel & Iron preferred advanced 4 and others, up 1 to around 2, included preference stocks of Republic Steel, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem and Mullins Manufacturing.

Among gainers of fractions to about a point were U. S. Steel and Bethlehem common, Colorado Fuel & Iron common, American Rolling Mill, Otis Steel common, Caterpillar Tractor, Case, Deere, Du Pont, United Corp. preferred, Santa Fe and N. Y. Central.

Such issues as American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Union Pacific, North American, Western Union, U. S. Smelting, American Smelting, Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck recorded only small variations. The Radio Corp. group eased under profit taking after the spurt of yesterday.

Sugar

NEW YORK, Jan 19.—(AP)—Raw sugar was unchanged today. Although no sales were confirmed, it was revealed that late yesterday a local refiner bought 34,200 bags of Puerto Rican for February arrival at 2.80, and an outport refiner 30,000 bags of Cuban for March shipment at 2.79. The former represented an advance of 3 points, and there appeared to be nothing available today below that level. While some holders were asking slightly higher.

Price changes in futures were narrow and after opening from 1 point higher to 1 point lower, prices eased slightly under increased liquidation and selling by producing interests. The market closed unchanged to 2 points lower in the old contract and unchanged to 1 lower in the new. Sales were 10,600 tons in each contract, including considerable exchanging between months. In the No. 1 contract March sold off from 1.88 to 1.87, May from 1.93 to 1.92 and July 1.97 to 1.96, with final prices at the lower levels.

Refined was quiet and unchanged at 4:30 for fine granulated.

Sugar futures closed barely steady, unchanged to 2 lower. Sales 10,600 tons. Jan. 1.82n; March 1.87; May 1.92; July 1.98b; Sept. 2.00b; Dec. 2.07b.

PAVED HIGHWAY TO BE FINISHED

Tugwell Says Shreveport-Orleans Road To Be Completed

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 19.—(AP)—The completion of the concrete highway between New Orleans and Shreveport, and additional paving to finish all but about 22 miles of the Evangeline trans-state hardsurfaced highway were announced today by Chairman A. P. Tugwell of the Louisiana Highway commission as major objectives of the commission's $10,000,000 road program for 1935.

The highway chairman announced about 90 projects in all hed been outlined for 1935 completion.

Unpaved links in the New Orleans-Shreveport highway, about 24 miles from near Krotz Springs to Lebeau, and several miles between Shrewsbury and Kenner, are to be closed, Tugwell said, and concreting on the Evangeline highway will be extended to finish all but about a score of miles mostly west of Kinder.

The 1935 program also calls for concreting of 13.5 miles in Caddo parish south from the Arkansas line on U. S. highway 71.

The 1935 program, the highway chairman said, has been divided into the following major classes:

A $3,000,000 state road bond program from proceeds of the bonds from the $75,000,000 authorized issue.

A $3,500,000 program, half from regular federal aid and half from current highway commission revenues.

A $3,000,000 emergency PWA program.

Caddo—3 miles between Mira and Hosston, $96,000.

Natchitoches—6.3 miles concrete between Natchitoches and Natchez, $200,000; 6.3 miles concrete between Cypress and Montrose, $200,000; 2.7 miles grading and drainage structures between Montrose and Cloutierville, $50,000.

Mrs. Mary Titus Heads Millinery Department

I. W. Jaffe, manager of the Ruth Shops, 121 DeSiard street, announces the appointment of Mrs. Mary Titus as manager of the millinery department. Mrs. Titus is well known in Monroe and northeast Louisiana. For the last two years she had been with the millinery department of Fields' and prior to that was with the Gross Millinery and Palais Royal.

"It appears," said Mrs. Titus, "that 1935 will be a great millinery year. The great enthusiasm of hat manufacturers is a forerunner of greater creativeness. Designers are endorsing hats that are more glamorous, full of frills and dressier. Blockmakers are presenting sloping crowns, shallow, squatty crowns, slashed brims, sport crowns, bonnet shapes with pleated brims, off face and turban brims. Great activity is forecast in the use of new weaves of fabricized straws, crepes in its various designs, cellophane cloth and bandings, taffetas and petersham. Hat bodies will feature the use of sisols and a greater varieties of rough straws than heretofore. Nose veils, flowers, shiny ribbons, cire quills, feather fancies, fluted ribbon cockades and jeweled ornaments are the accessories that will adorn the early spring hats.

"All of this," continued Mrs. Titus, "spells for diversification, the like of which has never been viewed before, and should make 1935 a wonderful millinery year."

Automobile Collision Occurs On Grand Street

Automobiles driven by Mrs. R. W. Irby, of 113 Egan street, and Miss Robertine Rhymes, of Girard, were in a collision Saturday afternoon on South Grand street at the Carolina street intersection. Mrs. Irby, her husband and little daughter suffered bruises and sprains.

Reports of the accident made to police by the drivers said Mrs. Irby was driving north on South Grand and Miss Rhymes was driving south on the street at the time of the accident. Miss Rhymes reported she looked backward a moment before the accident, to see if other cars were behind her as she turned into Carolina street, and that she failed to see the Irby car coming from the opposite direction.

The drivers are to appear in city court Monday afternoon. Each was booked on a technical charge of reckless driving.

H. S. Gilbert Not Man Arrested For Attack

A news story in the Morning World Friday, erroneously stated H. S. Gilbert had been arrested on a charge of disturbing the peace on the Millhaven road and assaulting and beating James Brooks. Gilbert swore out the warrant in the case, and L. L. Thorn was the man arrested on the charge of attacking Brooks.

The story also erroneously stated Buster Crosby, negro, charged with possession of liquor on which a state tax had not been paid, had been arrested by the sheriff's department. Crosby was arrested by West Monroe police. His address was given as 603 Adams street.

Thorn was released under bond of $150 for the charge of disturbing the peace, and bond of $300 for the assault charge.

Tugwell Says Shreveport-Orleans Road To Be Completed

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 19.—(AP)—The completion of the concrete highway between New Orleans and Shreveport, and additional paving to finish all but about 22 miles of the Evangeline trans-state hardsurfaced highway were announced today by Chairman A. P. Tugwell of the Louisiana Highway commission as major objectives of the commission's $10,000,000 road program for 1935.

The highway chairman announced about 90 projects in all had been outlined for 1935 completion.

Unpaved links in the New Orleans-Shreveport highway, about 24 miles from near Krotz Springs to Lebeau, and several miles between Shrewsbury and Kenner, are to be closed, Tugwell said, and concreting on the Evangeline highway will be extended to finish all but about a score of miles mostly west of Kinder.

The 1935 program also calls for concreting of 13.5 miles in Caddo parish south from the Arkansas line on U. S. highway 71.

The 1935 program, the highway chairman said, has been divided into the following major classes:

A $3,000,000 state road bond program from proceeds of the bonds from the $75,000,000 authorized issue.

A $3,500,000 program, half from regular federal aid and half from current highway commission revenues.

A $3,000,000 emergency PWA program.

Projects covered by the first class include:

Caddo—3 miles between Mira and Hosston, $36,000.

Natchitoches—6.3 miles concrete between Natchitoches and Natchez, $200,000; 6.3 miles concrete between Cypress and Montrose, $200,000; 2.7 miles grading and drainage structures between Montrose and Cloutierville, $50,000.

Ouachita—2.6 miles pavement between West Monroe and Brown paper mill, $83,200 (bids to be received February 13).

Ouachita—2.3 miles concrete on east approaches to Monroe bridge.

Definite plans are being completed to make the forthcoming meeting of utmost benefit to all who attend. There will not only be a schedule of interesting speakers and a discussion of the nature and background of production credit, but a barbecue will follow the business meeting. As features of the program, addresses will be given by Jesse B. Hearin, president of the Production Credit corporation of New Orleans, N. C. Williamson, director of the farm credit administration, J. W. Bateman, director of extension, state of Louisiana, and Fred Williamson, editor of the Monroe Morning World.

The Tallulah Production Credit association serves the ten parishes of northeast Louisiana.

Mr. Hamley, the chairman of the meeting, is a prominent planter of East Carroll parish, and is well known over the entire state.

Mrs. Mary Titus Heads Millinery Department

I. W. Jaffe, manager of the Ruth Shops, 121 DeSiard street, announces the appointment of Mrs. Mary Titus as manager of the millinery department. Mrs. Titus is well known in Monroe and northeast Louisiana. For the last two years she had been with the millinery department of Fields' and prior to that was with the Gross Millinery and Palais Royal.

"It appears," said Mrs. Titus, "that 1935 will be a great millinery year. The great enthusiasm of hat manufacturers is a forerunner of greater creativeness. Designers are endorsing hats that are more glamorous, full of frills and dressier. Blockmakers are presenting sloping crowns, shallow, squatty crowns, slashed brims, sport crowns, bonnet shapes with pleated brims, off face and turban brims. Great activity is forecast in the use of new weaves of fabricized straws, crepes in its various designs, cellophane cloth and bandings, taffetas and petersham. Hat bodies will feature the use of sisols and a greater varieties of rough straws than heretofore. Nose veils, flowers, shiny ribbons, cire quills, feather fancies, fluted ribbon cockades and jeweled ornaments are the accessories that will adorn the early spring hats.

"All of this," continued Mrs. Titus, "spells for diversification, the like of which has never been viewed before, and should make 1935 a wonderful millinery year."

Automobile Collision Occurs On Grand Street

Automobiles driven by Mrs. R. W. Irby, of 113 Egan street, and Miss Robertine Rhymes, of Girard, were in a collision Saturday afternoon on South Grand street at the Carolina street intersection. Mrs. Irby, her husband and little daughter suffered bruises and sprains.

Reports of the accident made to police by the drivers said Mrs. Irby was driving north on South Grand and Miss Rhymes was driving south on the street at the time of the accident. Miss Rhymes reported she looked backward a moment before the accident, to see if other cars were behind her as she turned into Carolina street, and that she failed to see the Irby car coming from the opposite direction.

The drivers are to appear in city court Monday afternoon. Each was booked on a technical charge of reckless driving.

H. S. Gilbert Not Man Arrested For Attack

A news story in the Morning World Friday, erroneously stated H. S. Gilbert had been arrested on a charge of disturbing the peace on the Millhaven road and assaulting and beating James Brooks. Gilbert swore out the warrant in the case, and L. L. Thorn was the man arrested on the charge of attacking Brooks.

The story also erroneously stated Buster Crosby, negro, charged with possession of liquor on which a state tax had not been paid, had been arrested by the sheriff's department. Crosby was arrested by West Monroe police. His address was given as 603 Adams street.

Thorn was released under bond of $150 for the charge of disturbing the peace, and bond of $200 for the assault charge.

PRIEST TO END SERVICES TODAY

Masses In Observance Of 40 Hours Of Devotion Will Be Held

Concluding services of the 40 hours of devotion being conducted by Rev. Peter Larkin, priest of the eastern province of the Congregation of Mary Immaculate, will be held at St. Matthew's church here today, after having been started Friday. Father Larkin is conducting a series of missions in north Louisiana, having come to Louisiana, along with two other priests, on the invitation of Most Rev. Daniel F. Desmond, bishop of the Alexandria diocese.

Masses in observance of the 40 hours of devotion will be held at the church this morning at 6:30, 8 and 9:30 o'clock and closing exercises will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon. A sermon and benediction were held Saturday night, beginning at 7:30.

On leaving here Father Larkin will go to Bastrop, where he will open a mission tonight at 7:30. He will remain there through Wednesday morning and will go to Rayville Wednesday night, opening his mission there at 7:30 p.m. This will be the last place at which he will hold a mission during the present series.

Rev. T. F. O'Brien, who, with Rev. Larkin, arrived in the diocese on December 13, will complete his series of missions next Sunday at Vidalia. Rev. R. J. Smit, who came to the diocese on December 21, has been conducting a series of French missions in south Louisiana. He is scheduled to finish his program with a triduum in the cathedral at Alexandria, to begin December 27.

During his stay here Father Larkin was incapacitated to a certain extent by a leg hemorrhage he suffered Thursday night. A blood vessel in his leg burst, making it necessary for him to be treated at St. Francis sanitarium. He is expected to be practically recovered within the next few days.

Adcock Will Attend Labor Meeting Held By Cabinet Member

W. S. Adcock, president of the Central Trades Labor council of the Twin Cities, left Saturday morning for Nashville, Tenn., to attend a conference being held by Frances Perkins, secretary of labor, with labor representatives from all over the south. The conference will open today and continue through Monday.

At a meeting of the labor council here Friday night, Mr. Adcock was elected as the official delegate to the conference from the local unit.

A south-wide labor program is scheduled to be formulated at the meeting, which will open with registration at 8 a.m. Sunday, with the first conference to begin an hour later.

The local organization selected a delegate to the conference following a telegram from E. H. Williams, president of the State Federation of Labor, in which he urged that a delegate be sent. Mr. Williams said he was acting on a request from William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. Arrangements for reservations were made by the American Federation of Labor.

RECOGNIZING ACHILLES' ARMOR AND BELIEVING THAT THE DREADED GREEK CHAMPION WAS FACING THEM, THE TROJANS FALTERED. BUT SOON THEY DISCOVERED THE DECEPTION AND ATTACKED FIERCELY. THE IMPETUOUS PATROCLUS FOUND HIMSELF SURROUNDED BY THE ENEMY.

PATROCLUS DEFENDED HIMSELF VALIANTLY, BUT WAS SLAIN BY HECTOR, THE BROTHER OF PARIS. HECTOR STRIPPED ACHILLES' ARMOR FROM THE FALLEN PATROCLUS AND CARRIED IT OFF AS A TROPHY.

And Down From the Sky Fluttered the Dainty Silk Undies

Capt. William Webb; He Rescued the Fluffy Undies From a Watery Grave—But Was His Face Red!

Rain, Sleet, Hail, Snow, Even Lava Dust had Pattered Down on the Deck of the Good Ship "Mabjerda", But Never, Never, Anything Like These.

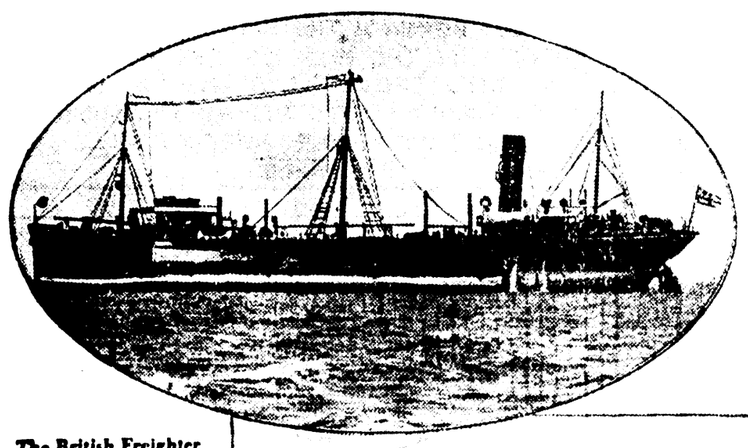
THE "Shanno"—(English Channel to everyone but veteran British salts) was choppy this late fall evening, and Captain William Webb, doughty master of the freighter "Mabjerda," remained on the bridge to guide his vessel into the Channel on its way to the harbor of Hull.

It had been a stormy voyage from Africa and the heavy cargo of iron ore made the Mabjerda clumsy and unwieldy. She seemed to the handsome young skipper more like a coal barge than the sleek greyhound of the sea which he prized so highly. And because his ship "wasn't herself," he had a premonition that "something was going to happen."

As usual, the Channel was fairly alive with shipping. Running lights of passing boats blinked gayly on all sides. Captain Webb had sent Jamie Peters, his most trusted mate, aloft to the "Crow's Nest," to double the watch there. This was a precaution frequently taken by crafty mariners sailing up the Channel after sundown.

"It isn't that we won't make it," Captain Webb reassured himself, "but a young fellow who wants to get along in the shipping business can't afford to take any chances. I'll put-her-in to Hull myself, by Gar, and then I'll know things will go right."

Two hours e..ier, when the young master had climbed the short ladder which led to the bridge, a murky darkness had already settled over the ship.



The British Freighter "Mabjerda," Which Was Brought to a Dead Halt in a Choppy Sea When the Lace Trimmed Garments Dropped Out of the Heavens.

His first order had been to switch on the giant spotlight, and now two members of the crew were methodically picking out in bold relief the outlines of the passing vessels. Captain Webb watched the light play across the choppy waves and for some reason it made him drowsy. He had just stifled a yawn when the buzzer from the "Crow's Nest" snapped him to quick attention.

Almost immediately, the booming voice of Jamie Peters rang out:

"Something aloft, Cap'in," he shouted. "Would you send the light up here?"

A muttered order from the skipper and the spot began ascending, by quick jerks, and then swept through the sky.

"To starb'rd," came from the "Crow's Nest."

Then, suddenly, the spot picked out two objects floating gently downward. The crew of the "Mabjerda" were too stunned to speak. All stood gazing upward, in open-mouthed amazement — all but the wheelsman, who kept his eyes strictly ahead.

Now—there is nothing more startling, miles at sea, than something floating down from the skies! Rain, hail, snow, gulls, lightning and perhaps once in a life-time a meteor, might be expected to hurtle out from the heavens. But anything else—preposterous!

"Humph—a gull!" Captain Webb decided. But no! It wasn't a gull! What was it?

Without hesitation, Captain Webb jerked the engine-room signal—"Full Speed Astern!" The "Mabjerda" rolled and groaned. Almost instantly the master regretted his order. What if he broke a shaft—would the strain be too great on the giant driving rod which turned the propellers?

Later, and in private, Captain Webb admitted that, at the moment, he had visions of life at stake! He must save the falling objects at all costs!

It was a crucial moment. Would the "Mabjerda's" mechanism withstand the shock? She groaned and wallowed—and stopped! "Stand-By" flashed the signal to the engineer. The "Mabjerda" began to list in the wind, and just at that instant the falling objects fluttered to the deck.

Captain Webb signaled "Full Speed Ahead," and strode onto the deck. He stooped and picked up—some fluffy, silky, lacey women's undies!

And that was the way Captain William Webb became famous!

The story leaked out a few hours later when he had safely docked at Hull—and the next day the London newspapers were full of the mystery of the undies from the skies. Everyone chuckled and made jokes, of course, but still it WAS a mystery where they came from. Captain Webb, laying over in Hull for several days, determined to find out.

Artist's Drawing of the Unusual Scene Aboard the Ore-Loaded Ship at the Crucial Moment of the Silken Shower. The Young Captain Maneuvered His Ship to Bring It to a Sudden Stop and Save the Flimsy Garments.

First of all, he investigated the theory that perhaps the undies had been hanging on a wash line and were plucked off and carried away by a sea gull.

The silk was freshly laundered, new and unwrinkled, just as if they had been lifted out of the display window of a fashionable Fifth Avenue shop. In fact, the garments were too clean to have been carried so far by a bird. Even had a gull carried them aloft, it was not likely it would have taken them so far out across the Channel—and it wouldn't have dropped them both at the same time.

So that theory was discarded. Obviously, the flimsy garments were not carried so far by the wind. So—where did they come from! Captain Webb gave up, and so did everyone else.

However, the young seaman later became convinced that the garments must have dropped from an airplane, flying high up in the clouds from England to the Continent. And that seems to be the only explanation.

He became doubly sure of this when he learned that in England, as in America, it had been the practice of some air lines to conduct fashion shows in their planes, as an added attraction for voyagers bound for the vacation spots in Southern France.

It would be quite possible for a model, exhibiting undies, to have seen them whip out of a ventilating shaft in the small cubby-hole aft in the plane, where the young ladies change costumes in these high flying fashion shows.

Perhaps that is the true explanation, and perhaps it isn't—but it will have to do. And there is one thing more.

The incident took on supernatural aspects just before Captain Webb left Hull, when his bride of less than a year returned from a small town in Scotland where she had been visiting relatives.

She had written her husband, when she had seen the stories of his "rescue" in the newspapers, that on the very day the mysterious garments had fluttered down upon his ship, she had lost several pieces of silken finery!

Captain Webb gave the letter no more than passing attention, but when his bride arrived she again told him of the incident, and asked to see the garments he had found. They proved to be almost identical with the undies she had lost, and at first Mrs. Webb insisted that they were the same garments.

They and their friends were mystified and had they been superstitious, they probably would have visited a medium in an attempt to find an interpretation of the apparent phenomenon. In fact, several of their friends urged that they do that, but at the last moment Mrs. Webb discovered that the garments were not the same size as the ones she had lost.

Captain Webb advertised for the owner of the sea-blown undies but without any results and is considering presenting them to the owners of his ship. They may be placed in a glass enclosed case for display in the concern's office lobby. A handsomely engraved plate will duly record that they were "Sea-Going Undies, Saved at Sea by Captain William Webb."

The story has been kept alive in many of the English newspapers, and if this final disposal is made of the garments, it is likely that it will receive fully as much attention as the original "rescue." More than 30 British newspapermen were assigned to "cover" Captain Webb's activities at Hull and many of them still were running down clues, after several weeks.

Meanwhile, the young captain is on his way back to Africa to supervise the loading of another cargo of heavy, clumsy and strictly unromantic iron ore.
